The if. Chapter.

ND now (o ye prestes) this commaundement toucheth you: yf ye will not heare it, ner regarde it, to geue the glory vnto my name (sayeth the LORDE off, hoostes) " I wil sende a curse vpon you, g will curse youre blessinges: yee curse them will I yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I shal corruppe youre sede, and cast donge in youre faces: euen the donge of youre solempne feastes, and it shal cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I have sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stonde, sayeth § LORDE of hoostes.

I made a couenaunt of life and peace with him: this I gaue him, that he might stonde in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ad had my name in reuerence. The lawe of trenth was in his mouth, and there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace ad equyte, ' and dyd turne many one awaye from their synnes. For the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowlege, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the LORDE of hoostes.

But the LORDE shal destroye the ma that doth this (yee both the master g the scolar) out off the tabernacle of Iacob, with him that offreth vp meatofferynge vnto the LORDE off hoostes. Now haue ye brought it to this poynte agayne, that the aulter of the LORDE is couered with teares, wepynge and mournynge: so that I will nomore regarde the meatofferynge, nether wil I receaue or accepte eny thinge at youre hodes.

And yet ye saye: wherfore? Eucn because  $\mathbf{I}$ that where as the LORDE made a couenaut betwixte y and the wife off thy youth, thou hast despysed her: Yet is she thyne owne copanyon and maried wife.

THESE bokes (good reader) which be called Apocrypha, are not iudged amonge the doctours to be of like reputacion with the other scripture, as thou mayest perceaue by S. Jerome in epistola ad Paulinum. And the chefe cause therof is this: there be many places in them, that seme to be repugnaunt vnto the open and manyfest trueth in the other bokes of the byble. Neuertheles I have not gathered them together to the intent that I wolde have them despysed, or litle sett by, or that I shulde thinke them false, for I am not able to proue it: Yee I doute not verely, yf they were equally conferred with the other open scripture (tyme, place, and circumstaunce in all thinges considered) they shulde nether seme contrary, ner be vntruly g peruersly aledged. Treuth it is: A mas face can not be sene so wel in a water, as in a fayre glasse: nether cā it be shewed so clearly in a water that is stered or moued, as in a styll water. The letter was made after this maner:

C Syr, thy seruauntes Rathimus the story wryter, Sabellius the Scrybe, g other iudges of thy courte in Celosyria and Phenices. Be it knowne and manifest to our lorde the kynge, that the Iewes which are come vp fro you vnto vs in to the rebellious and wicked cite, begynne to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the teple of the new. Now yf this cite and the walles therof be sett vp agayne, they shal not only refuse to geue trybutes and taxinges, but also rebell vtterly agaynst the kynge. And for so moch as they take this in hande now aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to thinke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our lorde the kynge, g to certifie him therof: to the intent v yf it please the kinge, he maye cause it be sought in the bokes of olde: and thou shalt fynde soch warnynge wrytten, and shalt vnderstonde, that this cite hath allwaye bene rebellious and disobedient, that it hath subdued kynges and cities, and that the Iewes which dwell therin, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstinate, vnfaithfull and fightinge people, for the which cause this cite is waysted. Wherfore now we certifie oure lorde the kynge, that yf this cite be buylded and occupied agayne, a the walles theref set vp a new, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosyria and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the story wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius y scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epistle which thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent search, and haue founde, that the cite hath euer resisted kynges, that the same people are dishobedient, and haue caused moch warre, a that mightie kynges haue raigned in Ierusalem, which also haue raysed vp taxinges of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore, I haue commaūded those people, that they shal not buylde the cite, that they make no more in it, and that they procede no further with the buyldinge: for so moch as it might be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now whan Rathymus and Sabellius the scrybe and the rulers in the londe had red the wrytinge of kynge Artaxerses, they gatt them together, and came in all the haist to Ierusalem with an hoost of horsemen, and with moch people of fote, and forbad them to buylde. And so they left of from buyldinge of the temple, vnto the seconde yeare of kynge Darius.

The iij. Chapter.

YNGE Darius made a greate feast vnto his seruautes, vnto all his courte, g to all the officers of Media and Persia, yee and to all the debytes g rulers that were vnder him, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundreth g xxvij. countrees. So whan they had eaten, and dronken beinge satisfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kynge wente in to his chambre, layed him downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre yonge men, that kepte the kynges personne, and watched his body, commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to another: Let euery one of vs saye some thinge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shal kinge Darius geue greate giftes, and clothe him with purple. He shal geue him vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and coueringes: he shall make him a costly charett a brydle of golde, he shall geue him a bonet of whyte sylke and a chayne of golde aboute his neck: yee he shal be the seconde a pryncipall nexte vnto kynge Darius, a that because of his wyszdome, and shalbe called y kynges kynsman.

So every one wrote his meaninge, sealed it B and layed it vnder the kinges pelowe, and sayde : whan the kynge aryseth, we will geue him oure wrytinges: and loke whose worde the kynge and his chefe lordes judge to be the most wysely spoken, the same shall have the victory. One wrote : wyne is a stronge thinge. The secode wrote: The kynge is stroger. The thirde wrote: wemen haue yet more strength, but aboue all thinges § trueth beareth awaye the victory. Now whan the kynge was rysen vp, they toke their wrytinges and delyuered Then them vnto him, and so he red them. sent he forth to call all his chefe lordes, all the debytes g rulers of the countrees of Media and Persia. And whan they were sett downe in the councell, the wrytinges were red before them. And he commaunded to call for § yonge mē, y they might declare their meanynges the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, and came in, § kynge sayde vnto them: shew vs and make vs to vnderstode, what the thinges are that ye have wrytten. Then beganne the first (which had spoke of the strength of wyne) g sayde: O ye men, wyne is maruelous stroge," and ouercometh them y drynke it: it disceaueth the mynde, a bryngeth both the poore man g y kynge to dotage and vanite. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the fre, with the poore g rych: it taketh awaye their understondinge, and maketh them careles and mery, so that none of them remembreth eny heuynes, dett or dewtie: It causeth a man to thinke also that y thinge which he doth, is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor y he is in auctorite, g y he ought not to do soch thinges. Morouer, whan men are drynckinge, they forgett all frendshipe, all brotherly faithfulnes and loue: but as soone as they are droncke, they drawe out the swerde a wil fight: a wha they are layed downe fro the wyne, g so rysen vp agayne, they can not tell what they dyd. Iudge ye now, Is not wyne the strongest? For who wolde els take in hande, to do soch thinges? And when he had spoken this, he helde his tonge.

speake, sayêge: O ye men, are not they the strongest a most excellent, y coquere the lode a the see, a all y is in y see a in the earth? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, a hath dominion of the all: a loke what he comaudeth, it is done. Yf he sende his mē forth a warfare, they go and breake downe hilles, walles g towres. They are slayne, a slaye (other men) them selues, a ouer passe not y kynges worde. Yf they get the victory, they brynge the kynge all the spoyle. Likewyse, the other y medle not with warres and fightinge, but tyll the grounde: whan they reape, they brynge trybute vnto v kynge. And yf y kynge alone do but comaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he comaunde to forgeue, they forgeue: yf he comaunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he cômaūde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he comaunde to plante, they plate. The comon people g y rulers are obedient vnto him. And ŷ kynge in the meane season sytteth hi downe, eateth and drynketh, g taketh his rest: the kepe they watch roude aboute § kinge, g not one of the darre gett him out of § waye, to do his owne busynes, but must be obediet vnto ŷ kinge at a worde. Judge ye now o ye men, how shulde not he go farre aboue, vnto whom men are thus obediët? And whan he had spokē this, he helde his tonge. The thirde 🔢 (whose name was Zorobabel, which had spoke of wemen  $\alpha$  of  $\psi$  trueth) begane to save after this maner: O ye mē, it is not y greate kynge, it is not the multitude of me, nether is it wine y excelleth: Who is it the, y hath y lordshipe ouer the? no vnrighteous thinge. Wine is vnrighteous, the kynge is vnrighteous, wemen are vn-righteous: all the children of men are vn-righteous, yee all their workes are vnrighteous, and there is no trueth in them, in their vnrighteousnes also shall they be destroyed and perish. 'As for y trueth, it endureth, and is allwaye stronge: it lyueth, and coquer-

The trueth accepteth no personnes, it puteth no difference betwixte rych or poore, bewixte § mightie or symple, but doth right nto euery mā, whether they be euel or good, all men are louyngly dealt withall in the orkes of it. In the judgment of it there is o vnrighteous thinge, but strength, kingdome power and maiesty for euermore. Blessed e the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his toge, and all people cried g sayde : Greate is the trueth, nd aboue all. Then sayde the kynge vnto im: Axe what thou wilt, more then is apoynted in the wrytinge, and I shal geue it ne, for thou art founde wyser then thy comanyons: thou shalt sytt nexte me, and be my Then sayde he vnto the kynge: ynsman. temembre thy promyse and vowe, which 10u hast vowed and promysed (in the daye han thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde p Ierusalem, and to sende againe all the essels and Iewels, that were taken awaye ut of Ierusalem : which Cyrus separated, han he offred in Babilon, and wolde sende em agayne: And thy minde was to buylde p the temple, which the Edomites bret, whan erusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. his onely (O kynge) is the thinge that I quyre, this is y maiesty, which, I desyre axe of the: that thou perfourme the vowe, hich thou with thine owne mouth hast made nto the kynge of heauen.

Then Darius the kynge stode vp, and E yssed him, and wrote a letter vnto all the ebytes and shreues, to all y lordes and noles, y they shulde conveye him forth, c all iem y wolde go vp with him. And daylie offred they as acordinge was, and made the sacrifices appoynted, the offeringes also of the Sabbathes and of the new Moones, "And all they that and all holy feastes. vowed offerynges vnto the LORDE, beganne at the new Moone of § seueth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the LORDE was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto the Masons and Carpcters, money, meate a drynke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sydon also and Tyre they gaue cartes, y they shulde cary Cedre trees from Libanus to be ieastes and beames, and that they shulde inake shippes in the hauen of Ioppa, acordinge as it was appoynted and ordeyned, by Cyrus kynge of the Persians.

And in the seconde yeare they came in to the temple of God at Ierusalem. In the seconde moneth beganne Zorobabel* the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec, and their brethren the prestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto lerusalem out of the captingte of Babilon, a layed the foundacion of the temple, in the new Moone of the seconde moneth in the seconde yeare y they were come in to Iewry f and Ierusalem. And they appoynted the Leuites (that were aboue xx. yeare olde) vnto the seruyce of the LORDE: so Iesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites stode together, and perfourmed the lawe a ordinaunce in the house of the LORDE.

And the prestes stode and had their garmentes a trompettes, a the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, geuynge thankes, and prayses vnto the LORDE, acordinge as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd synge vnto the LORDE, was after this maner: O synge vnto the LORDE,<sup>d</sup> for he is gracious, and his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trompettes, and sunge with loude voyce, praysynge the LORDE together in the rearinge vp of the house of the LORDE, There came also from amonge the prestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, acordinge to the trybes and kynreds (soch as had sene the house afore) to the buyldinge of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge, many also with trompettes and greate loye: In so moch, that the trompettes might not wel be herde for the wepynge and mournynge. For the comon people blew goodly vpo the trompettes.

Then came the enemies of the trybes of @ Iuda and Ben Iamin,' to knowe what that tropettynge and noyse of shawmes might be. And they perceased y it was they which were come agayne out of captinyte, a wolde buylde the temple a new vnto the LORDE God of Israel. So they wente to Zorobabel and Iesua and to the rulers of the vyllages, a sayde vnto them : Shal we buylde with you also? for we like wyse haue herde youre LORDE, g we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Aszbazareth the kinge of Assiria, which brought vs hither. Then Zorobabel and Iesua and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayde vnto them: It is not mete, that ye shulde buylde the temple of oure God with vs: we oure selues alone wil buylde vnto the LORDE, like as Cyrus' the kynge of the Persians hath commauded vs.

But the Heithen in the londe layed them selues against those that were in Iewry, helde vp the buyldinge from them, layed wayte vpö them preuely, stopped soch as brought eny thinge to them, forbad them to buylde, g hyndered those that made the passage, that the buyldinge shulde not be fynished: a this contynued so longe as kynge Cyrus lyued: a so they put of the buyldinge for the space of two yeare, vntill y raigne of kynge Darius.

NOT with stondinge, in the seconde yeare a of the raigne of Darius," Aggeus a Zachary the sonne of Addo prophecied vpon them in Iewry and Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec stode vp,4 and beganne to buylde the house of the LORDE at Ierusalem, when the prophetes of the LORDE helped them.

At the same tyme came Sysennes the vnder shreue in Syria and Phenices, with the landlordes and his companyons, and sayde vnto them : Who hath bydden g commaunded you to buylde the house? to make the rofe and all other thinges agayne? And who are the workemen, that buylde them? Neuer-

And what so euer thou a thy brethre wyl do with the syluer a golde, y do after y mynde, g after the comaundement of the LORDE thy God: a like wyse with all the holy vessels, y are geue the for the seruyce of the house of the LORDE thy God: g other thinges what soeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, y shalbe geue the of the kynges treasure: a loke what thou with thy brethre wilt do with the golde and syluer, that do after y wil of the LORDE. And I kynge Artaxerses haue commaunded the kepers of v treasures in Syria and Phenices, that what soeuer Eszdras the prest and reder of the lawe of the LORDE doth wryte, it shalbe geuen him: tyll an C. talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne also an C. measures, and tyll an hudreth vessels of wyne, and other plenteous thinges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of  $\psi$ hyest God, that the wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also, that ye requyre no taxinge ner tribute of the prestes, Leuites, syngers, and mynisters of the temple, ner of the wryters: and that no man haue auctorite to medle env thinge against them. As for the (O Eszdras) set thou judges and arbitrers in the whole lande of Syria and Phenices, after the wyszdome of God: and lerne all soch as are ignoraunt in the lawe of God thy LORDE, and let all them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed.

Then sayde Eszdras  $\mathring{y}$  wryter: Blessed be  $\mathring{y}$  God of oure fathers, that hath geuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the hert of the kynge, to magnifie his house  $\mathring{y}$  is at Ierusalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the sight of  $\hat{y}$  kynge, of his councell, of his frēdes and of his nobles. And so I was stedfast in my mynde, acordinge as the LORDE my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel, to go vp with me. And these are the heades" (after their kynreds  $\mathfrak{g}$  houses of their fathers) that wente vp with me from Babilon, out of the kyngdome of Artaxerses : Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of  $\hat{\mathfrak{g}}$  sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zachary: and with him there turned agayne an hundreth and fiftie men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabilon, Zaraei, and with him ij. C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachnes, Iechonias Zecholi, and with him ij. C. and l. men. Of the sonnes of Salamaasias, Gotholie, and lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of Zaphacia, Zarias Miheli, and with him lxxx. whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose bloude I wyll requyre of youre handes, sayeth the LORDE. Thus sayeth the Allmightie LORDE: F youre house must be desolate. I wil cast you out as the wynde doth ŷ strawe: youre children shal not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and done ŷ thinge y is eucli before me. Youre houses wil I geue vnto a people y shal come, and "they y neuer herde me, shal beleue in me: a they vnto who I neuer shewed token, shal do the thinge  $\overset{t}{y}$  I comaunde the. They have sene no prophetes, yet shal they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege the. I reporte me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to come, whose children reiovse in gladnes: g though they have not sene me with bodely eyes, yet in sprete they beleue the thinge that I saye. And now brother, beholde what greate 'worshipe, and se  $\hat{y}$  people that commeth from the east, vnto whom I wyll geue the dukedome of Abraham, Isaac and Iacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Micheas, of Ioel, Abdy, Ionas, Naum and Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary and Malachy, which is called also an angel (or messauger) of the LORDE.

The ii. Chapter.

A HUS sayeth the LORDE: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue the my comaundementes by my seruautes v prophetes, whom they wolde not heare, but despysed my coucels. The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto them: Go youre waye ye children, for I am a wyddow g forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue synned before the LORDE youre God, and done ŷ thinge that is euell before him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow and forsake: go youre waye (o my children) and axe mercy of the LORDE. As for me O father, I call vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these childre, which wolde not kepe my couenaunt: y thou brynge them to cofucion, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode amonge the Heithen, let them be put out of the earth, for they have thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Wo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest 33 the vnrighteous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd vnto 'Sodom and Gomorre, whose land is turned to pitch and aszshes. Euen so also wyll I do vnto all them, that heare me not, sayeth the Allmightie LORDE. Thus sayeth the LORDE vnto Eszdras: Tell my people, y I will geue them the kyngdome of Ierusalem, which I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glory also wyl I take vnto me, and geue them the euerlastynge tabernacles, which I had prepared for those.

The tre of life shalbe vnto them a swete smellynge oyntment: they shal nether laboure ner be weery. Go ye youre waye,  $\mathfrak{g}$  ye shall receaue it. Praye for youre selues a few dayes, that they maye dwell therin. Now is the kingdome prepared for you, therfore watch. Take heauē and earth to wytnesse, for I haue broken the euell in peces, and created the good, for I lyue sayeth § LORDE. Mother enbrace thy children, and brynge them vp with gladnes: make their fete as fast as a piler, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE.

And those that be deed wyll I rayse vp agayne from their places, and brynge them out of y graues, for I haue knowne my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the children, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the LORDE. And for thy helpe I shal sende the my seruauntes Esay and Ieremy, after whose councell I have sanctified g prepared for the, xij. trees with dyuerse frutes, and as many welles flowinge with mylck and hony, g seuen mountaynes, whervpo there growe roses and lilies, wherin I wyl fyll my children with ioye. shal not one of them perishe, for I wyl seke the from thy nombre, vexe not thy self.

For whan the daye of trouble and heuynes commeth, other shal wepe and be soroufull, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous. The Heithen shalbe gelous, but they shalbe able to do nothinge agaynst the, sayeth the LORDE. My handes shal couer the, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastinge. Be ioyfull O thou mother with thy childrö, for I wyll delyuer the, sayeth the LORDE. Remembre thy deed childrö, for I shal brynge them out of the earth, and shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercifull, sayeth the LORDE Allmightie.

Enbrace thy childre, vntyll I come and shew mercy vnto them, for my welles runne E ouer, and my grace shal not fayle. I Eszdras receaued a charge of the LORDE vpon the mount Oreb, that I shulde go vnto Israel. But whan I came vnto the, they set me at naught, and despysed the commaundement of § LORDE. And therfore I saye vnto you O ye Heithen, that heare and vnderstonde: Loke for youre shepherde, he shal geue you euerlastinge rest: for he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the worlde. Be ready to the rewarde of the kyngdome, for the euerlastinge light shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Fle the shadowe of this worlde, receaue the ioyfulnes of youre glory. I testifie my saujoure openly: O receaue the gift y is geuen you, and be glad, geuynge thankes vnto him, that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome. Aryse vp, and stonde fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the LORDE, which are departed from the shadowe of the worlde, and haue receaued glorious garmetes of the LORDE. Take thy nombre O Sion, and shutt vp thy purified, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the LORDE. The nombre of thy children whom thou longedest for, is fulfilled : beseke the power of the LORDE, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, maye be halowed.

f I Eszdras sawe vpon the mount Sion a greate people, whom I coude not "nombre, q they all praysed the LORDE with songes of thankesgeuynge. And in the myddest of thë there was a yonge mā of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of their heades he sett a crowne, and was euer hygher and hygher, which I marueled at greatly. So I axed  $\hat{y}$  angell,  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayde: Syr, what are these? He answered and sayde vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the mortall clothinge and put on the immortall, and haue testified  $\mathfrak{g}$  knowleged the name of God. Now are they crowned, and receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the angell: what yonge personne is it, that crowneth them,  $\mathfrak{g}$  geueth them the palmes in their handes? So he answered and sayde vnto me: It is  $\mathfrak{f}$  sonne of God, whom they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that stode so stifly for the name of the LORDE. And so the angell sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, and tell my people, what maner of thinges and how greate wonders of the LORDE thy God, thou hast sene.

The iij. Chapter.

TN the thirtie yeare of the fall of the cite, A I was at Babilon g laye troubled vpo my bed, g my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I sawe y desolacion of Sion, a the plenteous wealth of them y dwelt at Babilon: g my sprete was sore moued, so that I begane to speake fearfull wordes to the most hyest, and sayde: O LORDE LORDE, thou spakest at the begynnynge, whan thou plantedst y earth, (and that thy self alone) and gauest commaundement vnto y people, and a body vnto Adam, 'which was a creature of thy handes, and hast brethed in him the breth of life: and so he lyued before the, and thou, leddest him in to paradyse, which garde of pleasure thy right hande had planted, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundemet to loue y waye, which he transgressed, a immediatly thou appoyntedest death in him, and in his generacions. Of him came nacions, trybes, people, a kyn-reddes out of nombre. 'And eucry people reddes out of nombre. walked after their owne wil, and did nyce thinges before the: and as for thy commaundementes, they despysed them.

<sup>4</sup> But in processe of tyme thou broughtest the water floude, vpon those that dwelt in the worlde, and destroydest them. And like as the death was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou leftest: namely, Noe with his housholde, of whom come all righteous mē. And it happened that, whan they y dwelt vpon the earth, beganne to multiplie, and had gotten many children, and were a greate people, they beganne to be more vngodly then the first.

Now whan they all lyued so wickedly before the, "thou didest chose the a man from amonge them, whose name was Abram. Him thou louedest, and vnto him only thou shewdest thy wyll, and maydest an euerlastinge couenaunt with him, promisinge him, that thou woldest neuer forsake his sede. "And vnto him thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Iacob and Esau. As for Iacob thou didest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Iacob became a greate multitude.

And yet tokest thou not awaye from the that wicked hert, that thy lawe might brynge forth frute in them. For the first Adam bare a wicked hert, transgressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they y are borne of him. "Thus remayned weaknes with the lawe in the hert of the people, with the wickednesse of the rote : so that the good departed awaye, and the euell abode still. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeares were brought to an ende. "Then didest thou rayse the vp a seruaunt called Dauid, whom thou commaundedst to buylde a cite vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacrifice vnto the therin. This was done now many yeares.

Then the inhabiters of the cite forsoke the, and in all thinges dyd euē as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked hert. And so thou gauest thy cite ouer in to the handes of thine enemies. Are they of Babilon then better and more righteous then thy people, y they shal therfore haue the domynion of Sion? For whan I came there, and sawe their vngodlynes, and so greate wickednesse, that it coude not be nobred: yee whan my soule sawe so many euell doers (in  $\mathring{y}$  XXX. yeare) my hert fayled me, for I sawe, how thou suffrest them in soch vngodlynes, and sparest  $\mathring{y}$  wicked doers: but thine owne people hast thou roted out, and preserued thine enemies,  $\mathfrak{g}$  this hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot percease how this happeneth.  $D_0 | \mathfrak{X}$ they of Babilon then better, then they of Sion? Or is there eny other people, y knoweth the, sauynge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleved \$ couenaūtes, as Iacob? And yet their rewarde appeareth not, and their laboure hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorow the Heithe, α I se, y they be rych α wealthy, α thynke not vpon y commaundementes. Weye thou therfore oure wickednesse now in y balaunce, and theirs also that dwell in the worlde, and so shal thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpon earth, y hath not synned before the? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt fynde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heithen.

And I sayde: wherfore LORDE? Where vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers childesbed then my graue? So had I not sene the mysery and trouble of Iacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: Nobre me v I hinges, y are not yet come : gather me together & droppes, that are scatred abrode: nake me ý floures grene agayne, ý are wythered: ope me the thinge that is closed: ind bringe me forth the wyndes, that are hutt vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, nd then shal I declare the the thinge, that hou labourest to knowe. And I sayde: O LORDE LORDE, who may knowe these hinges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with me? As for me, I am vn wise : how naye I the speake of these thinges, wherof hou axest me? The sayde he vnto me: like s thou canst do none of these thinges y I aue spoken of, Euen so canst thou not fynde out my judgment, or in the ende the loue that haue promysed vnto my people. And I ayde : Beholde o LORDE, yet art thou nye nto them that haue no ende : and what shal hey do that haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shal come after vs? And e sayde vnto me: I wyll lycken my iudgment nto a rynge. Like as there is no slacknesse f the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of he first. So I answered a sayde: Coudest hou not make those (that have bene made, and that be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mightest shewe thy judgment he sooner?

Then answered he me and sayde: The f creature may not haist aboue the maker, nether maye the worlde holde the at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunt, that thou lyuynge maker hast made the creature lyuynge at once, g the creature bare it? euë so might it now also beare them that be present, at once. And he sayde vnto me: Axe the childeszbed of a womā, and saye vnto her: Yf thou bringest forth childrë, why doest thou it not together, but one after another? Praye her therfore, to brynge forth ten children at once. And I sayde: she can not, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childeszbed vnto the earth, for those that be sowne vpon it by processe of tyme. For like as a yonge childe maye not brynge forth the thinges that belonge to the aged, euen so haue I ordened the worlde which I made.

And I axed and sayde: Seynge thou hast Ø now geuē me a waye, I wyl speake before ŷ: for oure mother of who thou hast tolde me, is yet yonge, a now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me a sayde: Axe a woman that beareth children, a she shal tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou hast now brought forth) like those that were before the, but less of stature? And she shal answere the: They y be borne in the youth of streigth, are of one fashion: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (whan the childeszbed fayleth) are other wyse. Cosidre now thy self, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye, as the creatures which now begynne to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strength of youth. Then sayde I: LORDE I beseke the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, shewe thy seruaunt, by whom doest thou vyset thy creature?

The bi. Chapter.

ND he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge whan the grounde was made, before the worlde stode, or euer v wyndes blew, before it thondred and lightened, or euer the foundacions of Paradise were layed, before the fayre floures were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablished, before y innumerable multitudes of angels were gathered together, or euer y highnesses of y ayre were lifted vp, afore § measures of the firmament were named, or euer y chymneys in Sion were hote, and or the presente yeares were sought out, and or euer the invencions of them y now synne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that now gather faith for a treasure: then dyd I cosidre and pondre all these thinges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other.

Then answered I and sayde: which shalbe the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or whan shalbe the ende of the first, and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he sayde vnto me: From Abrahā vnto Isaac, whā Iacob a Esau were borne of him, Iacobs hande helde first the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Iacob is the begynnynge of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Eszdras) axe thou not.

I answered then and sayde: O LORDE 36 LORDE, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy sight, I beseke the, shewe thy serulut the ende of thy tokes, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last night. So he answered and sayde vnto me: Stöde vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shal come a greate mocion, but y place where thou stodest shal not be moued. And therfore whan thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayed: for of the ende shal the worde and foundacion of y earth be vnderstonde. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that wha I had herde it, I stode vp vpon my fete and herkened: and beholde, there was a voyce v spake, and the sounde of it was like the sounde of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, y dayes come, y I wyl begynne to drawe nye, and to vyset them that dwell vpo earth, and wyl begynne to make inquysicion of them, what they be v haue hurte equyte with vnrighteousnes, and whan the lowe estate of Sion shalbe fulfylled : and whan the worlde, that shal vanish awaye, shalbe ouersealed, then wyl I do these tokens.

The bokes shalbe opened before the firmament, and they shal se all together,  $\mathfrak{q}$  the children of a yeare olde shal speake with their voyces: the womē with childe shal brynge forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and be raysed vp:  $\mathfrak{q}$  sodēly shal the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, the full store houses shal sodenly be founde emptie, and the trompett shal geue a sounde, which whā euery man heareth, they shalbe haistely afrayed. At that tyme shall frendes fight° one agaynst another like enemies, and the earth shal stonde in feare with them.

The sprynges of the welles shal stonde styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Who so euer remayneth from all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shal escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receased, shal se it, they

 And it happened whan he talked with me, that I loked demurely vpō him, before whō I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me : I am come to shewe ŷ, the tyme of ŷ night for to come.

Yf thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuë dayes agayne, I shal tel the more thinges,  $\mathfrak{g}$ greater then before: for thy voyce is herde before the Hyest: for why? the Mightie hath sene thy righteous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comforte, and feare not, and haist not with  $\mathfrak{F}$  tymes that are past to thynke vayne thinges, and make no haist of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this,  $\mathbf{\dot{y}}$  I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in like maner, that I might fulfill the thre wekes, which he tolde me. In the eight night was my hert vexed within me agayne, and I beganne to speake before the Hyest: for my sprete was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distresse, and I sayde: O LORDE, thou spakest vnto thy creature from the begynnynge (euen the first daye) and saydest: Let heaven and earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the sprete, and the darcknesses were yet on euery syde, and sylence: there was no mans voyce as yet from the. Then commaundedst thou a fayre light to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke might appeare and be sene.

E Vpon the seconde daye thou maydest the sprete of the firmament, and commaundedst it to parte asunder  $\mathfrak{g}$  to make a deuysion betwixte the waters, that the one parte might remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Vpon the thirde daye thou broughtest to passe,  $\mathfrak{f}$  the waters were gathered in the seuenth parte of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp, and kepte them, to the intet  $\mathfrak{f}$  men might some and occupie huszbandrie therin. As soone as thy worde wente forth, the worke was made. For immediatly there was greate innumerable frute,  $\mathfrak{q}$  many dyuerse pleasures  $\mathfrak{q}$ desyres of temptacion, floures of chaungeable coloure and smell, and this was done the thirde daye.

Vpon the fourth daye thou comaundedst that the Sonne shulde geue his shyne, and § Moone hir light: the starres didest thou sett in ordre, and gauest them a charge, to do seruyce even vnto man," that was for to be made. Vpō the fifth daye thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bringe forth diuerse beastes, foules and fishes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people might prayse thy wonderous workes. Then didest thou preserue two soules, y one thou calldest Enoch and the other Leuiathan, and didest separate the one from the other: for the seventh parte (namely, where the water was gathered together) might not holde them both. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, IF which was dryed vp the thirde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherin are a thousande hilles. But vnto Leuiathā thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst, and hast kepte him to deuoure what thou wylt, and whan.

Vpon the sixte daye thou gauest comaundement vnto the earth, that before the it shulde brynge forth beastes, catell and all  $\S$  crepe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  (besydes this) Adam also, whom thou maydest lorde of all thy creatures: Of him come we all, and the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy self. All this haue I sayde now and spoken before the, that I might shewe, how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adam, thou hast sayde that they are nothinge, but be like a spetle, and hast lickened the abundauce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the role of the house.

And now (O LORDE) the Heithë which haue euer bene reputed as nothinge, haue begone to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called  $\vartheta$  first borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen in to their handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

The bii. Chapter.

A ND it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an angell (which had bene by me also the nightes afore) and he sayde vnto me: Vp Eszdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayde: speake on LORDE my God. Thē sayde he vnto me: The see is sett in a wyde place, ý it might be depe and greate: but the intraūce is narow and small like a ryuer. For who wolde go in to the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? Yf he wente not thorow the narow, how might he come in to the brode?

Item, another. A cite is buylded and sett vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes: the intraunce is narow and sodane, like as yf there were a fyre at the right hande, and a depe water at the left, and as it were onely one strate path betwixte the both, so small, that there coude but one man go there.

Yf this cite now were geuen to an heyre,  $\mathfrak{g}$ he neuer wente thorow this parlous waye, how wolde he receaue his inheritaūce? And I sayde: It is so, LORDE. Then sayde he: Euen so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde:  $\mathfrak{g}$ whan Adam trāsgressed my statutes, then was  $\mathfrak{g}$  thinge iudged that was done. Then were  $\mathfrak{g}$ intraunces of the worlde made narow, full of sorow and trauayle: They are but few  $\mathfrak{g}$ euell, full of parels and laboure. For the intraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

Yf they now which are entred in to this worlde, maye not comprehende these strayte and vayne thinges, moch lesse maye they coprehende and vnderstonde the secrete thinges: Why disquietest thou thy self then, seynge thou art but a corruptible mā? And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued in to thine hert the thinge that is for to come, but that is present?

The sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, thou hast ordened in thy lawe," that the righteous shulde inheret these thinges, but that the vnfaithfull and vngodly shulde perishe. Neuer-theles the righteous shall suffre strayte thinges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly a suffred strayte thinges, shal not se the wyde.

And he saide vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstondinge aboue the Hyest. For there be many  $\dot{y}$ perish, because they despyse  $\dot{y}$  lawe of God that is sett before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement to soch as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kepte this, they shulde not be punyshed.

Neuertheles they were not obedient vnto him, but spake agaynst him: ymagined vayne thinges,  $\mathfrak{g}$  purposed to synne, and sayde morouer, that there was no God,  $\mathfrak{g}$  that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despysed,  $\mathfrak{g}$  denyed his promyses: in his statutes  $\mathfrak{g}$  ordinaunces haue they not bene faithfull  $\mathfrak{g}$  stedfast, and haue not perfourmed his workes.

And therfore Eszdras, vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shal come,  $\mathring{y}$  these tokens which I haue tolde the, shal come to passe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  the bryde shall appeare:  $\mathfrak{g}$  the earth  $\mathring{y}$  now passeth awaye, shalbe shewed:  $\mathfrak{g}$  who so euer is delyuered from  $\mathring{y}$  foresayde euels, shal se my woders. For my sonne Iesus shal be openly declared, with those  $\mathring{y}$  be with him: and they  $\mathring{y}$  remayne, shal be mery in foure hundreth yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Christ dye, and all men that haue life: and  $\mathbf{\hat{y}}$  worlde shalbe turned in to the olde sylence seuen dayes, like as in the fore iudgmentes, so that no man shall remayne. And after seuē dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shalbe raysed vp, a shal dye corrupte. And the earth shal restore those that have slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylèce, and the secrete places shal delyuer those that be committed vnto them. And y most hyest shal be openly declared vpon the seate of judgment, g all misery shal vanysh awaye, and loge suffringe shalbe gathered together. But the judgment shall contynue, y trueth shal remayne, and faith shal waxe ströge, the worke shal folowe, and the rewarde shall be shewed, the righteousnesses shall watch, and the vnrighteousnesses shall beare no rule.

Chap. big.

Euen so is it with the worke of this worlde. There be many created," but few shall be preserued. Then answered I a sayde: Then swalowe vp the witt (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstondinge, for thou art agreed to herken and to geue eare, and wyllinge to prophecie: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but only to lyue. O LORDE, wilt thou not geue thy seruaunt leue, y we maye praye before the, and that thou mayest geue sede vnto oure hert, and buylde oure vnderstondinge, that there maye come frute of it: and that euery one which is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a man, maye lyue?

For thou art alone, and we all are one workmanshipe of thy handes, like as thou hast sayde, and like as the body is fashioned now in the childeszbed, and thou geuest the membres, and thy creature is preserued in fyre and water: a ix. monethes doth thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thinge that preserueth and it y is preserued, shal both be kepte together: r whan tyme is, the childeszbedd delyuereth y thinge, that is kepte and growne in her.

B For thou hast commaunded the brestes to geue mylck vnto the frute, that the thinge which is created and fashioned, maye be norished for a tyme: and then thou disposest and ordrest it with thy mercy, bryngest it vp with thy righteousnes, nurturest it in thy lawe, and refourmest it with thy vnderstondinge, mortifiest it as thy creature, and makest it lyuynge as thy worke. Seinge then that thou destroyest him, which with so greate labours is created and fashioned thorow thy commaundement, thou coudest lyghtly ordene also, that the thinge which is made, might be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in generall, as thou knowest: but of thy people, for whose sake I am sory: and of thy inheritaunce, for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am wofull: and for Iacob, for whose sake I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before the, for my self and for them, for I se the fall of vs, even of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the swiftnes of the judge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderstöde my wordes, and I shal speake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of C Eszdras, before he was receaued: O LORDE, thou that dwellest in euerlastyngnesse, whose eyes are lift vp in the ayre, whose stole is exceading hye, whose glory and maiesty maye not be compreheded, before whom the hoostes of heauen stonde with tremblinge, whose kepinge is turned in winde and fyre, whose worde is true, whose talkynge is stedfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordynaunce is fearfull, whose loke dryeth vp the depthes, whose wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, a whose trueth beareth wytnes: O heare y prayer of thy seruaunt, and marck with thine eares the peticion of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wil speake: and so lõge as I haue vnderstondinge, I will answere. O loke not vpo the synnes of thy people, which serue y in the trueth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the Heithen, but to the desyre of those that kepe thy testimonies with sorowes. Thinke not vpon those that have walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which with wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to destroye them, which haue had beastly maners, but to loke vpon them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, which are worse then beastes: but loue them, that allwaye put their trust in y righteousnes and glory; for we and oure fathers have all the same sicknes and disease, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercifull.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, thou shalt 3 be called mercifull, where as we have no workes of righteousnes: for y righteous which haue layed vp many good workes together, shall out of their dedes receaue rewarde. For what is man, that thou shuldest take displeasure at him? Or what is the corruptible mortall generacion, that thou shuldest be so rough towarde him?

"For of a trueth there is no man amonge them that be borne, but he hath dealt wickedly: and amonge the faithfull there is none, which hath not done amysse. For in this (O LORDE) thy righteousnes a thy goodnes shalbe praysed and declared, yf thou be mercifull vnto them, which are not rych in good workes.

" Mat. 20. b. and 21. b.

' 3 Re. 8. g. 1 Ioh. 1. b. 2 Par. 6. f.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thinges hast thou spoken a right, and acordinge vnto thy wordes it shal be. For I wil not verely cosidre the worke of them, which haue synned before death, before the judgment, before destruccio, "but I wyll reioyse ouer the worke and thought of y righteous. I wil remembre also the pilgramege, the holymakynge and the rewarde. Like as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the huszbād man soweth moch sede vpon the grounde, and planteth many trees, and yet allwaye the thinge that is sowne or plated is not all kepte safe, nether doth it all take rote: Euen so is it of them that are sowne in the worlde, they shal not all be preserued.

I answered then g sayde: Yf I haue founde grace, then let me speake. Like as the husbāde mans sede perisheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen so perisheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne ymage and to thy self, for whose sake thou hast made all thinges, and lickened him vnto the huszbande mans sede. Be not wroth at vs (O LORDE) but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thine owne inheritaunce: O be mercifull vnto thy creature.

Then answered he me and sayde: Thinges present are for the present, and thinges to come for soch as be to come. For thou watest yet moch, seynge thou mayest loue my creature aboue me : I haue oft times drawne nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this also thou art maruelous before the Hyest, in that thou hast humbled thy self, as it becommeth the, and hast not regarded thine owne self, y thou art had in soch ho-F noure amonge the righteous. Therfore shall greate wrechidnes and mysery come vpon them, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in $ worlde, for they have walked in greate pryde. But vnderstonde thou for thy self, and seke out glory for soch as be like the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the the: for vnto you is paradyse opened, the tre of life is plated, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteousnes made ready: a cite is builded for you, and a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wyszdome. The rote of euell is marked from you, the weaknes and moth is hyd from you, x into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyshed awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortalite. And therfore axe thou no more questions, cocernynge the multitude of them that perishe. For they haue taken libertie, despysed the Hyest, thought soorne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

Morouer, they have troden downe his @ righteous, ' and sayde in their hert, that there is no God, yee and that wittingly, for they dye. For like as the thinge that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Euē so is thyrst and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wil that man shulde come to naught: but they which be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, and are vnthankefull vnto him, which prepared life for them. And therfore is my judgment now at hande. These thinges have I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto few : namely, vnto the, and to soch as be like the.

Then answered I and sayde: Beholde O LORDE, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wilt begynne to do at the last: but at what tyme and whan, thou hast not shewed me.

The ir. Chapter.

H E answered me then and saide: Measure thou the tyme diligently in it self, whan thou seist that one parte of the tokens come to passe, which I haue tolde § before: so shalt thou vnderstonde, that it is the very same tyme, wherin the Hyest wil begynne to vysit the worlde, which he made. And whā there shalbe sene earthquake and vproure of the people in the worlde, then shalt thou well vnderstonde, that the most hyest spake of those thinges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnynge.

For like as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnynge and ende, and the ende is manyfest: Euen so the tymes also of the Hyest haue playne begynnynges in wonders and signes, and the ende in workynge and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shall be able to escape by his workes  $\mathfrak{g}$ by faith (wherin ye haue beleued) shall be preserued from the saide parels, and shal se my sauioure in my londe and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the worlde. Then shall they be in carefulnesse, my prayer to  $\mathring{y}$  Hyest. After thirtie yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my misery, considred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my huszbād also and all my neghbours, and we gaue greate honoure vnto  $\mathring{y}$  Mightie. And I norished him with greate trauayle. So whan he grewe vp,  $\mathfrak{q}$  came to the tyme, that he shulde haue a wife, I made a feast.

The r. Chapter.

A ND it happened that whan my sonne wente in to his chamber, he fell downe, and dyed: thē ouerthrew we all the lightes, and all my neghbours rose vp to cöforte me. Thē toke I my rest vnto the secode daye at night: g whan they had all rested, ý they might comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by night, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remayne here, and nether to eate ner drynke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntill I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fall, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou foolish woman, seist thou not oure heuynes and mournynge, and what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion oure mother is all wofull and sory, and how she is cleane brought downe and in misery? seinge we be all now in heuynes, a make oure mone (for we be all soroufull.) As for the heuvnes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shal tell the, that it is she which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her. For from the begynnynge all men are borne of her, a other shal come: and beholde, they walke allmost all in to destruccion, and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournynge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multitude? and not thou, which art sory but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournynge is not like the mournynge of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I hare with heuynes: as for the earth, acordinge to the ordynaunce of  $\mathfrak{F}$  earth onely, so that many are gone awaye in her, as 13 it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: like as thou hast borne with trauayle c sorowe, euen so the earth also from the begynnynge geueth hir frute vnto man, for him  $\frac{1}{2}$  made her. And therfore witholde thy sorowe and heuynes by thy self, and loke what happeneth vnto  $\frac{9}{2}$ , beare it strögly.<sup>a</sup> For yf thou iudgest the marck g ende of God to be righteous and good, and receauest his councell in tyme, thou shalt be commended therin. Go thy waye then in to the cite to thy husbande.

And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I will not go in to the cite, but heare will I dye. So I commoned more with her, and sayde: Do not so, but be couceled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good comforte because of the sorowe of For thou seist that oure Sanc-Ierusalem. tuary is layed waist, oure aulter broken, oure temple destroyed, oure playenge of instrumentes and synginge layed downe, the thankesgeuynge put to sylence, oure myrth is vanished awaye, the light of oure candlestick is quenched, § Arke of the couenaunt is takē from vs, all oure holy thinges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured, oure children are put to shame, oure prestes are brent, oure Leuites are caried awaye in to captinyte, oure virgins are defyled, and oure wyues rauyshed, oure righteous men spoyled, and oure childre destroyed, oure yonge men are brought in bodage, and oure ströge worthies are become weake : and Sion (which seale is  $\oint$  greatest of all) is lowsed  $\forall p$ from hir worshipe: for she is deliuered in to the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of  $\hat{y}$  greate heuynes, and putt awaye the multitude of sorowes: that the Mightie maye be mercyfull vnto the, and that the Hyest maye geue the rest from  $\hat{y}$  laboure and trauayle. And it happened, that whan I was talkynge with her, hir face dyd shyne g glyster, so that I was afraied of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatly she cast out a greate voyce, very fearfull, so that  $\hat{y}$  earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I loked, and beholde, the woman appeared vnto me nomore: but there was a cite buylded, and a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacion.

Then was I afrayed, and cried with loude voyce, and sayde: where is Vriel the angell, "which came to me at the first? For he hath caused me to come in many consideracions and hye thoughtes, and myne ende is turned and they wepte with loude voyce. Then answered I the a sayde: Be of good coforte O Israel, a be not heuv thou house of Iacob: for ý Hyest hath you in remēbraūce, a ý Mightie hath not forgotte you in tetacio. As for me, I haue not forsake you, nether am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to praye, because of § mysery of Israel, that I might seke mercy for y lowe estate of youre Sactuary. And now go youre waye home euery mā, and after these dayes wyl I come vnto you. So the people wete their waye in to the cite, like as I commaunded them: but I remayned still in the felde seuen dayes, as y angell bad me, and I ate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The rij. Chapter.

ND it happened after the seuē dayes,  $\dot{y}$ I dreamed a dreame by night. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the floudes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was stronge and increased with the cloudes of heauen: and whan he turned his countenaunce to cosider, all the thinges trembled that were sene vnder him: and whan the voyce wente out of his mouth, all they brent that herde him, like as the earth whan it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of  $m\bar{e}$  out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heauē, to fight agaynst  $\mathring{y}$  man, that came out from  $\mathring{y}$  see. And I loked,  $\mathfrak{g}$  beholde, he graued himself a greate moūtayne, and flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, wherout the hill was grauen,  $\mathfrak{g}$  I coude not.

I sawe after these,  $\xi$  all they which came to fight agaynst him, were sore afrayed, and yet durst they fight. Neuertheles whan he sawe the fearsnesse and violence of the people, he nether lift vp his hande ner helde swerde, ner eny weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent out of his mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of his lippes  $\xi$  wynde of the flamme: and out of his toge he cast out sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flames, and  $\xi$  greate storme,  $\mathfrak{g}$  fell with a russhe vpon  $\xi$  people, which was prepared to fight  $\mathfrak{g}$  bret the vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothinge sene, but onely dust a smoke. Whan I saw this, I was afrayed.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callinge vnto him another peaceable people: and there came moch people vnto him: some were glad some were sory, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sick thorow greate feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed  $\hat{y}$  seruaunt all  $\hat{y}$  woders fro  $\hat{y}$  begynnynge,  $\mathfrak{g}$  hast counted me worthy,  $\hat{y}$  thou mightest receaue my prayer: shewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I cosidre in my vnderstandinge: Wo vnto them that shal be left in those dayes,  $\mathfrak{g}$  moch more wo vnto the that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstonde I  $\mathring{y}$  thinges that are layed vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not left behyndc. Therfore are they come in to greate parells, and many necessities, like as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier,  $\mathring{y}$  he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude out of the worlde, and now to se  $\mathring{y}$ thinges  $\mathring{y}$  shal happen in  $\mathring{y}$  last.

Then answered he me, and sayde: The in- $| \mathfrak{C} |$ terpretacion of the sight shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thinge y thou hast requyred. For thou hast spoken of them that are left behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the parell in that tyme, hath kepte himself. They that be fallen in to harme, are soch as haue workes g faith vnto the Most mightie. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behynde, are more blessed, then they that be deed. This is the meanynge of the vision. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from the depe of the see, y same is he whom God the Hyest hath kepte a greate season, which by his owne self shall delyuer his creature, a he shal ordre the that are left behynde. And where as thou sawest, y out of his mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyrc and storme, a how y he lift vp nether swerde ner weapen, but y the ruszshinge in of him destroyed the whole multitude. y came to fight agaynst him: it signifieth, that the dayes come, whan God wyll delyuer the v are vpon earth, q in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpon the, y dwell in the earth. And one shal vndertake to fight agaynst another, one cite agaynst another, one place agaynst another," one people agaynst another, m one realme agaynst another. Whan this commeth to passe, then shal the tokens come, that I shewed the before : and the shal my sonne be declared, who thou sawest clymme vp as a mā. And whan all y people heare his voyce, euery man shal in their owne lode leaue the battayll, y they haue one agaynst another, and an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as they that be willinge to come and to ouercome him by fightinge. But he shal stode vpon the toppe of the mount Sion. Neuertheles Sion shall come, g shall be shewed, beynge prepared a buylded for all men, like as thou sawest the hill grauen forth without eny hades. But my sonne shal rebuke the people y are come for their wickednes, with the tempest, and for their euell ymaginacions: and their paynes wherwith they shal be punyshed, are lickened vnto the flamme: and without eny laboure shal he destroye them, even by the lawe, which is copared vnto the fyre.

And where as thou sawest, that he gathered another peaceable people vnto hī: those are the ten trybes, which were caried awaye presoners out of their owne londe, in the tyme of Oseas the kynge, whom 'Salmanasar the kinge of Assiria toke presoner, and caried them ouer ŷ water, and so came they in to another londe.

But they gaue them this councell, y they shulde leaue the multitude of the Heithe, and to go forth in to a farther countre, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they might there kepe their statutes, which they neuer kepte in their owne lande. And so they entred in at the narow passages of the water of Euphrates, and God shewed tokens for the, and helde styll the floude tyll they were passed ouer: for thorow that countre there was a greate waye, namely of a yeare and an half iourney, for the same region is called Asareth. Then dwelt they there vnto the latter tyme: and when they come forth agayne, § Hyest shall holde styll the sprynges of the streame agayne, that they may go thorow, therfore sawest thou the multitude with peace. And they that be left behynde of thy people, are those that be founde within my border. Now whan he destroyeth the multitude that is gathered together, he shal defede his people that remayne, and then shal he shew them greate wonders.

Then sayde I: O LORDE LORDE, J shew me this: wherfore haue I sene the man commynge vp from the depe of the see?

And he sayde vnto me: Like as thou cast nether seke out ner knowe these thinges that are in the depe of the see, euen so maiest thou not se my sonne, or those that be with him, but in the tyme of the daye. This is the interpretacion of the dreame which thou sawest, therfore thou onely art here lightened: for thou hast forsaken thine owne lawe, and applied thy diligence vnto myne, and sought it. "Thy life hast thou ordred in wyszdome, and hast called vnderstondinge thy mother, and therfore haue I shewed the § treasure of the Hyest. After thre dayes I wil shew the more, and talke with the at more large, yee heuy and wonderous thinges wyl I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forth in to y felde, geuynge prayse and thankes greatly vnto God, because of his wonders which he dyd in tyme, and because he gouerneth the same, and soch as is in tyme, and there I satt thre dayes.

The riij. Chapter.

TPON the thirde daye I satt vnder an 🕱 oke tre, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, g sayde: Eszdras, Eszdras. And I sayde: here I am LORDE, and stode vp vpon my fete. The spake he vnto me: 'In the bush dyd I appeare vnto Moses, a talked with him, wha my people serued in Egipte, and I sent him, and led my people out of Egipte, a brought him vpo y mount Sion, where I helde him by me a longe season, and tolde him my wonderous workes, and shewed him y secretes of the tymes, and the ende, and commaunded him, sayege: These wordes shalt thou declare, g not hyde the. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine hert the dreames that thou hast sene, and the interpretacions which I haue shewed the : for thou shalt be receaued of all, thou shal be turned and remayne with my councell, and with soch as be like the, vntyll $ tymes be ended. For the worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begynne to waxe olde. For the tyme is deuyded in to twolue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of the tenth parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after y half of y tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy house, and 孡 refourme thy people: comforte soch of them as be in trouble: and tell now of the destruccion: let go from the mortall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some place y thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haist the to flyt from these tymes: for soch euell α wickednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shal they do yet moch worse. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, the more shal " synne and wickednesse increase, in them that dwell vpo earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye, a lesynge is hard at hande. For now haisteth the vision to come, that thou hast sene. Then answered I and sayde: Beholde LORDE, I wyl go as thou hast commaunded me, and refourme the people which are present. But they y shal be borne afterwarde, C who wyl exhorte or rebuke the? Thus the worlde is set in darcknes, and they y dwel therin, are without light: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no man knoweth the thinges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. Yf I have found grace before the, sende the holy goost in to me, and I shall wryte all that hath goost in to me, and I shall wryte all that hath bene done in the worlde sens the begynnynge, which was wrytten in thy lawe, that men maye fynde the path, and that they which wyl lyue in the latter dayes, may lyue. And he answered me, savēge: Go & wave.

And he answered me, sayēge: Go § waye, gather thy people together, g saye vnto thē, that they seke the not for xl. dayes, but loke thou gather the many boxe trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus and Asial, these fyue, which are ready to wryte swiftly, and come hither, and I shal light a câdle of vnderstödinge in thine hert, which shal not be put out, tyll the thinges be performed which thou shalt begynne to wryte. And then shalt thou declare some thinges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thinges shalt thou shew secretly vnto § wyse. Tomorow this houre shalt thou begynne to wryte.

Then wete l forth (as he commanded me) and gathered all $ people together, and sayde: Heare these wordes o Israel: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were straungers in Egipte, from whece they were delyuered, and receaued the lawe of life, "which they kepte not, which ye also haue trasgressed after the. Then was this londe and the londe of Sion parted amoge you by the lot to possesse. But youre fathers and ye youre selues also haue done vnrighteousnes, a haue not kepte the wayes which the Hvest comaunded you. And for so moch as he is a righteous iudge, he toke from you in tyme the thinge that he had geuen you. And now are ye here and youre brethren amoge you. Therfore yf so be that ye wil subdue youre owne vnderstandinge, and refourme youre hert, ye shal be kepte aliue, a after death shal ye opteyne mercy. For after death shall the judgment come, whan we shall lyue agayne: and then shal the names of the righteous be manifest, and y names of the vngodly with their workes shalbe declared. Let no mã therfore come now vnto me, ner axe eny question at me these xl. dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded ] me) and we wente in to the felde, and remayned there. The next daye a voyce called me sayege: 'Eszdras, Open thy mouth, a drynke that I geue the. The opened I my mouth, g beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full of water, but the colour of it was like fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And whā I had dronken it, my hert had vnderstondinge, and wyszdome grew in my brest: for my sprete was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut no more. The Hyest gaue vnderstondinge vnto the fyue men, y they wrote y hye thiges of the night, which they vnderstode not. But in the night they ate bred: as for me, I spake in the daye, and helde not my tonge by night. In xl. dayes, they wrote two hundreth a foure bokes.

And it happened whā the xl. dayes were fulfilled, that the Hyest spake, sayenge: The first that thou hast wryttē, speake openly, ý the worthy and vnworthy maye rede it. But kepe  $\hat{y}$  lxx. last, ý thou mayest shew it onely to soch as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is the sprynge of vnderstödinge, the fountayne of wyszdome, and the streame of knowlege. And I dyd so.

The rb. Chapter.

And then shal there come greate raynes from  $\psi$  south and from the north, and parte from the west, and from the stormy wynde from the east, and shal shutt them vp agayne, g the cloude which he raysed vp in wrath, and the starre to cause feare towarde y east and west wynde, shalbe destroyed, a the greate cloudes shalbe lift vp, and y mightie cloudes full of wrath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afrayed and the vdwell therin, and that they may pour out ouer all places an horrible starre, fyre and hale and flyenge swerdes, and many waters: y all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, g they shal breake downe the cities a walles, mountaynes g hylles, all trees, wod, and the grasse of the medowes, and all their frute. And they shal go stedfast vnto Babilon, and make her afrayed, they shal come to her and besege her: the starre and all wrath shal they poure out vpon her.

Then shal the dust and smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shal bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her, shal do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia ½ cõfortest thyself also vpõ the hope of Babilon, and art a worshipe of hir personne: Wo be vnto the thou wretch, because thou hast made thyself like vnto her, α hast decte ½ daughters ī whordome, that they might tryumphe and please thy louers, which haue allwaye desyred to cõmytte whordome with the: thou hast folowed the abhominable cite in all hir workes and invencions.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyl sende plages vpon the, wyddowhode, pouerte, hōger, warres, and pestilence, to waist thy houses with destruccion and death, and the glory of thy power shal be dryed vp as a floure, whan  $\mathring{v}$ heate aryseth  $\mathring{y}$  is sent ouer the. Yf thou haddest not allwaye slayne my chosen, exaltinge the stroke of thy handes, and sayde ouer their death, whan thou wast dronkē: set forth the bewtye of thy countenaunce.

The rewards of thy whordome shalls recompensed the in thy bosome, therfore shalt thou receaue \* rewards. Like as thou hast done vnto my chosen  $\mathbf{a}$ (sayeth the LORDE) euen so shal God do vnto the, and shal delyuer the in to the plage. Thy childrē shal dye of honger,  $\mathfrak{g}$  thou shalt fall thorow  $\mathfrak{f}$  swerde. Thy cities shalbe broken downe,  $\mathfrak{g}$  all thine shal perish with the swerde in  $\mathfrak{f}$  felde. They  $\mathfrak{f}$  be in  $\mathfrak{f}$  moūtaynes shal dye of honger,  $\mathfrak{g}$  eate their owne flesh,  $\mathfrak{g}$ drinke their owne bloude for very höger of bred and thyrst of water. Thou vnhappie shalt come thorow the see,  $\mathfrak{g}$  receaue plages agayne.

In the passage they shal caste downe the slayne cite,  $\mathfrak{q}$  shal rote out one parte of  $\hat{\mathfrak{y}}$ londe,  $\mathfrak{q}$  cosume the porcion of thy glory. They shal treade the downe like stuble,  $\mathfrak{q}$ they shalbe thy fyre and shal consume the: thy cities and thy londe, thy wod and thy frutefull trees shal they burne vp with the fyre. Thy children shal they cary awaye captyue, and loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marre the bewtie of thy face.

The rbi. Chapter.

WO vnto the Babilon a Asia, wo vnto § A Egipte a Syria: gyrde youre selues with clothes of sack a hayre, and mourne for youre childre, be sory, for youre destruccion is at honde. A swerde is sent vpon you, a who wil turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amōge you, a who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, a what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? Maye eny man dryue awaye an högrie lyon in the wod? Or maye eny mā quench the fyre in the stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arowe,  $\dot{\mathbf{y}}$  is shot of a stronge archer? The mightie LORDE sendeth the plages, a what is he that wil dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled a gone forth in his wrath, and what is he that will quench it? He shall cast lightenynges, and who shal not feare? He shal thonder, and who shall not be afrayed? The LORDE shal threaten, and who shal not vtterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quaketh, a the foundacions theref:  $\hat{y}$  see aryseth up with wawes from the depe, and the floudes of it are vnquyete,  $\pi$  the fishes thereof also before the LORDE,  $\alpha$  before the glory of his power. |  |  |

The angell Raphael sayde vnto him: Axest thou after the kynred of an hyrelinge, or sekest thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azarias the sonne of greate Hananias. And Tobias answered: Thou art come of a greate kynred, but I praye  $\hat{y}$ , be not displeased, that I desyred to knowe thy kynred. The angell sayde vnto him: Thy sonne shal I lede forth safely, and brynge him whole to the agayne.

D Then answered Tobias, and sayde : well, go on youre waie, and God be in youre iourney, and his angell beare you company. So whan they had prepared all thinges,  $\frac{1}{2}$  they wolde take with them in their iourney, Tobias bad his father  $\alpha$  his mother fare well, and they wente on their waye both together. Now whan they were gone, his mother beganne to wepe, and sayde : "The staff of oure age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent him awaye. Yf we had bene content with oure pouerte, this had bene greate riches vnto vs, that we sawe oure sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: wepe not, oure sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde,  $\mathfrak{g}$  thine eyes shall se him. For I trust, that  $\hat{y}$  good angell of God shal beare him copany, and ordre well all the thinges that he doth: so that he shal come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother left of fro wepynge,  $\mathfrak{g}$  helde hir tonge.

The bi. Chapter.

 $S O Tobias wente on his waye, and a dogg folowed him, and <math>\hat{y}$  first night they abode by the water of Tigris. Then wente he out to wash his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fish to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cried with a loude voyce, sayenge : LORDE, he commeth vpon me. And the angell sayde vnto him : Take him by the cheke blade, and drawe him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpō the londe, and the fish beganne to leape at his fete.

The sayde the angell vnto him: Take out the bowels of this fish, and as for the hert, the gall and the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thinges are necessary and good for medicyne. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fish, and they toke him with them in their iourney: the residue they salted, as moch as was sufficient for them, till they came to Rages. Then Tobias axed the angell, and sayde vnto him: I praye  $\hat{y}$  brother Azarias, tell me, wher to are these thinges good of the fish, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered him and sayde: Yf thou layest a pece of the hert vpon the coales, the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euell spretes, whether it be from man or from woman, so that from thence forth  $\mathring{y}$  same shal come nomore vnto them. The gall is good to anoynte or to strake  $\mathring{y}$  eyes withall, where as there is eny blemish in them, so shal they be whole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him : where wilt C thou that we remayne? 'The angell answered and saide: Here is a nye kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, a hath nether sonne ner daughter but her. All his good belogeth vnto the, and thou must mary his daughter: and therfore desyre her at her father, and he shal geue her the to wife. Then answered Tobias a sayde: As I vnderstonde, she hath bene maried vnto seuen huszbandes, and they all are deed: and I haue herde saye, that the deuell slew them. I am afrayed therfore, lest soch thinges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seinge I am the onely sonne of my father and my mother) I shulde brynge the in their age with sorow to their graues.

Then sayde  $\mathring{y}$  angell Raphael vnto him : Heare me, and I will tell the, what they be of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they that receaue mariage of soch a fashio, that they shut God out from the and from their light of oure eyes, thou staff of oure age, thou comforte of oure life, "thou hope of oure generacion? Seinge all  $\mathring{y}$  thinges that we haue are onely in the, we shulde not haue sent the awaye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and be not discomforted, oure sonne is whole and sounde: the man y we sent him withall, is faithfull ynough. Neuertheles she might in no wyse be coforted: but daylie wente out, loked aboute, and wente aboute all the stretes, wherby she thought he shulde come againe: that (yf it were possible) she might se him comynge afarre of.

But Raguel saide vnto his sonne ī lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messaūger vnto thy father Tobias, to tell him ý thou art in good health. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father and my mother counte euery daye, and that their hertes are sory.

So whan Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes,  $\alpha$  he wolde in no wyse heare him, he delyuered Sara vnto him,  $\alpha$  the half parte of all his good: in seruauntes and handmaydēs, in shepe, in camels, and in kyne and moch money, and so sent him awaye from him with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy angell of the LORDE be with you in youre iourney, and brynge you forth safe  $\alpha$  sounde, that ye maye fynde all thinges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre children, afore I dye.

So the elders enbraced their daughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exortinge her to honoure hir father and mother in lawe, to louc hir huszbande, to rule well hir huszsholde, to kepe hir house in good ordre, and to shew hir self fautlesse.

The ri. Chapter.

N OW as they were goinge homewarde againe, vpon  $\hat{y}$  xj. daye they came to Charra, which lyeth in the half waye towarde Niniue. And the angell sayde : Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father : therfore yf it please the, we two wyll go before, and let the husholde with thy wife and  $\hat{y}$  catell come soft g fayrly after vs. And whan Tobias was content that they shulde go before, Raphael sayde vnto him : Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, and they wente their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat daylie by the waye syde vpon  $\hat{y}$ toppe of an hill, from whence she might se farre aboute her.

And whyle she was waytinge there for his 38 comynge, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceased hir sonne comminge, and ranne and tolde hir huszbande, sayenge: beholde, thy sonne commeth. And Raphael savde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worshipe the LORDE thy God, and geue thankes vnto him: then go to thy father, and kysse him, a strake his eyes ouer with the gall of y fish, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure, that his eyes shal straight waye be opened, and thy father shal se the light of heauen, and shal reioyse at the sight of the. Then the dogg that had bene with them in their iourney, rane before, and came as a messauger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So $ blynde father arose, and beganne to renne, and stombled with his fete, and gaue a seruaunt his hande, ranne to mete his sonne, receaued him, and kyssed him, he and his wife, and beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now whan they had worshipped a thanked God, they satt downe. Then toke Tobias of the fishes gall, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taried half an houre, and then beganne the blemysh to go out of his eyes, like as it had bene the whyte szkynne of an egg: which Tobias toke and drew from his eyes, and immediatly he receaued his sight.

Then they praysed God, he and his wife, B and all they that knew him. And Tobias savde: O LORDE God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wife also whole and sounde with all § housholde and catell, with camels and moch money of his wyues, and with the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde his father and his mother all the benefites, which God had done for him, by the man that led him. Achior also and Nabath Tobias sister sonnes came and were glad, a reioysed with him, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto him.

And so for § space of seuen dayes they made mery, and were right ioyfull euerichone.

The rii. Chapter.

A THE Tobias called his sonne vnto him c sayde: What maye we geue this holy man, that wente with the? Tobias answered his father and sayde: Father, what rewarde shal we geue him? Or what thinge can deserue his benefites? He hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne : he receaued the money from Gabelus, he caused me to get my wife, he droue the euell sprete from her, he hath bene occasio of gladnesse to hir father and mother: he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fish, he hath made the to se the light of heauen, yee we all have receaued greate good of him. How shulde we worthely deserve these thinges vnto him? But I praye the my father, that thou wilt desyre him, yf happlie he wil voutsafe, to take with him the half of all that we have brought.

33 So the father and the sonne called him, toke him asyde, and beganne to praye him, that he wolde be content to take in good worth, the half parte of all that they had brought. Then sayde he secretly vnto them : Prayse § God of heauen, and geue thankes vnto him before all men lyuynge, for he hath shewed his mercy * vnto vs. It is good to hyde the Kynges secrete, but to shew and to prayse y workes of God, it is an honorable thinge. Prayer is good with fastinge, and to geue allmes is better, then to hoorde vp treasures of golde. "For allmes delyuereth from death, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastinge life, But they that do synne and vnrighteousnes, are y enemies of their owne soules.

♥ Wherfore I tell you the trueth, and wyll hyde nothinge from you. <sup>b</sup> Whan thou praydest with teares, and burydest the deed, and leftest thy dyner, and hyddest the deed in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou mightest burye them in the night, I offred thy prayer before the LORDE. And because thou wast accepte and beloued of God, it was necessary, that tentacion shulde trye the. <sup>c</sup> And now hath the LORDE sent me to heale the, and to delyuer Sara ŷ sonnes wife from the euell sprete. For I am Raphael an angell, one of the seuen that stonde before God.

Whā they herde this, they were sore afrayed,

• Some rede, vnto ycu. • Tob. 4. b. Dani. 4. d. • Tob. 2. a. • Prou. 3. b. and trembled, and fell downe vpon their faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the angell: Peace be with you, feare not. Where as I haue bene with you, it is the will of God, geue prayse and thankes vnto him.

<sup>4</sup> You thought that I dyd eate and drinke with you, but I vse meate that is invisible, and drynke that can not be sene of men.

Now therfore is § tyme that I must turne agayne, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderous workes.

And whan he had spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of their sight, so  $\dot{y}$ they sawe him nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and praysed God: and whan they rose vp, they tolde all his woderous workes.

The rif. Chapter.

THEN olde Tobias opened his mouth, 🕱 and praysed the LORDE and savde: Greate art thou o LORDE for euermore, and thy kyngdome worlde without ende: for <sup>t</sup> thou scourgest and healest, thou ledest vnto hell, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none v maye escape thy hande. O geue thankes vnto v LORDE ve children of Israel, and prayse him in the sight of the Heithē. For amonge the Heithen which knowe him not hath he scatred you, to the intet that ye shulde shew forth his maruelous workes: a cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God allmightie but he. He hath chastened vs for oure myszdedes, and for his owne mercy sake shal he saue vs.

Considre then, how he hath dealt with you, g prayse him with feare and drede, and magnific the euerlastinge kynge in youre workes.

I wil prayse him euen in the londe of my 33captiuyte, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore O ye synners, and do righteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he wyl shew his mercy vpon you. As for me  $\mathfrak{g}$  my soule, we wil reioyse in God. O prayse the LORDE all ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto him.  $\mathcal{I}$  O Ierusalem thou cite of God, the LORDE hath punyshed the for the workes of thine owne handes. O prayse the LORDE in thy good thinges,  $\mathfrak{q}$

ND after that Tobias had gottë his sight agayne,<sup>4</sup> he lyued two and xl. yeares,  $\alpha$  sawe his childers children. Now whan he was an hundreth and two yeare olde, he dyed,  $\alpha$  was buried honorably in Niniue. For whan he was sixe and fiftie yeares of age, he lost the sight of his eyes, and whā he was thre score yeare olde, he gat his sight agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioye, and

But in  $\hat{y}$  houre of his death he called vnto him his sonne Tobias, and seuen yonge springaldes his sonnes children, and sayde vnto them: The destruccion of Niniue is at hande," for the word of the LORDE can not fayle, and oure brethren that are scatred out of the londe of Israel, shal come thither agayne. And the whole londe of it that hath bene waist, shalbe fylled: I and the house of God that was brent in it, shalbe buylded againe,  $\mathfrak{q}$ all soch as feare God shall returne thither: the Heithen also shal forsake their Idols,  $\mathfrak{g}$ come to Ierusalem, and dwell there, and all the kynges of the earth shalbe glad of her, and worshipe the LORDE God of Israel.

And therfore my children, heare youre father: Serue the LORDE in faithfulnes,<sup>6</sup> seke after his will, and do the thinge that pleaseth him. Commaunde youre children  $\dot{y}$  they do right, geue allmes, be myndefull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto him in trueth and with all their power. ## The first Chapter.

A RPHAXAT the kynge of the Medes subdued many people vnto his dominion, q buylded a noble ströge cite, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of fre stone, foure squared, seuëtie cubites hye, and thirtie cubites brode. He made towres therevpon of an hundreth cubites hye. But vpon the foure corners euery syde was twentie fote brode. He made the portes in the heith, like as the towres. This kynge trusted in his nightie hoost, q in his glorious charettes.

So in  $\mathbf{\hat{y}}$  twolft yeare of his raigne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor  $\mathbf{\hat{y}}$  kynge of the Assirians (which raigned in the greate cite of Niniue) fought agaynst Arphaxat, and ouercame hī in  $\mathbf{\hat{y}}$  greate felde called Ragau, besyde Euphrates and Tigris and Iadason in the felde of Erioth the kinge of the Elikes.

B Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his hert was lift vp:" and he sent voto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vrito the Heithen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to soch as dwelt in Galile in the greate felde of Eszdrelo, to all them that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Ierusalem and the whole londe of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kynge of y Assirians sende messaungers. But they all with one consent wolde not agree vnto him, and sent the messaungers agayne emptie, and put the awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonosor the kynge toke indignacio at all those londes, and sware by his trone a by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all these countrees.

The ij. Chapter.

X IN the xiij. yeare of kynge Nabuchodonosor, vpon the xxij. daye of  $rac{1}{7}$  first moneth, it was deuysed in the courte of Nabuchodonosor  $rac{1}{7}$  kynge of the Assiriās, that he wolde defende himself. So he called vnto him all  $rac{1}{7}$ elders, all his captaynes and men of warre, and shewed them his secrete councell, and tolde them, that his purpose was, to brynge the whole earth vnder his domynion. Now whan they were all content with this sayenge, Nabuchodonosor the kinge called Holofernes

Then Holofernes called together all the 15 captaynes a rulers of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the soudyers vnto the hoost (like as the kynge commaunded him) namely, an hundreth and twetye thousande fightinge men vpon fote, and twolue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sent he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the hoost was well prouvded for with oxen, and small catell, and y without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his hoost. Moch golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and all his hoost, with charettes, horsmen, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, like the greshoppers.

And whan he was gone past the borders of [a]the Assirians, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpon the left syde of Celicia: and so he wente vp in to all their castels, and wanne euery stroge holde. As for y welthy citie of Melothus, he brake it downe, a spoyled all the childre of Tharsis and the Ismaelites, which laye towarde the wyldernes and vpon the south syde of § londe of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe all the hye cities that were there, from the broke of Mambre tyll a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in from Celicia vnto the coastes of Iaphet towarde the south. He caried awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all their goodes : c who so euer withstode him, he slew them with the swerde. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruest, and brent vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cutt downe. And the feare of him fell vpon all them that dwelt in y earth.

- Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with horsemē g greate power, and conquered all stronge fensed cities, and all that dwelt in the londe. And out of all cities he toke stronge men, g soch as were mete for ŷ warre, to helpe him. There came soch a feare also vpon those countrees, that the indwellers of all the cities, the prynces and rulers g the people together, "wete forth to mete him as he came, g receaued him honorably with garlandes g torches, with daunses, tabrettes and pipes.
- C Neuertheles though they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigorous stomak : but he destroyed their cities, a hewed downe their woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kynge had commaunded him, that he shulde rote out all the goddes of the londe: to  $\hat{y}$  intent that he onely might be called and taken for God. of the nacions which Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wente he thorow Syria Sobal, and thorow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans in the lode of Gabaa and Septopoli, and toke their cities, and remayned there thirtie dayes, wherin he caused all the whole multitude of his hoost to be gathered together.

The iiij. Chapter.

A WHAN the children of Israel y dwelt in Iewry herde this, they were sore afrayed of him. There came soch tremblinge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shulde do vnto the cite of Ierusalem and the temple of the LORDE, as he had done to other cities g their temples. Eliachim also y prest wrote vnto all the that dwelt towarde Eszdrelon (which lyeth ouer agaynst y greate felde by Dotha Im) a vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shulde take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wherby there might be eny waye and passage to Ierusalem, g y they shulde holde diligent watch, where eny strate waye was betwixte y moūtaynes. And the children of Israel dyd, as Eliachim B the prest of the LORDE had commaunded them. 'And all the people, cried earnestly, and humbled their soules with fastinges and prayers, they and their wyues. The prestes put on hayrie clothes, and layed the yonge babes before the temple of the LORDE, and couered the aulter of the LORDE with an hayrie clothe. And with one acorde cried they vnto the LORDE God of Israel, that their children shulde not be geuen in to a pray, and their wyues in to a spoyle, y their cities shulde not be layed waist, a y their Sanctuary shulde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the Heithen.

Then Eliachim the hyperstof the LORDE  $| \mathfrak{C} |$ wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto them, sayenge: Be ye sure, y the LORDE wil heare youre peticions, yf ye cotynue stedfast in fastinges and prayers in y sight of the LORDE. wroth, g thought to slaye him, g sayde one to another: what is he this, which darre saie, y y childre of Israel are able to withstode Nabuchodonosor the kynge g his hoost? where as they are an vnwapened people, without stregth or vnderstödinge of § fettes of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe, y he hath disceaued vs, we wil go vp in to \$ moutaynes: a whan the mightie men of the are taken, he also shalbe stickte with the swerde, y all people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

The bi. Chapter.

a CO whan they had left of speakinge, Holo-T fernes toke sore indignacion, a sayde For so moch as thou hast vnto Achior. prophecied vnto vs, sayenge: that the people of Israel "shalbe defended of their God, I will shew the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee whan we slaye them all as one man, 'thou also shalt perish with them thorow the swerde of the Assirians, g all Israel shal be destroyed with the, g the shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is the LORDE of the whole earth. The shal the swerde of my knyghthode go thorow thy sydes, a thou shalt fall downe stickte amonge the wounded of Israel, g shalt not come to thy self agayne, but be vtterly destroyed with the. But yf thou thynkest thy prophecy to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy coloure? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be per-B fourmed? But that thou mayest knowe, that thou shalt fele these thinges with the, beholde, from this houre forth wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that whan the punyshment of my swerde (which they have worthely deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punyshed with them.

So Holofernes comaunded his seruauntes to take Achior, a to cary him vnto Bethulia, and to delyuer him in to the handes of the children of Israel. Then Holofernes seruaūtes toke him, a wēte thorow the playne felde. But whan they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the slynge casters came out agaynst them: Neuertheles they gat them awaye by the syde of the mountayne, a bounde Achior hand g fote to a tre, g so left him bounde with wythies, a turned agayne vnto their lorde.

Notwithstödinge the children of Israel wente downe fro Bethulia, came vnto him, lowsed him, brought him to Bethulia, set him in the myddest of the people, and axed him what the matter was, that the Assirias had left him bounde.

Osias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of  $\mathbb{C}$ Symeon, a Charmim (which is also called Gothoniel) were the pryncipall rulers at the same tyme. Now whan Achior stode in the myddest of the Senatours, g before the all, he tolde them, 'what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thinge that he axed him, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slavne him for so sayenge, a how Holofernes himself was wroth, a comaunded him for the same cause to be delyuered vnto y Israelites: that whan he ouercame the childre of Israel he might commaunde Achior also to be put to 19 death with dyuerse tormentes, because he sayde: "the God of heauen is their defender.

And wha Achior had playnely tolde out all these thinges, all the people fell downe vpon their faces, praysinge the LORDE, and poured out their prayers together vnto the LORDE, with a generall complaynte a wepynge, a sayde: O LORDE God of heauen a earth, beholde their pryde, a loke vpon oure lowlynes, a cosidre how it standeth with thy sayntes, a make it to be knowne, y thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, a how y thou bringest the lowe, y presume of the selues, a make their boast in their owne strength. So whan the wepinge H and prayer of the people (which they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they coforted Achior, sayege: the God of oure fathers, whose power a strength thou hast praysed, shall so rewarde the, y thou shalt rather se their destruccion. Whan & LORDE oure God then shall geue his seruauntes this liberte, God be with the also amonge vs: so  $\dot{\mathbf{y}}$  if it please  $\dot{\mathbf{v}}$ , thou with thyne may est dwell with vs.

Now whan Osias had ended the councell, he toke him in to his house, and made a greate supper, called all the elders to it, g so they refreszshed them selues after the fastinge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers all the night

The bij. Chapter.

- THE next daye Holofernes commaunded A | his hoost, to go vp agaynst Bethulia. There were 'an C. a xx. thousande fightinge men on fote, a two a twentie thousande horsmē, besyde the preparynge of them y were wonne, a came to them on euery syde out of the countrees a cities which he had takč. All these prepared them selues vnto the battayll agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hyll syde, vnto the topp that loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon y lyeth towarde Eszdrelon.
- в Now whan the childre of Israel sawe so greate a multitude of the Assirians, they fell downe flat vpon y grounde, strowed aszshes vpon their heades, g prayed with one acorde, y the God of Israel wolde show his mercy vpon his people. And so they toke their weapens,  $\alpha$  sat betwixte the mountagenes in vnarow place, a kepte the waye daye a night. But whyle Holofernes was goinge aboute, he founde the water springe, which from the south syde was conveyed in to the cite by a condyte: this comaunded he to be directe another waye, g to cut their condite in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, which they vsed secretly, more for pleasure then for necessite.
- C Then wente the Ammonites of the Moabites vnto Holofernes, and sayde : The children of Israel trust nether in speare ner arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest ouercome them therfore without y strykynge of eny battavll, sett me to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them : so shalt thou destroye the without swerde, or at the least they shall be so feble, that they must be fayne to geue ouer the cite, which they thinke not able to be wone, for so moch as it lieth in the mou-These wordes pleased Holofernes taynes. well and all his men of warre, and he 'set an hundreth men at euery well rounde aboute.
- And when this watch had endured twentye 圓 dayes, the Cisternes and all that had water, fayled them that dwelt in the cite of Bethulia, so that in y whole cite they had not drynke ynough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylie in a measure. Then came the men and women, yonge personnes and children all vnto Osias, and sayde all with one voyce : 'God be judge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs: thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assirians, therfore hath God solde vs in their handes, and there is no man to helpe vs. where as we are brought downe before their eyes in thirste and greate destruccion. Therfore gather now together all the people that be in the cite, that we maye all yelde oure selues wyllingly vnto y people of Holofernes: for better it is y we be captyue and prayse the LORDE with oure lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scorne g shamed of euery man whan we se oure wyues and children dye before oure eyes. We take heaven a earth this daye to recorde, and the God of oure fathers (which punysheth vs acordinge to the deseruynge of oure synnes) and geue you warnynge, y ye geue vp the cite now in to y power of Holofernes hoost, that oure ende maye be shorte with the swerde, which els shal endure longe for wante of water and for thirst.

Whan they had spoke out these wordes, E there was a greate wepynge and howlynge in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voice, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers,<sup>d</sup> we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly. Thou y art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punysh oure vnrighteousnes with thine owne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowlege the, vnto a people which knoweth the not, lest they saye amonge the Heithen: 'where is their God?

And whan they were so weery with this crienge and wepynge, that they helde their tunges, Osias stode vp with watrye eyes, and savde: 'O take good hertes vnto you (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyne dayes for mercy of the LORDE: peraduenture he shal cut awaye his indignacion, and geue glory vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not whan these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The biij. Chapter.

ND it happened whan these wordes A came to the eares of Iudith a wyddow, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idox, the sonne of Ioseph, the sonne of Osias, the sonne of Elai, ŷ sonne of Iammor, the sonne of Iedeon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, the sonne of Euam, § sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, y sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And hir huszbande was called Manasses, which dyed in the dayes of the barlye haruest. For whyle he was byndinge ŷ sheeues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his heade, and he dyed at Bethulia his cite, and there was he buried B beside his fathers. Now was Iudith his desolate wyddow thre yeares a six monethes. And in the hyer partes of hir house she made hirself a preuy chambre, where she dwelt, beynge closed in with hir maydes. She ware a smock of havre, and fasted all the dayes of hir life, excepte the Sabbathes, and new moones g the solempne dayes that the people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayre and beutyfull personne. Hyr husbande also had lefte her greate riches, a plenteous housholde, greate vnmoueable possessions and many catell. This Iudith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for she feared the LORDE greatly, and there was no body that speake an euell worde of her.

Whā this Iudith herde, how Osias had promised the people, "that after the fyffte daye he wolde geue vp y cite vnto the Assirians, she sent for the elders Chambri and Charmin: and whan they came to her, she sayde : what thinge is this, wherin Osias hath consented, v yf God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wil geue ouer the cite to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempte the LORDE? This deuyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Wyl ye set the mercy of § LORDE a tyme, t appoynte him a daye after youre wyll?

C Neuertheles for so moch as the LORDE is pacient, let vs rather amende oure selues, pouringe out teares, and besekynge him of grace. 'For God threateneth not as a ma, nether wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the meke sprete, and with wepynge eyes saye vnto the LORDE, that he deale with vs acordinge to his owne wyll and mercy: that like as oure hert is now vexed, g brought lowe thorow the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thorow his grace: in so moch as we followe not the synnes of oure fathers, which forsoke their God, g worshipped other goddes: 'for the which synne they perished with the swerde. were spoyled g brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely him, for whose coforte let vs tarry with mekenesse. He shall requyre and make 'inquisicion for oure bloude, from the vexacions of oure enemies: he shal brynge downe all the Heithen, that ryse vp agaynst vs, and put them to dishonoure, euë the LORDE oure God.

Therfore deare brethren, seinge ye are the B honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all y people haue respecte, and vpon whom the life of the people stondeth, lift vp their hertes with youre exortacion, y they maye call to remembraunce, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, y they might be proued, yf they worshipped their God a right. They ought to remebre, how oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and tryed thorow many tribulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was <sup>s</sup> Isaac, so was Iacob, so was Moses, and all, they that pleased God, beinge tryed thorow many troubles, were foude stedfast in faith. Agayne, they that receaued not their tentacions with the feare of God, but put the selues "forth with vnpaciency and murmurynge agaynst God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shulde not we vndertake to be auenged, for the thinge that is done vnto vs: but to considre, that all these punyshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes a myszdedes: Beleuynge also, that this correccion commeth vnto vs (as to the 'seruauntes of God) for amendment, and not for oure destruccion.

Then sayde Osias a the elders vnto Iudith: ] All that thou speakest, is true, and no ma can reproue thy wordes. Praie thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy

Thus haue I deuysed: 'Ye shal stöde this night before the porte, and I wyll go forth with Abra my maydē: Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyl graciously remēbre his people of Israel within fyue daies, as ye haue sayde. As for the thinge that I go in hande withall, axe ye no questions of it, tyll I open it vnto you myself: do ye nothinge els, but praye vnto the LORDE youre God for me. Then Osias the prynce of the people of Iuda sayde vnto her: Go thy waye in peace, the LORDE be with the, that we maye be auenged of oure enemies, And so they wente from her agayne.

The ir. Chapter.

NOW what they were gone their way, Judith wente in to hir oratory, put on A an hayrie smock, strowed aszhes vpon hir heade, fell downe before the LORDE, and cryed vnto him, sayenge: O LORDE God of my father 'Symeon, which gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemies, that vsed violence and wilfulnes, and that rauyshed $ vyrgin and put her to dishonesty. Thou that gauest their wives in to a praye, and their daughters in to captivyte, and all their praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zele vnto the, helpe me wyddow, O LORDE my God, I beseke §. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnynge, and loke what thou hast taken in hande and deuysed, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, g thy judgmentes are done in thy euerlastinge fore knowlege. 0 loke now vpon the armyes of the Assirians, like as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpon the hoost of the "Egipcians, whan they beynge weapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, a put their trust in their charettes, horsmen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokedest vpon their hoost, castinge a thick darcknes before them: and whan they came in to the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euē so LORDE let it go with these, that 12 trust in § power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charettes, ' arowes a speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art oure God, which destroyest warres from the begynnynge, and that thou art the LORDE. O lift vp thine arme now like as euer from y begynnynge, and in thy power brynge their power to naught, cause their might to fall in thy wrath. They make their boast, y they wyl vnhalowe and defyle thy Sanctuary, and to waist the tabernacle of thy name, and to cast downe the horne of thine aulter with their swerde. Brynge to passe (O LORDE) y the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his owne swerde: that he maie be taken with the snare of his eyes in me, and v thou mayest smyte him with the lippes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyse him and his strength, and that I maye destroye him.

This shal brynge thy name an euerlastinge  $\mathbb{C}$ remēbraunce, yf the hande of a woman 'ouerthrowe him. For thy power (O LORDE) stondeth not in \$ power of men, nether hast thou eny pleasure in the strēgth of horses. There was neuer proude personne that pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and LORDE of all creatures, heare me poore woman, callynge vpon the, and puttynge my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy "couenaunt O LORDE, and mynister wordes in my mouth, g stablysh this deuyce in my hert, that thy house maye contynue still in holynes, and that all the Heithen maye knowe and vnderstöde, that thou art God, and that there is none other but thou.

The r. Chapter.

ND whan she had left of cryenge vnto the LORDE, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before the LORDE, and called hir mayde, wente downe in to hir house, layed ŷ hayrie cloth from her, *put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhode, waszshed hir body, anoynted hir self with precious thinges of swete sauoure, broyded and plated hir hayre, sett an hooue vpon hir

The LORDE gaue her also a speciall beutye and fayrnesse (for all this deckinge of hir self was not done for eny volupteousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discrecion and vertue, therfore dyd the LORDE increase hir bewtye) so ŷ she was exceadinge amyable and welfauoured in all mens eyes. She gaue hir mayde also a bottell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cakes, bred ¢ chese, and wente hir waye.

13 Now whan she came to the porte of the cite, she founde Osias and the elders of the cite waitinge there. Which whan they sawe her, they were astonnyed,  $\mathfrak{g}$  marueled greatly at her bewty, neuertheles they axed no question at her, but let her go, sayenge: The God of oure fathers geue  $\mathfrak{F}$  his grace, and with his power performe all the deuyce of thy hert: that Ierusalem maye reioyse ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy  $\mathfrak{g}$  righteous. And all they  $\mathfrak{F}$  were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the sprynge of the daye, the spyes of § Assirians met with her, and toke her, sayenge : whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of § Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shalbe geuē vnto you to be spoyled: because they thought scorne to yelde the selues vnto you, that they might fynde mercy in youre sight. Therfore haue I deuysed by my self after this maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell him all their secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of his hoost shall perish.

Then saide his seruauntes: who wolde despyse vpeople of v Iewes, v haue so fayre wemē? Shulde we not by reason fight against the for these? So wha Iudith sawe Holofernes syttinge in a canapye, v was wrought of purple, sylke, golde, Smaragde and precious stones, she loked fast vpō him, g fell downe vpō the earth. And Holofernes seruaūtes toke hir vp agayne, at their lordes commaundement.

The ri. Chapter.

THEN sayde Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thine hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wolde serue Nabuchodonosor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despysed me, I shulde not haue lift vp a speare agaynst thē. But tell me now, what is the cause y thou art departed from them, and wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Iudith sayde vnto him: Syr, vnderstonde the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wilt do after y wordes of thy hadmayden, the LORDE shall brynge thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the londe lyueth, g as truly as his power lyueth, which is in the to the punyshment of all men that go wronge, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but all the beestes also of y felde. For all people speake of thy prudet activite, and it hath euer bene reported, how thou onely art good and mightie in all his kyngdome, and thy discrecion is commeded in all londes.

The thinge is manifest also, that Achior spake," and it is wel knowne, what thou commaūdedst to do vnto him. For this is plaine and of a suretye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hath shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, how that for their synnes he wyl delyuer them ouer vnto the enemie. maye drynke the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbydde the to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seinge now that they do these thinges, it is a playne case, C y they must nedes be destroyed. Which whan I thy handmayden perceased, I fled from theni, and the LORDE hath sent me vnto y, to shew the these thinges. For I thy handmayden worshipe God euen here now besyde the, and thy honde mayden shal go forth, and I wil make my praier vnto God, and he shal tell me, whan he wyl rewarde the their synne: then shal I come and shew the, a brynge the thorow the myddest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt have all y people of Israel, as the shepe without a shepherde: there shal not so moch as one dogg barck agaynst the, for these thinges are shewed me by the prouydence of God: and for so moch as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to tell the the same. 册 These wordes pleased Holofernes and all his servieuntes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not soch a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hither before thy people, that thou mayest geue them in to oure handes. And for so moch as thy promyse is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shalbe spoken of in all the londe.

Che rij. Chapter.

A THEN commaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue hyr dwellynge there, and appoynted, what shulde be geuen her frō his table. Iudith answered him, and sayde: "As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but wyl eate of soch as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: Yf these thinges that thou hast brought with the fayle, what shal we do vnto the? And Iudith sayde: As truly as thou lyuest my lorde, thy hande mayden shall not spende all this, tyll God haue brought to passe in my hande, the thinges that I haue deuysed.

So his seruauntes brought her in to the 33 tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goinge in, she desyred that she might haue leue to go forth by night  $\mathfrak{g}$  before daye, to hir prayer and to make intercession vnto the LORDE. Then commaunded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at hir pleasure, to praye vnto hir God those thre dayes.

And so in the night season she wete forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and wasszhed hirself in the well water. Then wente she vp, and besought the LORDE God of Israel that he wolde prospere hir waye, for the delyueraunce of his people. And so she wente in, and remayned cleane in hir tent, till she toke hir meate in the euenynge.

Vpon $ fourth daye it happened, ἑ Holofernes made a costly supper vnto his seruaūtes, and sayde vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and councell this Hebruesse, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assirians, that a woman shulde so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vnmedled withall.

Then wente Vagao vnto Iudith, and sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come in to my lorde, that she maye be honoured before him, that she maye eate and drynke wyne, and be mery with him. Vnto whom Iudith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shal do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shal I thinke well done, as long as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckte hirself with hir apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes hert was whole moued, so that he brent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: drynke now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Iudith: Syr, I wil drynke, for my mynde is meryer to daye, than euer it was in all my life. And she toke and ate and dranke before him, the thinges that hir mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and dranke more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his life.

The rij. Chapter.

A OW whan it was late in the night, his seruauntes made haist, euery mā to his lodginge. And Vagao shutt the chamber dores, and wente his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne." So was Iudith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes, he laye vpon the bed all droncken, and of very dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded ludith hir mayden, to stode without before the dore, and to wayte. And Iudith stode before the bed, makynge her prayer with teares, and moued hir lippes secretly, and sayde. Strength me O LORDE God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy cite of Ierusalem, like as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I maye perfourme the thinge, which I haue deuysed thorow the beleue that I haue in the.

33 And whan she had spoken this, she wente to the bedsteade, and lowsed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she holde of the hairie lockes of his heade, and sayde: Strength me o LORDE God in this houre, and with that, she gaue him two strokes vpon the neck, and smote of his heade. Then toke she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deed body asyde. Immediatly she gat her forth, and delyuered the head of Holofernes vnto hir mayden, and bad hir put it in hir walett.

And so these two wente forth together after their custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorow the valley vnto the porte of the cite. And Iudith cried afarre of vnto  $\hat{y}$  watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And whan they herde hir voyce, they called the elders of the cite together. And they came all to mete her, litle g greate, yonge g olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lighted candels, and gathered aboute hir euerichone: but she wente vp in to an hye place, and caused sylence to be proclamed.

Whan euery man now helde his tonge, Iudith sayde: O prayse the LORDE oure God, for he hath not despysed, ner forsaken them, that put their trust in him : and in me his honde mayden he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee in my hāde this same night hath he slayne the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forth the heade of Holofernes out of the walett, and shewed it them, sayenge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assirias, and this is the canapy, wherin he laye in his dronkennes: where the LORDE oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the LORDE lyueth, his angell hath kepte me, goinge thither, remayninge there, and commynge hither agayne from thence. And the LORDE hath not suffred me his handmayden to be defyled, but without eny fylthynes of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: c ý with greate victory, so that I am escaped, and ye delyuered. O geue thankes vnto him euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.<sup>6</sup>

So they praysed the LORDE alltogether, and gaue thakes vnto him. And to her they sayde: The LORDE hath blessed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemies to naught.

And Ozias  $\check{\mathbf{y}}$  chefe ruler of the people of Israel, sayde vnto her: Blessed art thou of the LORDE the hye God, aboue all wemen vpon earth.

Blessed be the LORDE the maker of heauen and earth, which hath gyded  $\hat{y}$  a right to wounde and to smyte of the heade of the captayne of oure enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, that thy prayse shall neuer come out of the mouth of mē, which shal all waye remembre  $\hat{y}$  power of the LORDE: seinge thou hast not spared thine owne self, but put the in icoperdy, consideringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped their fall before God oure LORDE. And all the people sayde: Amē, Amen.

Achior also was called,  $\mathfrak{g}$  he came. Then sayde Iudith vnto him : The God of Israel vnto whō thou gauest wytnes, that he wolde be auenged of his enemies, euen he hath this night thorow my hande smyttē of the head of all the vnfaithfull. And that thou mayest se that it so is, beholde, this is  $\mathfrak{F}$  heade of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despysed the God of the people of Israel, and

The rij. Chapter.

- In this chapter is declared, how Mardocheus vttereth the treason of the two seruauntes agaynst the kynge, and therfore doth the kynge rewarde him.
- A T the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Thares the kynges chamberlaynes and porters of the palace. But whan he herde their deuyce, and had diligently considered their ymaginacions, he perceaued that they wente aboute, to laye their cruell "handes vpon the kynge Artaxerses: and so he certified the kinge therof. Then caused the kynge to examen § two gelded with tormentes. And whan they had graunted it, they were put to death.
- 33 This the kynge caused to be put in § Cronicles for an euerlastinge remembrauce, and Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kynge commaunded, that Mardocheus shulde do seruyce in the courte, and for this faithfulnesse of his, he gaue him a rewarde. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holden in greate honoure and reputacion in the kynges courte, vndertoke to hurte Mardocheus g his people, because of the two chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The rif. Chapter

The copie of the commaundement, which kige Artaxerses (by the entisinge of Amā) sent out in to all countres, for the destruccion of the Iewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

THE greate kynge Artaxerses which A <sup>a</sup>raigneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and seuen and twetye londes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the prynces and debytes of the countrees, which be subjecte vnto his dominion. Whan I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my dominion, my mynde was not with crueltye and wronge to exalte myself by the reason of my power: but purposed with equyte allwaye and gentylnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iuriszdiccion, and wholy to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to brynge my kingdome vnto tranquylite, that men might safely go thorow on euery syde, and to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now whan I axed my 33 councelers, how these thinges might be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellet in wyszdome, whose good wyll, trueth a faithfulnes hath oft bene shewed a proued (which was also ŷ pryncipall 🐧 next vnto ŷ kīge) Amā by name, which certified vs, how y in all lodes there was crepte in a rebellious folke, y made statutes g lawes agaynst all other people, t haue allwaye despysed the proclamed commaundementes of kynges: and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred, that soch rule shulde contynue by you a not to be Seinge now we perceaue the put downe. same, that this people alone are contrary vnto euery man, vsynge straunge and other maner a of lawes, a withstonde oure statutes and doinges, and go aboute to stablish shrewd matters, that oure kyngdome shulde neuer come to good estate and stedfastnes : Therfore haue we commaūded, that all they that are appoynted in wrytinge and shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordened and set ouer all oure busynes, and the most pryncipall next vnto the kynge, and in maner as a father) shal with their wives g children be destroyed and roted out with the swerde of their enemies and aduersaries: c y there shalbe no mercy shewed, a no man spared. And this shalbe done y xiiij. daye of the moneth called Adar) of this yeare, that they which of olde (and now also) have ever bene rebellious, maye in one daye with violence be thrust downe in to the hell, to the inter that after this maner, oure empyre maye haue peace and tranquylite.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the 3 workes and noble actes of § LORDE, g made his prayer vnto him, sayenge: O LORDE LORDE, thou valeaunt and allmightie kynge (for all thinges are in thy power, and yf thou wilt helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mā that can withstode ner lett the : for thou hast made heaven a earth, and what wonderous thinge so euer is vnder the heauen: thou art LORDE of all thinges, and there is no man,  $\psi$ can resist the O LORDE) Thou knowest all thinges, thou wotest LORDE, that it was nether of malyce, ner presumpcion, ner for eny desyre of glory, that I wolde not bowe downe myself ner worshipe yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene cotent, and y with good wyll, yf it might haue

The rb. Chapter.

Quene Hester appeareth before the kynge, with an heuy hert for the trouble of hir people, and God turneth the kynges hert.

ND vpon § thirde daye it happened, A that Hester" layed awaye y mournynge garmetes, and put on hir glorious apparell, and decte hirself goodly (after that she had called vpon God, which is the beholder a Sauioure of all thinges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned hir self, as one  $\mathbf{\dot{v}}$  was tender: the other followed her, and bare the trayne of hir vesture. The shyne of hir bewtye made hir face rose coloured. The similitude of hir face was chearfull and amyable, but hir hert was soroufull for greate feare. She wente in thorow all the dores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sat vpon the trone of his kingdome, and was clothed in his goodly araye, all of golde, and sett with precious stones, and he was very terryble. He lift vp his face, that shone in the clearnes, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and faynt, leaned hir self vpon the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

36 Neuertheles God turned § kynges mynde, that he was gentle,<sup>b</sup> that he leape out of his seate for feare, and gat her in his armes, a helde hir vp tyll she came to herself agayne. He gaue her louynge wordes also, a sayde vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare, thou shalt not dye : for oure commaundement toucheth the comons, not the. Come nye. And with that he helde vp his golden wande, and layed it vpon hir neck, and enbraced her frendly, and sayde: talke with me. The sayde she: I sawe the' (O lorde) as an angell of God, g my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearnesse. For excellent and wonderfull art thou (O lorde) and thy face is full of amyte. But as she was thus speakynge vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which cause the kynge was afrayed, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

The rbi. Chapter.

A copye of the commaundement, which kinge Artaxerses caused to be proclamed in all the countrees of his domynion, for the wealth of the lewes.

THE greate kynge Artaxerses, which a raigneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundreth and xxvij. londes, sendeth vnto the prynces g rulers of the same londes, soch as loue him, his frendly salutacion. There be many, that for the sondrye frendshipes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto them for their worshipe, be euer y more proude and hye mynded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subjectes (for plenteous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thinge agaynst those that do them good, and take not onely all vnthankfulnes awaye fro men) but in pryde and presumpcion (as they that be vnmyndefull and vnthakfull for the good dedes) they go aboute to escape the iudgment of God, y seyth all thinges, which (iudgment) hateth a punysheth all wickednes. It happeneth oft also, y they which be set in office by the hyer power, and vnto whom the busynes and causes of the subjectes are comytted to be handled, waxe proude, and defyle the selues with sheddynge of innocent bloude, which bryngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceatfull wordes and with lyenge tales, disceaue and betraye the innocent goodnes of prynces.

Now is it profitable and good, that we take 33 hede, make search therafter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde, but the shamefull, vnhonest, and noysome thinges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes: and therby to bewarre in tyme to come, that we maye make the kyngdome quyete a peaceable for all men, and that we might some tyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for y thinge that now is present before oure eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu 💱 Macedonyan<sup>4</sup> (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amõge vs as an aleaunt, and had optayned the frendshipe that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hye honoure of euery man, as the next and pryncipall vnto the kynge, he coude not forbeare him self from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure life.

With manyfolde disceate also hath he de-C syred to destroye Mardocheus oure helper and preserver, which hath done vs good in all thinges: and innocent Hester the like partaker of oure kyngdome, with all hir people. For his mynde was (whan he had take them out of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate the kyngdome of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Iewes (which were accused of  $\mathbf{\hat{v}}$  wicked,  $\mathbf{\hat{v}}$  they might be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable g right lawes, and that they be the children of the most Hye lyuynge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs and oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hither to. Wherfore, as for the letters and comaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, ye shal do well, yf ye holde them of none effecte: for he that set them vp and inuented the, hangeth at Susis before the porte, with all his kinred, and God (which hath all thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruynge.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp  $\mathbf{B}$ the copy of this letter in all places, that the Iewes maye frely and without hinderaunce holde them selues after their owne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpō \$ xij. daye of \$ xij. moneth Adar they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of their anguysh and trouble wolde haue oppressed thē. For the God that gouerneth all thinges, hath turned to ioye, the daye wherin \$ chosen people shulde haue perished.

Morouer, amoge the hye solempne dayes that ye haue, ye shall holde this daye also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come, this daye maye be a remembrauce to good, for all soch as loue the prosperite of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruccion to those that be sedicious vnto vs.

All cities and lodes that do not this, shal horribly perish and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of  $\mathring{y}$  wilde beastes  $\mathfrak{g}$  foules.

SET youre affeccion vpo wyszdome, A ye that be judges of the earth." Haue a good opinion of the LORDE, a seke him in the synglenesse of hert. ' For he will be foude of them that tempte him not, and appeareth vnto soch as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertue (yf it be alowed,) refourmeth § vnwyse. And why? wyszdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For the holy goost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, a withdraweth himself fro y thoughtes that are without vnderstondinge:  $\alpha$  where wickednes hath the vpper hade, he flieth from thence. ' For the sprete of wyszdome is louynge, gentle and gracious, and wil haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euell with his lippes. For God is a witnesse of his reynes, a true searcher out of his hert, and an hearer of his tonge. 4 For the sprete of § LORDE fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and y same that vpholdeth all thinges, hath knowlege also of the voyce.

- 'Therfore he that speaketh vnrighteous 33 thinges, can not be hydd, nether maye he escape the judgmet of reprofe. And why? inquysicion shal be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shal come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punished. extremely with the, a take awaye their labours. When they se it, they shalbe vexed with horrible feare, a shal wonder at the haistynesse of $ sodane health: groninge for very distresse of mynde, a shall saye within them selues (hauynge inwarde sorow, and mournynge for very anguysh of mynde):

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, a iested vpo. 'We fooles thought their life very madnesse, a their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are counted amonge the children of God, a their porcion is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the waye of trueth, y light of righteousnesse hath not shyned vnto vs, and the Sone of vnderstödinge rose not vp vpo vs. We haue weeried oure selues in y waye of wickednesse a destruccion. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the LORDE, we have not knowne it.

What good hath oure pryde done vnto vs? Or, what profit hath the pompe of riches brought vs? "All those thinges are passed awaye like a shadowe, a as a messaunger rennynge before: as a shippe y passeth ouer the wawcs of the water, which whan it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde,' nether ŷ path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde  $\dot{v}$ flyeth thorow y ayre, a no man can se env token where she is flowen, but only heareth the noyse of hir wynges, beatinge the light wynde, partinge the ayre thorow the vehemece of hir goinge, a flyeth on shakynge hir wynges, where as afterwarde no toke of hir waye can be foude. Or like as whe an arowe is shott at a marck, it parteth the ayre, which immediatly cometh together agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it wente thorow. Euen so we in like maner as soone as we were borne, beganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende: a haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure owne wickednesse.

Soch wordes shal they that have synned, or speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is like a drye thistell floure (or dust) that is blowne awaye with the wynde: like as thynne scomme y is scatted abrode with the storme : like as & smoke which is dispersed here a there with the wynde, a as y remembraunce of a strauger "y tarioth for a daie, a the departeth.

But v righteous shal lyue for euermore :

For I was a ladd of a rype wytt, and had a good vnderstandinge.

But whan I grewe to more vnderstädinge, I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles whan I perceaued that I coude not kepe myself chaist, excepte God gaue it me ( $\mathfrak{g}$  y was a poynte of wyszdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepte vnto the LORDE, and besought him, and with my whole hert I sayde after this maner:

Chap. rí.

The r. Chapter.

WYSZDOME preserued § first mä, A who God made " a father of the worlde, wha he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, toke him out of the moulde of  $\hat{y}$  earth,  $\eta$  gaue him power to rule all thinges. Whan the vnrighteous wente awaye in his wrath from this wyszdome, ŷ brotherheade perished' thorow § wrath of murthur. Agayne, wha y water' destroyed y whole worlde, wyszdome preserued the righteous thorow a poore tre, wherof she was gouerner herself. Morouer wha wickednes had gotten y vpperhande, so y the nacions were puft vp with pryde, "she knewe & righteous, preserued him fautlesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. 'She preserued the righteous, whan he fled from the vngodly y perished, what tyme as § fyre fell downe vpon B v v. cities: Like as yet this daye the vnfrutefull, waist and smokinge lode geueth testimony of their wickednesse: yee the vnripe and vntymely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a tok $\bar{e}$  of a remembraunce of the vnfaithfull soule, there standeth a piler of salt. For all soch as regarded not wyszdome, gat not only this hurte, that they knewe not the thinges which were good, but also left behinde them vnto mē, a memoriall of their foolishnes: so  $\dot{y}$  in the thinges wherin they synned, they coude not be hydd. But as for soch as take hede vnto wyszdome, she shal delyuer them from sorowe.

C Whan the righteous fled because of his brothers wrath, <sup>7</sup> wyszdome led him the right waye, shewed him y kyngdome of God, gaue him knowlege of holy thinges, made him riche in his laboures, and brought to passe the thinges that he wente aboute. In § disceatfulnes of soch as defrauded him, she stode by him, a made him ryche. She saued him from the enemies, and defended him from $ disceauers. She made him stronge in battayll, and gaue him the victory, y he might knowe, how that wyszdome is stronger then all thinges. Whan the righteous was solde, she forsoke him not, but delyuered him fro synners. She wente downe with him in to the dongeon, and

As for them that had accused him, she declared them to be lyers,  $\mathfrak{g}$  brought him to perpetuall worshipe.

She delyuered the righteous people and 3 fautlesse sede, 'from the nacions that oppressed them. She entred in to the soule of the seruaunt of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible kynge. She gaue y righteous the rewarde of their labours, g led them forth a maruelous waye : on the daye tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, and a light of starres in the night season. * She brought them thorow the reed see, and caried them thorow the greate water. She drowned their enemies in the see, and brought them out of the depe. So the righteous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, and 'praysed thy holy name (o LORDE) and magnified thy victorious had with one acorde. For wyszdome openeth the mouth of y domme, g maketh y tonges of babes to speake.

The ri. Chapter.

CHE ordred their workes in the hades of A  $\mathbf{N}$  the holy prophet: " so  $\frac{1}{2}$  they wente thorow ŷ wyldernes ŷ was not inhabited, σ pitched their tetes in y waist deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies, a were auenged of their aduersaries. "Whā they were thirstie, they called vpo y, a water was geue them out of \$ rok, a their thirst slockened out of \$ harde stone. For by § thinges, where thorow their enemies were punished, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the enemies thou gauest mās bloude in steade of lyuynge water. And where as they had scarcenesse in y rebuke whan the children were slayne, thou gauest vnto thine awne a plenteous water vnloked for: declaringe by the thyrst y was at that tyme, how thou woldest bringe thine awne vnto honoure, a slaye their aduersaries.

For whan they were tryed  $\mathfrak{g}$  nourtured with  $\mathfrak{R}$  fatherly mercy, they knowleged how the vngodly were iudged, and punyshed thorow  $\mathfrak{F}$  wrath of God. These hast thou exorted as a father,  $\mathfrak{g}$  proued the: but vnto  $\mathfrak{F}$  other thou hast bene a boysteous kynge, layed hard to

Whether they their charge, a condened the. were absent or present, their punyshmet was alyke. For their grefe was dubble: namely, mournynge, and y remebraunce of thinges past. But wha they perceaued y their punishmētes dyd the good, they thought vpon the LORDE,  $\mathfrak{g}$  wondered at  $\mathfrak{F}$  ende. For at the last they helde moch of him, of who in ŷ outcastinge they thought scorne, as of an abiecte. Neuerthelesse y righteous dyd not so when they were thirstie: but euen like as y thoughtes of § foolish were, so was also their wickednes. C | Where as certayne mē now (thorow erroure) dyd worshipe domme "serpentes a vayne beestes, thou sendedst a multitude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce: v they might knowe, that loke where withall a ma synneth, by the same also shal he be punyshed. For vnto thy allmighty hande, that made the worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of 'Beeres, or woode lyos, or cruell beastes of a strauge kynde, soch as are vnknowne, or spoute fyre, or cast out a smokinge breth, or shote horrible sparkes out of their eyes: which might not only destroye them with hurtinge, but also kyll them with their horrible sight. Yee without these beestes might they have bene slayne with one winde, beynge persecuted of their awne workes, and scatered abrode thorow the breth of thy power. 囲

Neuertheles thou hast ordred all thinges in measure, nobre  $\mathfrak{g}$  weight. For thou hast euer had greate streight  $\mathfrak{g}$  might,  $\mathfrak{g}$  who maye withstode  $\mathfrak{F}$  power of thine arme? And why like as  $\mathfrak{F}$  small thynge  $\mathfrak{F}$   $\mathfrak{F}$  balaunce weyeth, so is  $\mathfrak{F}$  worlde before  $\mathfrak{F}$ : yee as a droppe of  $\mathfrak{F}$ morninge dew, that falleth downe vpon the earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: and makest the as 'though thou sawest not the sinnes of mo, because they shulde amende. For thou louest all the thinges that are, and hatest none of the who thou hast made: nether didest thou ordeyne or make eny thinge of euell will.

How might eny thinge endure, yf it wer not thy will? Or how coude eny thinge be preserued, excepte it were called of ? But thou sparest all, for all are thine, o LORDE, thou louer of soules.

The rij. Chapter.

LORDE, how gracious a swete is thy 3 sprete in all thinges? Therfore chastenest thou the measurably that go wroge, and warnest them, concernynge the thinges wherin they offende : thou speakest vnto them (o LORDE) and exortest the to leave their wickednes, and to put their trust in the. As for those olde "inhabiters of thy holy londe, thou mightest not awaye with them, for they commytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as wytchcraft, sorcery and Idolatry: they slew their owne children without mercy: they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloude: Yee because of soch abhominacios, myszbeleues a offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers : that y londe which thou louest aboue all other, might be a dwellinge for the childre of God.

Neuertheles thou sparedest the also (as 33 mē) a sendedst ý forerūners of thyne hoost, euē hornettes to destroye thē out by lytle a litle. Not y thou wast vnable to subdue y vngodly vnto ý <sup>e</sup>righteous in battayll, or with cruell beestes, or with one rough worde to destroye the together: But thy mynde was to dryue the out by lytle a litle, geuinge the time g place to amende : knowinge well, y it was an vnrighteous nacion g wicked of nature, τ ý their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede from y begynnynge, g feared no mā: Yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyl saye vnto the: why hast thou done v? Or who wyl stode agaynst thy iudgmet? Or who wil come before thy face an aueger of vnrighteous me? Or who wil blame ŷ, yf ŷ people perish, whō 🖉 thou hast made? For there is none other God but thou, y carest for all thinges: y thou mayest declare how y thy judgmet is not vnright. There dare nether kige, ner tyraut in thy sight requyre accoptes of them, who thou hast destroyed.

For so moch the as thou art righteous thy self, thou ordrest all thiges righteously, g <sup>6</sup>punishest eue hi ý hath not deserued to be punyshed, g takest him for a strauger g an aleaunt in ý löde of thy power. For thy power is ý beginnynge of righteousnes: and because Whan men thinke ynot to be of a full strength, thou declarest thy power : a boldly delyuerest thou them ouer y knowe y not. But thou LORDE of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest us with greate worshipe, for thou mayest do as thou wilt.

- By soch workes now hast thou taught thy Ð people, that a ma also shulde be just and louynge : and hast made thy childre to be of a good hope: for even when thou iudgest, thou genest rowme to amende from synnes. For in so moch as thou hast punyshed, and with soch diligence delyuered y enemies of thy seruautes, which were worthy to dye (where thorow thou gauest the tyme c place of amedement y they might turne fro their wickednes) with how greate diligence then punyshest thou thine awne childre, vnto whose fathers thou hast sworne g made couenaūtes of good promises? So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest oure enemies dyuerse wayes : to y intet y wha we punysh, we shulde remebre thy goodnesse: g whan we oure selues are punyshed, to put oure trust in thy mercy.
- 犯 Wherfore where as men haue lyued ignorautly g vnrighteously, thou hast punyshed the sore, eue thorow y same thinges that they "worshipped. For they wente astraye very loge in y waye of erroure, g helde y beestes (which eue their enemies despysed) for goddes, lyuynge as children of no vnderstandinge. Therfore hast thou sent a scornefull punyshment amonge them, as amonge the childre of ignoraunce. As for soch as wolde not be refourmed by those scornes g rebukes, they felt the worthy punishmet of God. For v thinges y they suffred, they bare the vnpacietly, beinge not contet in them but vn wyllinge. And when they peryshed by § same thinges that they toke for goddes, they knowledged then, that there was but one true God, whom afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came § ende of their dampnacion vpon them.

The riff. Chapter.

A VAYNE are all men, which have not  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thinges which are 'sene, knewe not him, that of himself is euerlastinge.

Nether toke they so moch regarde of the workes that are made, as to knowe, who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some § course of v starres, some v water, some toke Sonne and Moone, or the lightes of heauen which 'rule v earth, for goddes. But though they had soch pleasure in their beuty, that they thought them to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how moch more fayrer he is that made them. For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these thinges. Or vf they marueled at the power and workes of the, they shulde haue perceaued therby, v he which made these thinges, is mightier then they.

For by the greatnesse  $\mathfrak{g}$  beutye of the creature,  $\mathfrak{f}$  maker therof maye playnely be knowne. Notwithstondinge they are the lesse to be blamed, that sought God  $\mathfrak{g}$  wolde haue founde him, and yet myssed. And why? for so moch as they wete aboute in his workes and sought after them, it is a toke, that they regarded and helde moch of his workes  $\mathfrak{f}$  are sene: howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For yf their vnderstondinge and knowledge was so greate,  $\mathfrak{f}$  they could discerne the worlde and  $\mathfrak{f}$  creatures, why dyd they not rather fynde out  $\mathfrak{f}$  LORDE therof?

But vnhappie are they, and amonge the deed is their hope, that call the God which are but the workes of mens handes: golde, syluer and the thinge, that is founde out by connynge, the similitude of beastes, or eny vayne stone that hath bene made by hande of olde. <sup>d</sup>Or as whan a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wodd, and pareth of the barck  $| \mathfrak{C} |$ of it connyngly: and so with the one parte maketh a vessell to be vsed, and dighteth meate with the residue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profitable for nothinge (for it is a croked pece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow his vanite, and (acordinge to the knowlege of his connynge) he geueth it some proporcion, fashioneth it after the similitude of a man, or maketh it like some beest, straketh it ouer with reed and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he casteth some coloure vpon it. Then maketh he a conueniet tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall and maketh it fast with yron, prouydinge so for it, lest it happe to fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it self: And why? it is but an ymage, and must of necessite be helped.

Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it for his children and for his wife: he seketh helpe at it, he axeth councell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it ý hath no soule: for health, he maketh his peticion vnto him that is sicke: for life, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him for helpe, that is not able to helpe him self: g to sende him a good iourneye, he prayeth him that maye not go. And in all the thinges ý he taketh in hande (whether it be to optayne eny thinge or to worke) he prayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

The riiij. Chapter.

A GAYNE, another mā purposinge to sayle a beginynge to take his iourney thorow y raginge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stock, y is farre weaker, the y tre y beareth him. For as for it, coueteousnesse of moneye hath founde it out, a y craftesmā made it with his connynge. But thy prouydence (O father) gouerneth all thinges fro y begynnynge, for thou hast made a waye in y see," g a sure path in the myddest of y wawes: declaringe therby, y thou hast power to helpe in all thinges, yee though a man wente to the see without shippe. Neuerthelesse, y y workes of thy wyszdome shulde not be vaine, thou hast caused an arke to be made:" g therfore do men commytte their lyues to a small pece of wod passinge ouer the see in a shyppe, g are saued.

For in the olde tyme also what the proude 33 giauntes perished, he (in who the hope was left to increase y worlde) wete in to the shippe, which was gouerned thorow thy hande, and so left sede behinde him vnto y worlde. For happie is y tre where thorow righteousnes cometh: but cursed is the ymage of wod, y is made with hades, yee both it  $\tau$  he y made it: He, because he made it:  $\mathfrak{c}$  it, because it was called God, where as it is but a frayle thinge. <sup>d</sup> For the vngodly a his vngodlynes are both like abhominable vnto God. Euen so y worke t he y made it also shal be punyshed together. Therfore shal there a plage come vpon the ymages of the Heithen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwyse. And why? the sekinge out of ymages is the beginnynge of whordome, and the bringinge vp of them is the destruccion of life. For they were not from the begynnynge, nether shall they cotinue for euer. The welthy ydilnes of C men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore shal they come shortly to an ende. Whe a father mourned for his sonne y was taken awaye fro him, he made him an ymage (in all y haist) of his deed sonne : g so begane to worshipe him as God, which was but a deed mā 🖞 ordened his seruauntes to offre vnto him. Thus by processe of tyme a thorow loge custome, this erroure was kepte as a lawe, c tyraūtes copelled mē by violece to honoure ymages. As for those y were so farre of, y me might not worshipe them presently, their picture was brought fro farre (like the ymage of a kynge who they wolde honoure) to the intent that with greate diligence they might worshipe him which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the syngular connynge of the craftesman gaue the ignoraunt also a great occasio to worshipe ymages. For the workman wyllinge to do him a pleasure that sett him a worke, laboured with all his connynge to make And so 😰 the ymage of the best fashion. (thorow the beuty of the worke) the comon people was disceased, in so moch that they toke him now for a God, which a litle afore was but honored as a man. And this was the erroure of mans life, whan men (ether for to serue their owne affeccion, or to do some pleasure vnto kinges) ascrybed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Morouer, this was not ynough for them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignoraunce, those many and greate plages called they peace.' For ether they slewe their awne children and offred them, or dyd sacrifice in the night season, or els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte nether life ner mariage cleane: but ether one slewe another to death maliciously, or els greued his ueghboure with aduoutrie. And thus were all thinges myxte together: bloude, manslaughter, Yee they were vnto them selues the most heuy g horrible darcknesse.

The rbiij. Chapter.

VEUERTHELES thy sayntes had a A very greate light (sad if very greate light (and the enemies herde their voyce, but they sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffred not y same thinges, they magnified the : and they y were vexed afore (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought § (o God) y there might be a difference. Therfore had they 'a burnynge piler of fyre to lede them in the vnknowne waye, a thou gauest them the Sonne for a fre gift without env hurte. Reason it was, that they shulde want light a to be put in the preson of darcknes, which kepte thy childre in captingte, by whom the vncorrupte light of the lawe of  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$ worlde was for to be geuen. Whan they 33 thought to slave " the babes of the righteous (one beinge laied out, and yet preserved to be leder vnto the other) thou broughtest out the whole multitude of the children, 'and destroydest these in the mightie water. Of that night were oure fathers certified a fore, that they knowinge vnto what oothes they had geuen credece, might be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued y health of the righteous, but the vngodly were destroied. For like as thou hast hurte oure enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledest a fore. For the righteous children of the good men offred secretly, a ordred the lawe of righteousnes vnto vnite: y the just shulde receaue good and euell in like maner, singinge prayses vnto y father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemies, g a piteous crie for childre that were bewayled. The master and the scruaut were punyshed 🛛 alike, the meane man and the kynge suffred in like maner. For they all together had innumerable that dyed one death.

' Nether were § lyuinge sufficient to bury & deed, for in & twincklinge of an eye, the noblest nacion of the was destroyed. As oft as God helped the afore, yet wolde it not make the beleue: but in y destruccion of y first borne they knowleged, that it was y people of God. course, thy Allmightie worde (o LORDE) leapte downe frö heauë out of thy royall trone, as a rough mā of warre, in  $\hat{y}$  myddest of  $\hat{y}$ londe  $\hat{y}$  was destroyed:  $\alpha$   $\hat{y}$  sharpe swerde perfourmed thy straite comaundemēt, stādinge  $\alpha$  fyllinge all thinges with death: yee it stode vpo  $\hat{y}$  earth  $\alpha$  reached vnto the heauen. Then the sight of the euell dreames vexed them sodenly, and fearfulnesse came vpon them vnawarres.

Then laye there one here, another there half deed half quyck, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visions that vexed thē, shewed thē these thinges afore: so that they were not ignoraunt, wherfore they perished.

The tentacion of death touched the righteous also, and amonge the multitude in the wyldernesse there was insurrection, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the fautlesse man wente in all the haist," and toke the battayll vpon him, brought forth the weape of his ministracion: euen prayer and y cesours of recocilinge, set himself agaynst y wrath, and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby, that he was thy seruaunt. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weapers of might: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttinge the in remembraunce of the ooth g couenaût made vnto the fathers. For whan the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, and parted y wave vnto the lyuynge. And why? <sup>5</sup> in his longe garmet was all the beuty, and in the foure rowes of the stones was the glory of the fathers graue, and thy maiesty was written in the crowne of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, and was afrayed of them: for it was only a tentacion worthy of wrath.

The rir. Chapter.

A S for the vngodly, the wrath came vpō them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happē vnto them: how that (whan they had cōsented to lett them go, and had sent them out with greate diligence) they wolde repente,  $\mathfrak{g}$  folowe vpon them. 'For whan they were yet mournynge and makinge lamētacion by the graues of the deed, they deuysed another foolishnes: so that they persecuted them in their flienge, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessite also brought them vnto this ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thinges y happened vnto them afore. But the thinge that was wantynge of their punyshment, was requysite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormētes: that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorow, and that these might fynde a straunge death.

The was every creature fashioned agayne of the new acordinge to the wyll of their maker, obeyenge thy commaundementes, y thy children might be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, g the drye earth appeared, where afore was water : so y in the reed see there was a wave without impediment, and the greate depe became a grene felde: where thorow all  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$ people wente that were defended with thy hande, seinge thy wonderous a maruelous workes. For as  $\psi$  horses, so were they fedd, a leapte like labes, praysing the (o LORDE) which haddest delyuered them. And why? they were yet myndefull of the thinges, that happened whyle they dwelt in the londe: how the grounde brought forth flyes in steade of catell, and how y ryuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fyszshes.

But at the last they sawe a new creacion of  $\mathbb{C}$ byrdes, what tyme as they were disceaued with lust, and desyred delicate meates. For whan they were speakinge of their appetite, the quales came vp vnto them from the see, and punyshmentes came vpon ý synners, not without the tokes which came to passe afore by the vehemēce of v streames: for they suffred worthely acordinge to their wickednesses, they dealt so abhominably a churlishly with straungers. Some receaued no vnknowne gestes, some brought the straungers in to bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thinges there were some, that not only receaued no straungers with their wylles, but persecuted those also," and dyd the moch euell, that receaued the gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with blyndnesse, like as they that were couered with sodane darcknesse at the dores of the righteous: so y euery one sought y intraunce of his dore.

Thus the elementes turned in to them B selues, like as whan one tune is chaunged vpon an instrument of musick, and yet all

MANY and greate mē haue declared wyszdome vnto vs out of y lawe, out of y prophetes g out of other that folowed thē. In the which thinges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctrine and wiszdome: Therfore they that haue it g reade it, shulde not onely thē selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachinge and wrytinge.

After that my graundfather Iesus had geuen diligent laboure to reade the lawe, the prophetes and other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had wel exercised himself therin: he purposed also to wryte some thinge of wyszdome and good maners, to the intēt that they which were wyllinge to lerne and to be wyse, might have the more vnder-standinge, and be the more apte to lede a good conuersacion.

Wherfore I exorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, and to take it in good worth: though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thinge that is wryttin in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well whan it is traslated in to another speache. Not only this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the prophetes, and other bokes sounde farre other wyse, than they do, whan they are spoken in their awne language.

Now in the XXXVIII. years whan I came in to Egipte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and continued there all my life, I gat libertie to reade and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interpret this boke. And consideringe that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme this boke, and to brynge it vnto light: that the straugers also which are disposed to lerne, might applye them selues vnto good maners,  $\mathfrak{g}$  lyue acordinge to  $\mathfrak{F}$  lawe of  $\mathfrak{F}$  LORDE.

The first Chapter.

A LL wyszdome cometh of God" the LORDE, a hath bene euer with him, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred  $\hat{y}$  sonde of the see,  $\hat{y}$  droppes of the rayne  $\mathfrak{g}$  the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured the heyth of heaue, y bredth of the earth a the depenesse of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wiszdome," which hath bene before all thinges? Wiszdome hath bene before all thinges, and the vnderstandinge of prudence from euerlastinge. (Gods worde in the heyth is the well of wyszdome, and the euerlastinge comaundementes are the intraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath v rote of wyszdome bene declared? Or who hath knowne hir wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctrine of wyszdome bene discouered and shewed? and who hath vnderstande the manyfolde entrauce of her?

B There is one: euē the Hyest, the maker of all thinges, & Allmightie, & kynge of power (of whom men ought to stonde greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his trone, beinge a God of dominion: He hath created her thorow § holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her out vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesh acordinge to his gift: he geneth her richely vnto them that loue him. The feare of the LORDE is worshipe and triuphe, gladnesse g a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the LORDE maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe life. Who so feareth the LORDE, it shal go well with him at the last, a in the days of his death he shal be blessed.

A prayer of lesus Syrac. Wyszdome calleth the ignoraunt vnto her.

The loue of God is honorable wiszdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what woderous thinges it doth." The feare of LORDE is the begynnynge of wyszdome, and was made with the faithfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen wemen, and shalbe knowne of y righteous and faithfull. The feare of the LORDEis y right Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifieth the hert, and geueth myrth a glad-Who so feareth the LORDE, shalbe nesse. happie: and whan he hath nede of comforte, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wiszdome that maketh rich, and bringeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with hir giftes, a the garners with her treasure. The feare of the LORDE is the crowne of wyszdome, and geueth plenteous peace a health. He hath sene her g nombred her: knowlege and vnderstandinge of wyszdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honoure.

The feare of the LORDE is the rote of B wyszdome, and hir braunches are longe life. (In the treasures of wyszdome is vnderstondinge and deuocion of knowlege, but wyszdome is abhorred of synners.) The feare of the LORDE dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made righteous, t his wilfull boldnes is his owne destruccion. A paciet man wyl suffre vnto the tyme, and the shal he haue y rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstödinge wil hyde his wordes for a tyme, and many mes lippes shal speake of his wyszdome. In the treasures of wyszdome is the declaracion of doctrine, but the synner abhorreth the worshipe of God. My sonne, yf

The iij. Chapter.

→HE children of wyszdome are a cōgre- 🏽 gacion of the righteous, and their exercise is obedience and loue. Heare me youre father (o my deare children) and do there after, that ye maie be safe. "For the LORDE wil haue the father honoured of the children, and loke what a mother commaudeth hir children to do, he wil haue it kepte. THO so toucheth pitch, shalbe fyled ¶a !` withall : 'and he that is famyliar with v proude, shal clothe himself with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanyeth a more honorable man then him self. Therfore kepe no familiarite with one that is richer then thy self. How agree the ketell g the pott together? for yf y one be smytten agaynst the other, it shal be broke. The rich dealeth vnrighteously, g threateneth withall: but y poore beinge oppressed and wrogeously dealt withall, suffreth scarcenesse, g geueth fayre wordes. Yf thou be for his profit, he vseth the : but yf thou have nothinge, he shal forsake the. As longe as thou hast eny thinge of thine owne, he shal be a good felowe with thee: Yee he shal make the a bare man, and not be sory for the. Yf he haue nede of the, he shall defraude the: g (with a preuy mock) shal he put the in an hope, and geue the all good wordes, and save : what wantest thou? Thus shal he shame y in his meate, vntill he have supte the cleane vp twyse or thryse, and at the last shal he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde, whan he seyth that thou hast nothinge, he shal forsake the, and shake his heade at the.

B Bewarre, that thou be not disceased and brought downe in thy symplenesse. (Be not to humble in thy wyszdome, lest whan thou art brought lowe, thou be disceaued thorow foolishnes.) Yf thou be called of a mightie man, absent thy self, so shal he call the to him the more oft. Preasse not thou vnto him, that thou be not shott out: but go not thou farre of, lest he forgett the. shall he tempte the, and (with a preuy mock) shall he question y of thy secretes. The vnmercifull mynde of his shal marck thy wordes, he shal not spare to do y hurte a to put y in preson. Bewarre, a take good hede to thy self, for thou walkest in parell of thy ouerthrowinge.

(Now wha thou hearest his wordes, make C the as though thou werest in a dreame, a wake vp. Loue God all thy life longe, a call vpon him in thy nede.) Euery beast loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neghboure. All flesh wil resorte to their like, and euery man will kepe company with soch as he is himself. But as y wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth the vngodly with y righteous. What felishippe' shulde an holy man haue with a dogg? How can the ryche and the poore agree together? The wilde asse is the lyons pray in the wildernesse, euen so are poore men the meate of the ryche. Like as the proude maye not awaye with lowlynes, euen so doth the riche abhorre the poore. Yf a rich man fall, his frendes sett him vp agayne: but whan the poore falleth, his frendes forsake him. Yf a rich mā fall in to an erroure, he hath many helpers: he speaketh proude wordes, and yet men justifie him.

But yf a poore man go wronge, he is D punyshed: yee though he speake wisely, yet can it haue no place. Whan the riche man speaketh, euery body holdeth his toge: and loke what he sayeth, they prayse it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? and yf he do amysse, they shal destroye him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerte is a wicked thinge in the mouth of the vngodly. The hert of man chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenaunce is a toke of a good hert, for els is it an harde thinge to knowe the thought.

THRE thinges there are, y my sprete a fauoureth, 'which be also a lowed before God and men: The vnyte of brethren, the loue of neghbours, and man and wyfe that agree well together.'

Thre thinges there be which my soule hateth, and I vtterly abhorre the life of them: A poore man that is proude. A rich mā that is a lyar,* and an olde body that doteth and is vnchaste.

Yf thou hast gathered nothinge in thy youth, what wylt thou fynde thë in thine age? All punyshment a plage is nothinge in comparison of the plage of the hert, euc so all wickednes is nothinge to the wickednes of a woman.

C What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothinge in comparison of it, y his euell willers do vnto him: and all vengeaunce is nothinge to the vengeauce of the enemye. There is not a more wicked heade then the heade of the serpet, and there is no wrath aboue & wrath of a woman. "I wyl rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house with a wicked wyfe. The wickednesse of a woman chaungeth hir face, she shal moffell hir coutenaunce as it were a Beer, g as a sack shall she shewe it amonge the neghbours. Hir husbande is brought to shame amöge his neghbours, a whā he heareth it, it maketh him to sighe. All wickednes is but litle to the wickednes of a woman, y porcion of the vngodly shal fall vpon her.

Like as to clymme vp a sondy waye is to ŷ 殂 fete of the aged, euē so is a wife full of wordes to a still quyete man. <sup>4</sup>Loke not to narowly vpon the bewtye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desyre towarde her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and greate confucio. Yf a woman gett the mastrie, then is she contrary to hir huszbande. A wicked wife maketh a sory hert, an heuy countenaunce and a deed wounde. 'Of the woman came y begynnynge of synne, and thorow her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a litle, nether geue a wicked woman hir will. Yf she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the sight of thy enemies. Cut her of then from thy flesh, that she do not allwaye abuse the.

The rrbi. Chapter.

TAPPIE is the man that hath a vertuous A wyfe, for the nobre of his yeares shalbe dubble. An honest woman maketh hir huszbande a ioyfull man, a she shall fyll y yeares of his life in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gift, which shalbe geuen for a good porcion vnto soch as feare God. Whether a man be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a merv hert, g a chearful countenauce. There be thre thinges y my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of the fourth. Treason in a cite, a sedicious people, and noysome tonges, all these are heuver then the death. But whan one is gelous ouer his wife, it bryngeth payne and sorowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thinges, is a scourge of the tonge. Whan one hath an euell wife, it is euen as whan an vnlike pare of oxen must drawe together : he that getteth her, getteth a scorpion.<sup>d</sup> A dronken woman is a greate plage, for she can not couer hir owne shame.

The whordome of a woman maye be B knowne in the pryde of hir eyes and eyelyddes. 'Yf thy daughter be not shamefast, holde her straitly, lest she abuse hirself thorow ouermoch liberte. Bewarre of all the dishonesty of hir eyes, and maruell not yf she do agaynst the. Lik as one that goeth by the waye and is thyrstie, so shall she open hir mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that she maye gett.

By every hedge shal she syt her downe, a opē hir quyuer against euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyseth hir huszbande, and fedeth his bones with hir wyszdome. A woman of few wordes is a gift of God, and to a well nurtured mynde maye nothinge be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft C aboue other giftes, and there is no waight to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it self. 'Like as the Sonne whan it aryseth, is an ornament in the hye heauen of § LORDE, so is a vertuous wife § bewtye of all hir house. Like as the cleare light is vpon § holy cadelstick, so is the bewtye of the face vpo an honest body. / Like as the golde pilers are vpon the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a costant unynde. #### The rrriiij. Chapter.

X NWYSE people begyle them selues with vayne and discentfull hope, and fooles trust in dreames. Who so regardeth dreames, is like him that wil take holde of a shadowe, and folowe after the wynde: Euen so is it with the appearinges of dreames. Before the face is the licknes of a face. Who can be clensed of § vncleane? Or what treuth can be spoken of a lyar? Soythayenge, witchcraft, soreery, and dreaminge is but vanyte: like as whan a womā trauayleth with chylde, and hath many fantasyes in hir herte. Where as soch visions come not of God, set not thine herte vpon them: For dreames haue disceaued many a mā, and they fayled, that put their truste therin.

The lawe shalbe fulfilled without lyes, a 33 wyszdome is sufficient to a faithfull mouth. A wyse man y is well instructe, vnderstondeth moch : a he y hath good experièce, can talke of wyszdome. He y hath no expericce, knoweth litle : g he y erreth, causeth moch wickednes. Whan I was yet in erroure, I lerned moch also: yee I was so lerned, that I coude not expresse it all, and came oft in parell of death therouer, tyll I was delyuered from it. Now I se, that they which feare God, haue the right sprete: for their hope stödeth in him, that can helpe the. Who so feareth the LORDE, stödeth in awe of no man, and is not afrayed, for the LORDE is his hope and comforte.

Blessed is the soule of him y feareth the  $\sigma$ LORDE: In who putteth he his trust? who is his strēgth? For the eyes of the LORDE haue respecte vnto them, that loue him. He is their mightie proteccion, a stroge grounde:  $\Lambda$  defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote noone daye, a sucore for stomblynge, a an helpe for fallynge. He setteth vp the soule, and lighteneth y eyes: He geueth health life, and blessynge. He that geneth an offeringe of vnrighteous good, his offerynge is refused: and the scornefull dealinges of the vnrighteous please not God. 'God hath no delyte in the offerynges of v vngodly, nether maye synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bryngeth an offerynge out of y goodes of ŷ poore, doth euē as one ŷ kylleth ŷ sonne before y fathers eyes.

The bred of the nedefull is the life of the Bpoore: he ý defraudeth him therof, is a man, of bloude. Who so robbeth his neghboure of his lyuinge, doth as greate synne as though he slew him to death. 'He that defraudeth ŷ laborer of his hyre, is a bloude shedder. Whā one buyldeth, and another breaketh downe, what profit haue they then but laboure? Whan one prayeth, g another curseth, whose voyce wyl the LORDE heare? 'He that washeth himself because of a deed body, gthen toucheth the deed agayne, what doth his waszshinge? # The rl. Chapter.

GREATE trauayle is created for all mē, and an heuy yock vpon all mens children, from the daye that they go out of their mothers wombe, tyll they be buried in (the earth) the mother of all thinges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacions, feare of the hert, councell, meditacions, longinge and desyre, the daye of death: from the hyest that sytteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from him that is gorgiously arayed, and weereth a crowne, vntyll him that is but homely and symple clothed. There is nothinge but wrath, zele, fearfulnes, vnquietnes, and feare of death, rigorous anger and stryfe. And in the night whan one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaungeth his vnderstandinge and knowlege. A litle as nothinge is his rest, in y slepe as well as in the daye of laboure.

He feareth and is disquyted in the vision of his hert, as one that renneth out of a battayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh, and marueleth that the feare was nothinge. Soch thinges happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but seuenfolde to the vngodly. Morouer death, bloudsheddinge, strife g swerde, oppression, honger, destruccion and <sup>b</sup>punyshment: these thinges are all created agaynst the vngodly, and for their sakes came the floude also. All that is of the earth, shal turne to earth agayne: and all waters ebb agayne in to the see. All brybes and vnrighteousnes shalbe put awaye, but faithfulnes and trueth shal endure for euer. The sub-

Like as the righteous reioyseth whan he  $\mathfrak{C}$ openeth his hande, so shall the trāsgressours be faynte, whan their goodes vanysh and consume awaye. 'The children of the vngodly shal not optayne many braunches: and  $\mathfrak{F}$ vncleane rotes vpō the hye rockes shalbe roted out before the gras by the water syde  $\mathfrak{C}$  vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase and blessynge of God, is like a paradise  $\mathfrak{g}$ garden of pleasure: soch mercy also  $\mathfrak{g}$  kindnes endureth for euer. "To laboure  $\mathfrak{g}$  to be content with that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt life:  $\mathfrak{g}$  that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget children and to repayre the cite, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth the they both. Wyne and mynstralsye reioyse the hert, but the loue of wyszdome is aboue them both.

Pypinge and harpinge make a swete noyse, D but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thine eye desyreth fauoure and bewtie but a grene sede tyme rather the they both. Α frende and companyon come together at oportunyte, 'but aboue them both is a wife that agreeth with hir huszbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but allmes shal deliuer more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good councell is more pleasaunt then they both. Temporall substaunce and strength lift vp the mynde: but the feare of the LORDE more then they both. The feare of the LORDE wanteth nothinge, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of § LORDE is as a pleasaunt garde of blessynge, and nothinge so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers life, for better it were to dye the to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyuynge how to vpholde his life, for he fedeth himself with other mens meate. But a wyse and well nurtoured man wyll bewarre therof. Beggynge is swete in the mouth of the vnshamefast, but in his bely there burneth a fyre.

The children of the vngodly are abhominable children, and so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. The inheretaunce of vngodly children shall come to naught, 'and their posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confucion. The children complayne of an vngodly father: and why? for his sake they are rebuked and despysed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) which haue forsakē the lawe of ŷ hyest God: Yf ye be borne, ye shal be borne to cursynge: yf ye dye, ŷ curse shal be youre porcion.

'All that is of y earth, shal turne to earth agayne: so go the vngodly also out of y curse in to destruction. I My children, kepe wyszdome in peace: for wiszdome that is hyd and a treasure that is not sene, what profit is in the both? A man that hydeth his foolishnes, is better then a man that hydeth his wyszdome. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thinges and allwaie to be ashamed. True faith must proue and measure it.

Be ashamed of whordome before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge before the prynce and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacion and people: Of vnrighteousnes, before a companyon and frêde: Of theft, before ŷ neghbours. As for the trueth of God and his couenaunt, <sup>f</sup> be not ashamed therof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bred: Be ashamed to loke vpō harlottes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take g not to geue: Be ashamed also to loke vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many tryflinge wordes with hir mayden, or to stonde by hir bedsyde. Be ashamed to vpbrade thy frēde: and whan thou geuest eny thinge, cast him not in the teth withall.

ryuers of water: Like as the braunches vpon the mount Libanus in tyme of Sommer: as a fyre q incēse that is kyndled: Like as an whole ornament of pure golde, set with all maner of precious stones: and as an olyue tre that is frutefull: q as a Cypres tre which groweth vp an hye.

Whan he put on the garment of honoure, 33 g was clothed withall bewtye: whan he wente to the holy altare, to garnysh the couerynge of the Sanctuary: whan he toke y porcions out of the prestes hande, he himself stode by the herth of the altare, and his brethren rounde aboute in ordre. As the braunches of Cedre tre vpon the mount Libanus, so stode they rounde aboute him. And as the braunches of the olyue tre, so stode all y sonnes of Aaron in their glory. And y he might sufficiently perfourme his seruyce vpon the altare, a garnysh the offrynge of the hyest God, he stretched out his hande and toke of the drynkofferynge, a poured in of the wyne: so he poured vpon the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyest prynce.

Then beganne  $\S$  sonnes of Aaron to synge, and to blowe with trompettes,  $\mathfrak{q}$  to make a greate noyse, for a remembraūce  $\mathfrak{q}$  prayse vnto the LORDE. Then were the people afrayed,  $\mathfrak{q}$  fell downe to the earth vpō their faces, to worshipe the LORDE their God,  $\mathfrak{q}$ to geue thankes to Allmightie God. They sunge goodly also with their voyces, so that there was a pleasaunt noyse in \$ greate house of the LORDE. And the people in their prayer besought the LORDE the Hyest, that he wolde be mercyfull, tyll the honoure of \$LORDE were perfourmed. Thus ended they their mynistracion and seruyce.

C Then wente he downe, and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shuld geue praise thankes out of their lippes vnto y LORDE, and to reioyse in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he might openly shew the thankesgeuynge before the Hyest, namely thus: O geue prayse a thankes (ye all) vnto the LORDE oure God, which hath euer done noble and greate thinges: which hath increased oure dayes from oure mothers wombe, and dealt with vs acordinge to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfulnes of hert, a peace for oure tymes in Israel. Which faithfully kepeth his mercy for vs euermore, a allwaye delyuereth vs in due season.

There be two maner of people, that I abhorre fro my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people: They that syt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, g the foolish people that dwell in Sichimis.

I lesus the sonne of Sirac Eleazarus of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these informacions and documētes of wyszdome and vnderstādinge in this boke, and poured out the wyszdome out of my hert. Blessed is he that exerciseth him self therin: and who so taketh soch to hert, shal be wyse. Yf he do these thinges, he shal be stronge in all. For the light of the LORDE ledeth him.

The story of Zusanna,

Withich is the riff. chapter of Maniel after the Latyn.

A 1 THERE dwelt a man in Babilo, called Ioachim: v toke a wife, whose name was Susanna, (§ doughter of Helchias) a very fayre woman, g soch one as feared God. Hir father a hir mother also were godly people, a taught their doughter acordinge to y lawe of Moses. Now Ioachim (hir huszbonde) was a greate rich man,  $\pi$  had a fayre orcharde ioyninge vnto his house. And to him resorted the Iewes comonly, because he was a man of reputacion amonge them. The same yeare were there made two judges, soch as the LORDE speaketh of : All the wickednesse of Babilon, cōmeth from ŷ elders (ŷ is) from ŷ iudges, which seme to rule the people. These came offt to Ioachims house, all soch as had eny thinge to do in the lawe, came thither vnto them.

B Now when the people came agayne at after noone, Susanna wente in to hir huszbodes orcharde, to walke. The elders seynge this, that she wente in daylie a walked: they burned for lust to her, yee they were allmost out of their wittes, a cast downe their eyes, that they shulde not se heaue, ner remembre, y God is a righteous judge. For they were both woulded with the loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his grefe. And for shame, they durst not tell her their inordynate lust, y they wolde fayne haue had to do with her. Yet they layed wayte for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they might (at the leest) haue a sight of her. And the one sayde to y other : Vp, let vs go home, for it is dyner tyme. So they wente their waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enqueringe out  $\mathring{y}$  matter betwixte them selues: yee the one tolde  $\mathring{y}$  other of his wicked lust. The apoynted they a tyme, whe they might take Susanna alone.

It happened also y they spyed out a conueniet tyme, when she wente forth to walke (as hir maner was) g no body with her, but two maydes, "a thought to wash her self in the garden, for it was an hote season: And there was not one person there, excepte the two elders, y had hyd them selues, to beholde her. So she sayde to hir maydens: go fet me oyle a sope, a shut the orcharde dore, y I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them, g shut the orcharde dore, g wente out them selues at a backe dore, to fet the thinge v she had comaunded: but Susanna knewe not, y y elders laie there hyd within. Now when the maydens were gone forth, y two elders gat them vp, g ranne vpon her, sayenge: now, the orcharde dores are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs. and lye with vs.

Yf thou wilt not, we shall bringe a testimoniall agaynst the: that there was a yonge felowe with the, and that thou hast sent awaye thy maydens from the for the same cause. Susanna sighed, and sayde: Alas, I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe youre mynde, it wyll be my death: and yf I consent not vnto you, I can not escape youre hondes. Wel, it is better for me, to fall in to youre hondes without the dede doinge, then to synne in the sight of the LORDE: and with that, she cried out with a loude voyce: the elders also cried out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore, a smote it open. Now when the seruauntes of the house herde y crie in y orcharde, they ruszshed in at the back dore, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruauntes were greatly ashamed, for why, there was neuer soch a reporte made and the second secon

These two elders stole vp in the myddest of the people," a layed their hondes vpon y heade of Susanna: which wepte, and loked vp towarde heauen, for hir herte had a sure trust in the LORDE. And the elders sayde: As we were walkinge in the orcharde alone, this woman came in with hir two maydes: whom she sent awaye from her, g sparred v F orcharde dores. With that, a yonge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her,  $\alpha$  lave with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And whe we sawe this wickednes, we rane to her: g perceaued, y they had medled together. But we coude not holde him, for he was stronger then we: thus he opened ŷ dore, g gat him awaye. Now whe we had take this woma, we axed her, what yoge felow this was: but she wolde not tell vs. This is \$ matter, q we be witnesses of \$ same.

The comon sorte beleued them, as those  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  were the elders  $\mathfrak{q}$  indges of the people,  $\mathfrak{q}$  so they condemned her to death. Susanna cried out with a loude voyce,  $\mathfrak{q}$  sayde: O eucrlastinge God,<sup>6</sup> thou sercher of secretes, thou  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  knowest all thinges afore they come to passe: thou wotest,  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  they haue borne false wytnes agaynst me:  $\mathfrak{q}$  beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dyd eny soch thinges, as these men haue maliciously inuented agaynst me. And  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  LORDE herde hir voyce. For wh $\tilde{\mathfrak{q}}$  she was led forth to death,  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  LORDE raised vp  $\overset{\circ}{y}$  sprete of a y $\tilde{\mathfrak{q}}$ ge childe, whose name was Daniel, which cried with a loude voice: 'I am clene frö this bloude. Thë all ŷ people turned thë towarde him,  $\mathfrak{g}$  saide: What meane these wordes, ŷ thou hast spokë? Daniel stode in ŷ myddest of thë,  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayde: Are ye soch fooles (O ye childrë of Israel) ŷ ye cā not discerne? Ye haue here condëned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the trueth wherfore: Go syt on iudgment agayne, for they haue spoken false witnesse agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haist. And the elders (that is, the principall heades) sayde vnto him: come sit downe here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as greate honoure, as an elder. And Daniel sayde vnto them : " Put these two asyde one from another and then shal I heare them. When they were put a sunder one from another, he called one of them, and sayde vnto him: O thou olde canckerde carle, that hast vsed thy wickednesse so longe: thine vngracious dedes which thou hast done afore, are now come to light. For thou hast geuen false judgmentes, thou hast oppressed the innocent, and letten the giltie go fre, where as yet the LORDE saieth: "The innocent and righteous se thou slaye not. Wel than, yf thou hast sene her, tel me, 12 vnder what tre sawest thou them talkynge together? He answered: Vnder a Molbery tre. And Daniel sayde: very wel, Now thou leist euen vpon thine heade. Lo the messaunger of the LORDE hath receaued the sentence of him, to cut  $\psi$  in two.

Then put he him asyde, and called for the other, and sayde vnto him: O thou sede of Canaan but not of Iuda: Fayrnesse hath disceaued the, and lust hath subuerted thine herte. Thus dealte ye afore with the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Iuda wolde not abyde youre wickednesse. Now tell me than, vnder what tre didest thou take them speakinge together? He answered: vnder a Then sayde Daniel vnto pomgranate tre. him: very wel, now thou leyst also euen vpo thine heade. The messaunger of the LORDE stondeth waytinge with the swerde, to cut the in two, and to slave you both.

The first Chapter.

FTER that Alexander the sonne of Philippe, kynge of Macedonia wente A Philippe, kynge of Macedonia wente forth of the londe of Cethim, and slewe Darius kynge of the Persiās and Meedes: It happened, that he toke greate warres in honde, wanne very many stronge cities, and slew many kinges of § earth: goinge thorow to § endes of the worlde, and gettinge many spoyles of the people: In so moch, y the worlde stode in greate awe of him," a therfore was he proude in his herte. Now whe he had gathered a mightie stroge hoost, a subdued y lodes and people with their prynces, so that they became tributaries vnto hi: he fell sick. And whe he perceased that he must nedes die, he called for his noble estates (which had bene brought vp with him of children) a parted his kyngdome amonge them,' whyle he was yet alyue. So Alexader raygned xij. yeare, and then dyed.

After his death fell the kyngdome vnto his prynces, and they optayned it euery one in his rowme, and caused them selues to be crowned as kynges: and so dyd their childrë after them many yeares,  $\mathfrak{g}$  moch wickednessc increaced in the worlde. Out of these came  $\mathfrak{f}$  vngracious rote, noble Antiochus  $\mathfrak{f}$  sonne of Antiochus the kynge<sup>c</sup> (which had bene a pledge at Rome)  $\mathfrak{g}$  he raigned in  $\mathfrak{f}$  Cxxxvij. yeare of the raigne of the Grekes.

In those dayes wete there out of Israel wicked men, which moued moch people with their courcel, sayege: Let vs go  $\mathfrak{g}$  make a couenaunt with the Heithen, y are rounde aboute vs: 'for sence we departed from them, we have had moch sorow. So this deuyce pleased them well, and certayne of  $\mathfrak{F}$  people toke vpon the for to go vnto  $\mathfrak{F}$  kynge, which gaue them licence to do after the ordinauce of the Heithen.' Then set they vp an open scole (at Ierusalem) of the lawes of the Heithe, and were nomore circuncised: but forsoke  $\mathfrak{F}$  holy Testamente, and ioyned them selues to  $\mathfrak{F}$  Heithe,'  $\mathfrak{g}$  were cleane solde to do myschefe.

So when Antiochus beganne to be mightie in his kyngdome, he wente aboute to optayne y londe of Egipte also, that he might haue the dominion of two realmes. Vpon this entred he in to Egipte<sup>4</sup> with a stronge hoost, with charettes, elephantes, horsmen g a greate nombre of shippes, and beganne to warre agaynst Ptolomy the kynge of Egipte. But Ptolomy was afrayed of him, and fled: and many of his people were wounded to death. Thus Antiochus wāne many strõge cities, and toke awaye great good out of the londe of Egipte.

And after that Antiochus had smytten Egipte, he turned agayne in the Cxliij. yeare g wente towarde Israel,' and came vp to Ierusalem with a mightie people : and entred proudly into ŷ Sanctuary, and toke awaye the golden altare, the candilsticke and all $ ornamētes therof: the table of the shewbred the pouringe vessel, the chargers, the golden spones, the vale, the crownes and golden apparel of the temple, and brake downe all. He toke also the syluer and golde, the precious Iewels, and the secrete treasures that he foude. And when he had taken awaye alltogether, caused a greate murthur of men, and so fulfilled his malicious pryde, he departed in to his owne londe.

Thus there arose greate heuinesse and misery in all the londe of Israel. The prynces and the elders of the people mourned, the yoge men and the maydens were defyled, and the fayre beutye of women was chaunged: the brydegrome and the bryde toke them to mournynge: the londe and those that dwelt therin, was moued: for all the house of Iacob was brought to confucion.

After two yeares the kynge sent his chefe treasurer vnto the cities of Iuda,* which came to Ierusalem with a greate multitude of people, speakige peaceable wordes vnto the, but all was disceate : for when they had geuen him credence, he fell sodely vpon the cite, and smote it sore, 'and destroyed moch people of Israel. And when he had spoyled the cite, he set fyre on it, "castinge downe houses and walles on euery syde. The women a their children toke they captiue, and led awaye their catell. Then buylded they the castel of Dauid with a greate and thicke wall, and with mightie towres, and made it a stronge holde for them. Besyde all this they sett wicked people and vngodly men to kepe it, stoared it with weapens and vytales: gathered the goodes of Ierusalem, and layed the vp there : thus became it a theuysh castell.

And this was done to laye waite for the people that wente in to the Sanctuary, and for the cruell destruccion of Israel. Thus they shed innocent bloude on euery syde of  $\hat{y}$ Sanctuary, and defyled it: In so moch that the citesyns were fayne to departe, and the cite became an habitacion of straungers, beynge desolate of hir owne sede, for hir owne natyues were fayne to leaue her. Hir Sāctuary was clene waisted, <sup>6</sup> hir holy dayes were turned in to mournynge, hir Sabbathes were had in derision, and hir honoure brought to naught. Loke how greate hir glory was afore, so greate was hir confucion, and hir ioye turned in to sorow.

Antiochus also the kynge sent out a com-钜 mission<sup>6</sup> vnto all his kyngdome, that all the people shulde be one. Then they left euery man his lawe, and all the Heithen agreed to the comaundement of kynge Antiochus: Yee many of the Israelites consented there vnto, offerynge vnto Idols, and defylinge the Sab-So the kynge Antiochus sent his bath. messaungers with his commission vnto Ierusalem, and to all v cities of Iuda: that they shulde folowe y lawes of the Heithe, and forbad ether burntofferynge, meatofferynge or peaceofferynge to be made in the temple of God, a that there shulde no Sabbath ner hye feast daye be kepte: but commaunded, that the Sanctuary and the holy people of Israel shulde be defyled.

He commaunded also that there shulde be set vp other altares, temples and Idols: to offre vp swynes flesh and other vnclene beastes: that men shulde leaue their children vncircumcised, to defyle their soules with all maner of vnclennesse g abhominacions: that they might so forget the lawe, and chaūge all the holy ordinaunces of God: and that who so euer wolde not do accordynge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, shulde suffre death. In like maner commaunded he thorow out all his realme, and sett rulers ouer the people, for to compell them to do these thynges, commaundinge the cities of Iuda to do sacrifice vnto Idols.

Then wente the people vnto the Heithen by heapes, forsoke the lawe of the LORDE, and committed moch euell in the londe: yee and chaced out the secrete Israelites, which had hyd them selues in corners and preuv The xv. daye of the moneth Casleu, J places. in the Cxlv. yeare, set kynge Antiochus an abhominable Idol of desolacion ypon the altare of God, and they buylded altares thorow out all the cities of Iuda on euery syde, before the dores of the houses, and in the stretes: where they brent incense, and dyd sacrifyce. And as for the bokes of the lawe of God, they brent them in the fyre, and rente them in peces. What so euer he was that had a boke of the Testament of the LORDE founde by hym, yee who so euer endeuored himself to kepe the lawe of the LORDE, the kynges commaundement was, y they shulde put him to death. And thorow his auctorite they executed these thinges euery moneth, vpon the people of Israel that were founde in the cities.

The fyue and twentye daye of the moneth,<sup>d</sup> what tyme as they dyd sacrifice vpon the altare (which stode in the steade of the altare of the LORDE) acordinge to the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, they put certayne women to death, which had caused their children to be circumcised: Not only that, but they hanged vp the children by the neckes thorow out all their houses, and slewe the circumcisers of them.

Yet were there many of the people of Israel, which determed in them selues, that they wolde not eate vncleane thinges: but chose rather to suffre death, then to be defyled with vncleane meates. So because they wolde not breake the blessed lawe of God, they were cruelly slayne. And this greate tyranny increased very sore vpon the people of Israel.

The ij. Chapter.

IN those dayes there dyd stöde vp one A Matathias the sonne of Symeon the prest (out of the kynred of Ioaris) frö Ierusalem, and dwelt vpon the mount of Modin, and had v. sonnes: Ihö called Gaddis: Symon, called Thasi: Iudas, other wyse called Machabeus: Eleazer, other wyse called Abaron: and Ionathas, whose surname was Apphus. These sawe the euell, ý was done amonge the people of Iuda and Ierusalem. And Matathias sayde: Wo is me, alas that euer I was borne, to se this misery of my people, and ý piteous destruccio of the holy cite: a thus to syt so styll, it beynge delyuered in to the hondes of the enemies, "Hir Sanctuary is come in to the power of straungers, hir temple is, as it were a man y hath lost his good name. Hir precious ornamentes are caried awaye captyue, hir olde men are slayne in the stretes, and hir yonge men are fallen thorow the swearde of the enemies.

What people is it, that hath not some possession in hir kyngdome? Or who hath not gotten some of hir spoyles? All hir glory is taken awaye. She was a Quene, and now she is become an handmayde. Beholde our Sanctuary, oure bewtye and honoure is waisted awaye, and defyled by the Gentiles. What helpeth it vs then to lyue? And Matathias rente his clothes, he and his sonnes, and put sackcloth vpon them, g mourned very sore.

B Then came the men thither which were sent of kynge Antiochus, to compell soch as were fled in to the cite of Modin, for to do sacrifice and to burne incense vnto Idols, and to forsake the lawe of God. So, many of the people of Israel consented and enclyned vnto them, but Matathias and his sonnes remayned stedfast. Then spake the commissioners of kynge Antiochus, a sayde vnto Matathias: Thou art a noble man, of hye reputation and greate in this cite, havinge fayre children and brethren. Come thou therfore first, and fulfill the kynges commaundemet, like as all the Heithen haue done, yee and y men of Iuda, and soch as remayne at Ierusalem : so shalt thou and thy children be in y kynges fauoure, and enriched with golde, syluer and greate rewardes.

Matathias answered, and spake with a loude C voyce: Though all nacions obeye the kynge Antiochus, and fall awaie euery man fro kepynge y lawe of their fathers: though they consente to his commaundementes, yet wil I a my sonnes and my brethren, not fall from the lawe of oure fathers. God forbyd we shulde: that were not good for vs, that we shulde forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God,' and to agre vuto the commaundement of kynge Antiochus. Therfore we will do no soch sacrifice, nether breake the statutes of oure lawe, to go another waye. And whe he had spoken these wordes,' there came one of the lewes, which openly in the sight of all, dyd sacrifice vnto the Idols vpon the aulter in the cite of Modin, acordinge to the kynges commaundement.

When Matathias sawe this, it greued him at the herte, so that his raynes shoke withall, and his wrath kindled for very zele of the lawe. With that he gaue a szkippe forth, and kylled the Iewe besyde the aulter: Yee and slewe & kynges commissioner, that copelled him to do sacrifice, a destroyed the aulter at the same time : soch a zele had he vnto the lawe of God, like as "Phinees dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salomi. And Matathias cried with a loude voyce thorow & cite, sayenge: Who so is feruent in the lawe, a wil kepe 🖞 couenaunt, let him folowe me. So he and his sonnes fled in to the mountaynes" and left all that euer they had in § cite. Many other godly men also departed in to the wyldernesse with their children, their wyues and their catell, and remayned there : for the tyranny increaced so sore vpon them.

Now when the kynges seruauntes and the  $\mathbf{B}$ hoost, which was at Ierusalem in the cite of Dauid herde, that certayne mē had broken the kynges commaundement and were gone their waye to the wyldernesse in to secrete places, and that there were many departed after them: they followed vpon them to fight agaynst them in the Sabbath daye, and sayde: Wyll ye yet rebell? Get you hence g do the commaundement of kynge Antiochus, and ye shal lyue. They answered: We wil not go forth, nether wil we do the kinges comaundement, to defyle y Sabbath daye.' Then beganne they to fight agaynst them neuerthelesse they gaue them none other answere, nether cast they one stone at them, ner made fast their preuy places, but sayde: We wil dye all in our innocency, heauen a earth shal testifie with vs, that ye put vs to death wrongeously. Thus they fought agaynst them vpon the Sabbath, a slewe both men and catell, their wyues and their children, to the nombre of a thousande people.

When Matathias and his frendes herde this, 1 they mourned for them right sore, and sayde one to another: Yf so be that we all do as oure; brethrë haue done, and fight not for oure lyues g for oure lawes agaynst the Heithen: then shall they the sooner rote vs out of the earth. So they cocluded amonge theselues at the same tyme, sayenge: What soeuer he be that cometh to make battayll with vs vpon the Sabbath daye, we wyll fight agaynst him,  $\mathfrak{g}$ not dye all, as oure brethren  $\frac{1}{2}$  were murthured so haynously. Vpō this came the Synagoge of the Iewes vnto thē: stronge men of Israel, all soch as were feruent in the lawe. And all they that were fied for persecucion, came to helpe them, and to stonde by them: In so moch that they gathered an hoost of men, and slewe the wicked doers in their gelousy, and the vngodly men in their wrath. Some of the wicked fied vnto the Heithen, and escaped.

Thus Matathias and his frendes wente aboute, and destroyed the aulters, and circumcided the children, that had not yet receaued circumcision: as many as they founde within  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  coostes of Israel: and folowed mightely vpon the children of pryde, and this acte prospered in their hondes: In so moch, that they kepte the lawe agaynst the power of the Gentiles and the kynges, and gaue not ouer their dominion vnto wicked doers.

I After this when the tyme drew on fast, that Matathias shulde dye, he sayde vnto his sonnes: Now is pryde and persecucion increased, now is the tyme of destruccion and wrathfull displeasure: Wherfore (o my sonnes) be ye feruent in the lawe, and ioperde youre lyues for the Testament of the fathers: call to remembraunce what actes oure fathers dyd in their tyme, so shall ye receaue greate honoure and an euerlastinge name.

And thus ye maye considre thorow out all ages sens the worlde beganne,<sup>4</sup> that who so euer put their trust in God, were not ouer come. 'Feare not ye then the wordes of an vngodly man, for his glory is but donge and wormes: to daye is he set vp, and to morow is he gone: for he is turned in to earth, and his memoriall is come to naught. Wherfore (o my sonnes) take good hertes vnto you, and quyte youre selues like men in the lawe: for yf ye do the thinges that are commaunded you in the lawe of the LORDE youre God, ye shal optaine greate honoure therin.

And beholde, I knowe that youre brother Symon is a man of wyszdome: se that ye geue eare vnto him allwaye, he shall be a father vnto you. As for Iudas Machabeus, he hath euer bene mightie and stroge from his youth vp: let him be youre captayne, and ordre the battayll of y people: Thus shall ye brynge vnto you all those that fauoure the lawe, and se that ye auenge the wronge of youre people, and recompence the Heithen agayne, and applie youre selues whole to the commaundement of the lawe. So he gaue them his blessinge, and was layed by his fathers: and dyed in the Cxlvj. yeare at Modin, where his sonnes buried him in his fathers sepulcre, a all Israel made greate lamentacion for him.

The iij. Chapter.

THEN stode vp Iudas Machabeus in his fathers steade,<sup>4</sup> and all his brethrē helped him: and so dyd all they that helde with his father, and fought with cherefulnesse for Israel. So Iudas gat his people greate honoure: He put on a brest plate as a giaunte, and arayed him self with his harnesse, and defended the hoost with his swearde. In his actes he was like a lyon,  $\mathfrak{g}$  as a lyons whelpe roaringe at his praye. He was an enemie to the wicked,<sup>4</sup> and hūted them out: and brent vp those, that vexed his people: So that his enemies fled for feare of him, and all the workers of vngodlynes were put to trouble:

soch lucke and prosperite was in his honde. This greued dyuerse kynges, but Iacob was greatly reioysed thorow his actes, and he gat him self a greate name for euer.

He wente thorow the cities of Iuda, destroyenge the vngodly out of them, turnynge awaye the wrath from Israel, and receauynge soch as were oppressed: and the fame of him wente vnto the vttemost parte of  $\hat{y}$  earth. Then Appollonius (a prynce of Syria) gathered a mightie greate hoost of the Heithen  $\mathfrak{g}$  out of Samaria, to fight agaynst Israel. Which when Iudas perceaued, he wente forth to mete him, fought with him, slewe him, and a greate multitude with him: the remnaunte field, and he toke their substaunce. Iudas also toke Appollonius owne swearde, and fought with it all his life longe.

33 Now when Seron (another prynce of Siria) herde saye, that Iudas had gathered vnto him the congregacion and church of the faithfull, he sayde: I will get me a name and a prayse thorow out the realme: for I will go fight with luclas and them that are with him, as many as haue despised the kynges commaundement. So he made him ready, and there wente with him a greate mightie hoost of the vngodly, to stonde by him, and to be auenged of the childre of Israel. And when they came nye vnto Bethoron, Iudas wente forth agaynst them with a small company. And when his people sawe soch a greate hoost before the, they sayde vnto Iudas: How are we able (beynge so fewe) to fight agaynst so greate a multitude and so stronge? seinge we be so weery, and haue fasted all this daye?

But Iudas sayde:" It is a small matter for many to be ouer come with fewe: Yee there is no difference to the God of heauen, to delyuer by a greate multitude or by a small company: for the victory of the battell stondeth not in the multitude of the hoost, but the strength commeth from heauen. Beholde, they come agaynst vs with a presumptuous and proudo multitude: to destroye vs, oure wyues and oure children, and to robbe vs. But we will fight for oure lyues and for oure lawes, and the LORDE himself shall destroye the before oure face: therfore be not ye afrayed of them.

As soone as he had spoken these wordes, he leapte sodenly vpon the. Thus was Seron smytten, and his hoost put to flight, and Iudas folowed vpon them beyonde Bethoron vnto the playne felde: where there were slayne eight hundreth men of them, and the residue fled in to the londe of the Philistynes. Then all the Heithen on euery syde were afrayed for Iudas and his brethren: so  $\dot{y}$  the rumoure of him came vnto the kynges eares, for all the Gentiles coude tell of the warres of Iudas.

So whan kynge Antiochus herde these tidinges, he was angrie in his mynde: wherfore he sente forth and gathered an hoost of his whole realme, very stronge armies: and opened his treasury, and gaue his hoost a yeares wagies in honde, commaundynge them to be ready at all tymes.

Neuerthelesse when he sawe, that there was not moneye ynough in his treasuries, and that thorow the discorde and persecucion, which he made in  $\mathring{y}$  londe (to put downe  $\mathring{y}$ lawes that had bene of olde tyme) his customes and tributes of the londe were myniszshed: he feared that he was not able for to beare the costes and charges eny lenger, ner to haue soch giftes, to geue so liberally as he dyd a fore, more then the kynges that were before him.

Wherfore he was heuy in his mynde, and thought to go in to Persides, for to take tributes of  $\hat{y}$  londe, and so to gather moch moneye. So he left Lysias (a noble man of the kynges bloude) to ouersee the kynges busynesses, from the water Euphrates vnto the borders of Egipte: and to kepe well his sonne Antiochus, till he came agayne.

Morouer, he gaue him half of his hoost  $\mathfrak{X}$ and elephantes, committed vnto him euery thinge of his mynde, concernynge those which dwelt in Iuda, and Ierusalem: that he shulde sende out an army agaynst them, to destroye and to rote out the power of Israel and the remnauth of Ierusalem: to put out their memoriall from that place, to set straungers for to inhabit all their quarters, and to parte their londe amõge them. "Thus the kynge toke the other parte of the hoost, and departed from Antioch (a cite of his realme) ouer the water of Euphrates, in the hundreth and xlvij. yeare, and wente thorow the hye countrees.

"And Lysias chose vnto him Ptolomy the

Then the Heithen lift vp their eyes: and 313 | when they sawe that they were commynge agaynst them, they wente out of their tentes in to the battayll: and they that were with Iudas, blewe vp the trompettes. So they 'buckled together, and the Heithen were discomfited, and fled ouer the playne felde : but the hynmost of them were slayne. For they folowed vpon them vnto Assaremoth, and in to the feldes of Idumea towarde Azot and Iamnia: so that there were slayne of them vpon a thre thousande men. So Iudas turned agayne with his hoost, and sayde vnto the people: Be not gredy of $ spoyles, we have yet a battayll to fight : for Gorgias a his hoost are here by vs in the mountaynes, but stonde ye fast agaynst oure enemies, and ouercome them: then maye ye safely take the spoyles.

As Iudas was speakynge these wordes, C there apeared one parte of them vpon the mount. But when Gorgias sawe that they of his partie were fled, and the tentes brent vp (for by the smoke they might vnderstonde what was done) they perceauynge this, were very sore afrayed: and when they sawe also that Iudas and his hoost were in $ felde ready. to stryke battayll, they fled euerychone in to the londe of the Heithen.

So Iudas turned agayne to spoyle the tentes, where they gat moch golde and syluer, precious stones, purple g greate riches. Thus they wente home, and sunge a Psalme of thankesgeuynge and 'praysed God in heauen: for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer: And so Israel had a greate victory in that daye.

Now all the Heithen that escaped, came and tolde Lysins every thinge as it happened. Wherfore Lysias was sore afrayed and greued in his mynde, because Israel had not gotte soch mysfortune as he wolde they shulde, nether as the kynge 'commaunded. The nexte yeare folowinge, gathered Lysias thre score thousande chosen men of fote, and fyue thousande horsmen, to fight agaynst them.

So they came in to lewry, and pitched 2 their tentes at Bethoron, where Iudas came agaynst them with ten thousande men. And when he sawe so greate mightie an hoost, he made his prayer and sayde : Blessed be thou (o sauioure of Israel) which diddest 'destroye the violent power of the giaunte, in the honde of thy seruaunt Dauid, and gauest the hoost of the Heithe in to the honde of Ionathas (the sonne of 'Saul) and of his weapen bearer.

Put this hoost now in to the honde of thy people of Israel, and let them be confounded in their multitude and horsmen. Make them afrayed, g discomforth the boldnes of their strength, y they maye be moued thorow their destruccion. Cast them downe thorow the swearde of thy louers, then shal all they that knowe thy name, prayse the with thankesgeuynge.

So they stroke the batell, and there were slayne of Lysias hoost, fyue thousande men. Then Lysias seynge the discomfetynge of his men, and the manlynesse of the lewes, how they were ready, ether to lyue or to dye like men: He wente vnto Antioche and chose out men of warre: that when they were gathered together, they might come agayne in to Iewry. Then sayde Iudas and his brethren: beholde, oure enemies are discomfited : Let vs now go vp, to clēse and to repayre the Sanctuary.

Vpon this, all the hoost gathered them 3E together, and wente vp vnto mount Sion. Now when they sawe the Sanctuary laied waist, the aulter defyled, the dores brent vp, the shrubbes growinge in the courtes, like as in a wod or vpon mountaynes, yee and that the prestes Celles were broken downe : They rente their clothes, made greate lamentacion, cast aszshes vpon their heades, fell downe flat to the grounde, made a greate noyse with the trompettes, and cried towarde heauen.

Then Iudas apoynted certayne men to fight against those which were in the castel, till they had clensed the Sanctuary. So he chose prestes y were vndefyled, soch as had pleasure in the lawe of God: and they clensed the Sanctuary, g bare out the defyled men) and their wyues, their children and their goodes haue the enemies led awaye captyue.

Whyle these letters were yet a readinge, beholde, there came other messaugers from Galilee, with rente clothes : which tolde euen the same tydinges, and sayde, that they of Ptolomais, of Tirus and of Sidon were gathered agaynst them, and that all Galilee was fylled with enemies to destroye Israel. When Iudas and y people herde this, they came together (a greate congregacion) "to deuyse, what they might do for their brethren, that were in trouble and beseged of their enemies. And Iudas sayde vnto Symon his brother: chose y out certayne men, and go delyuer thy brethren in Galilee: As for me and my brother Ionathas, we wyl go in to Galaadithim. So he left Iosephus y sonne of Zachary, and Asarias, to be captaynes of the people and to kepe the remnaunt of the hoost in lewry, a commaunded them, sayenge: Take the ouersight of this people, and se that ye make no warre agaynst the Heithen, vntill the tyme that we come agayne. And vnto Simon he gaue thre thousands men for to go in to Galilce, but Iudas himself had eight thousande in to Galaadithim.

Then wente Symon in to Galilee, and C stroke dyuerse batels with the Heithen: whom he discomfited, and followed vpon them vnto the porte of Ptolomais. And there were slayne of the Heithen allmost iij. thousande men. So he toke the spoyles of them, and caried awaye the Israelites (that were in Galilee and Arbatis) with their wyues, their children and all that they had, and brought them in to lewry with greate gladnesse. Iudas Machabeus also and his brother Ionathas, wente ouer Iordane, and trauayled iij. dayes journey in the wyldernesse: Where the Nebuthees met them, and receaued them louyngly, and tolde the euery thinge that had happened vnto their brethren in Galaadithim, and how that many of them were beseged in Barasa, Bosor, Alimis, Casphor, Mageth and Carnaim (all these are stronge walled and mightie greate cities) and y they were kepte in other cities of Galaad also: and tomorow they are apoynted to brynge their hoost vnto these cities, to take them and to wynne them in one daye.

So Iudas and his hoost turned in all the haist in the wildernesse towarde Bosor, and wanne the cite, slewe all the males with the swearde, toke all their goodes, and set fyre vpon the cite. And in the night they toke their iourneye from thence, and came to the castell. And by tymes in the mornynge when they loked vp, beholde, there was an innumerable people bearynge laders and other instrumetes of warre, to take the castell and to ouer come them.

When Iudas sawe that the battayll beganne, and that the noyse therof wente vp and range in to the Heauen, and that there was so greate a crie in the cite: He sayde vnto his hoost: fight this daye for youre brethren. And so came behynde their enemies in thre companies, and blewe vp the trompettes, and cried in their prayer to God.

But as soone as Tymothis hoost perceaued that Machabeus was there, they fled from him, and § other slewe them downe right sore: so that there were kylled of them that same daye, allmost eight thousande men. Then departed Iudas vnto Maspha, layed sege vnto it and wanne it, slewe all the males in it, spoyled it, and set fyre vpon it. From thence wente he and toke Casbon, Mageth, Bosor and the other cities in Galaad.

After this gathered Timothy another hoost, B which pitched their tentes before Raphon<sup>s</sup> beyonde the water. Iudas sent to spye the hoost, and they brought him worde againe, sayenge: All the Heithen that be rounde aboute vs, are gathered vnto him, and the hoost is very greate : Yee they have hyred the Arabians to helpe them, a haue pitched their tentes beyonde the water, and are ready to come and fight agaynst the. So Iudas wente on to mete them.

And Timothy sayde vnto the captaynes of his hoost: when Indas and his hoost come nye the ryuer : yf he go ouer first, we shall not be able to withstonde him : for why, he wil be to stronge for vs. But yf he darre not come ouer, so that he pitch his tente beyonde the water: then will we go ouer, for we shalbe stronge ynough agaynst him. Now as soone as Iudas came to the ryuer, he appoynted certayne scrybes of the people, and commaunded them, sayenge: se that ye leaue none behynde vpon this syde of 🕏 ryuer, but let euery man come to the battayll. So he wente first ouer vnto them, and his people after him.

And all the Heithen were discomfited before him, and let their weapens fall, and ranne in to the temple that was at Carnaim. Which cite Iudas wanne, and brent the temple with all  $\mathring{y}$  were in it: So was Carnaim subdued, and might not withstöde Iudas. Then Iudas gathered all the Israelites that were in Galaadithim, from  $\mathring{y}$  leest vnto the most, with their wyues and their children (a very greate hoost) for to come in to the londe of Iuda.

35 So they came vnto Ephron, which was a mightie, greate and stronge cite, " and laye in their waye. For they coude not go by it, nether of the right honde ner of the left, but must go thorow it. Neuerthelesse they that were in the cite, wolde not let them go thorow, but walled vp the portes with stones. And Iudas sent vnto the with peaceable wordes, sayenge: Let vs passe thorow youre londe," that we maye go in to oure owne coutre : there shal no body do you harme, we wil but only go thorow. But they wolde not let them in.

Wherfore Iudas commanded a proclamacion to be made thorow out the hoost, that euery man shulde kepe his ordre: and so they dyd their best like valeaunt men.

And Iudas beseged the cite all that daie and all that night, and so wanne it: where they slewe as many as were males, and destroyed the cite, and spoyled it, and wete thorow all the cite ouer them that were slayne. Then wente they ouer Iordane in to the playne felde before Bethsan. And Iudas helped those forwarde that came behynde, and gaue the people good exortacion all § waye thorow, till they were come in to the londe of Iuda. Thus they wente vp vnto the mount Sion, where they offred with myrth and thankesgeuynge: because there were none of them slayne, but came home agayne peaceably.

Now what tyme as Iudas and Ionathas were in the londe of Galaad, and Symon their brother in Galilee before Ptolomais: Then Iosephus the sonne of Zachary and Asarias the captaynes, hearinge of the actes

So they gaue their hoost a commaunde-If ment, and wente towarde Iamnia. Then came Gorgias and his men out of the cite, to fight agaynst them: Iosephus also and Asarias were chased vnto v borders of Iewry, g there were slayne y daye of y people of Israel ij. M. men: so y there was a greate misery amoge y people, a all because they were not obediet vnto Iudas a his brethren, but "thought they shulde quyte them selues manfully. Neuertheles they came not of the sede of these men, by whom Israel was helped. But the men that were with Iudas, were greatly commended in the sight of all Israel and all Heithen, where so euer their name was herde vpo, and the people came vnto them byddinge them welcome.

After this wente Iudas forth with his brethren, and fought agaynst the children of Esau, in the londe y lieth towarde the south where he wanne the cite of Hebron and the townes that lye besyde it: and as for the walles and towres rounde aboute it, he brent them vp. Then remoued he to go in to the lode of the Philistines, and wente thorow Samaria. At the same tyme were there many prestes slaine in y battayll, which wilfully g without advysement wente out for to fight to get them honoure. And when Iudas came to Azot in the Philistynes londe, he brake downe their altares, brent the ymages of their Idols, spoyled the cities, and came, agayne in to the londe of Iuda.

waited of the Elephante, goinge where so euer he wente, and departed not from him. Euery Elephante was couered with a stroge tower of wod, where vpon were xxxij. valeaunt men with weapens to fight, a within it was a man of Inde to rule the beest.

As for the remnaunt of the horsmen, he set them vpon both the sydes in two partes with trompettes, to prouoke the hoost, and to stere vp soch as were slowe in the armye. And when the Sonne shone vpon their shyldes of golde and stele, the mountaynes glistered agayne at them, a were as bright as the creszshettes of fyre. The kynges hoost also was deuyded, one parte vpon the hie mountaynes, the other lowe beneth: so they wente on, takynge good hede, and kepinge their ordre. And all they that dwelt in the londe, were afrayed at the noyse of their hoost, when the multitude wente forth, and when the weapens smote together, for the hoost was both greate a mightie. Iudas also and his hoost entred in to the battayll, and slewe vj. C. men of the kynges armye.

Now when Eleasar the Sonne of Saura dyd se one of v Elephantes deckte with the kynges badge, and was a more goodly beest the the other: He thought ŷ kinge shulde be vpö him, and ioperde himself to delyuer his people, and to get him a perpetuall name.

Wherfore he ranne with a corage vnto the Elephante in the myddest of the hoost, smytinge them downe of both the sydes, and slewe many aboute him. So wente he to the Elephantes fete, and gat him vnder him, and slewe him: then fell the Elephante downe vpon him, and there he dyed. Iudas also and his men seinge the power of the kinge and the mightie violence of his hoost, departed f from them. And the kynges armye wente vp agaynst them towarde Ierusalem, and pitched their tentes in Iewry besyde mount Sion. Morouer the kynge toke truce with them that were in Bethsura.

But when they came out of the cite' (because they had no vytales within, and the londe laye vntylled) the kynge toke Bethsura, and set men to kepe it, g turned his hoost to the place of the Sanctuary, and layed sege to it a greate whyle. Where he made all maner ordinaunce: handbowes, fyrie dartes, rackettes to cast stones, scorpions to shute arowes, and slynges. The lewes also made ordinaunce agaynst theirs, and fought a longe season.

But in the cite there were no vytayles, for it was the seuenth yeare of the warres, and those Heithen that remayned in Iewry had eaten yp all their stoare. And in the Sanctuary were few men lefte, for the hunger came so vpon them, that they were scatered abrode euery man to his owne place.

So when Lysias herde, that Philippe<sup>c</sup> (whom Antiochus the kynge whyle he was yet lyuinge, had ordened to bringe vp Antiochus his sonne, that he might be kynge) was come agayne out of Persia and Media with the kynges hoost, and thought to optayne the kyngdome: He gat him to the kynge in all the haist and to the captaynes of the hoost, and sayde: we of decrease daylie, and oure vytales are but small: Agayne, the place that we laye sege vnto, is very stronge, and it were oure parte to se for the realme. Let vs agre with these men and take truce with them, and with all their people, and graunte them to lyue after their lawe, as they dyd afore. For they be greued and do all these thinges agaynst vs, because we haue despysed their lawe. So the kynge and the prynces were content, and sent vnto them to make peace, and they receaued it. Now whe the kynge and the prynces had made an ooth vnto them, they came out of the castel, and the kynge wete vp to mount Sion. But when he sawe that y place was wel fenced, he brake the ooth that he had made, and commaunded to destroye the wall rounde aboute. Then departed he in all the haist, and returned vnto Antioche, where he founde Philippe hauynge dominion of the cite. So he fought agaynst him, and toke the cite agayne in to his hondes.

The bij. Chapter.

N the Clj. yeare came Demetrius y sonne a a small company of men, vnto a cite of the see coast, and there he bare rule. And it chaunced, that when he came to Antioch the cite of his Progenitours, his hoost toke Antiochus and Lysias, to brynge them vnto him. But when it was tolde him, he saide : let me not se their faces. So the hoost put them to death. Now when Demetrius was set vpon

These men accused the people of Israel vnto the kynge, sayenge: Iudas and his brethren haue slayne thy frendes, and dryuen vs out of oure owne londe. Wherfore sende now some man (to whom thou geuest credence) that he maye go and se all the destruccion, which he hath done vnto vs and to the kynges londe, and let him be punished with all his frēdes and fauourers.

Then the kynge chose Bachides a frende of his, which was a man of greate power in the realme (beyonde the greate water) and faithfull vnto the kynge: and sent him to se the destruccion that Iudas had done. And as for that wicked Alcimus, he made him hye Prest, and commaunded him to be auenged of the children of Israel. So they stode vp, and came with a greate hoost in to  $\mathring{y}$  londe of Iuda, sendinge messaŭgers to Iudas  $\mathfrak{q}$  his brethrë,  $\mathfrak{q}$  speakinge vnto them with peaceable wordes: but vnder disceate. Therfore Iudas  $\mathfrak{q}$  his people beleued not their saiēge," for they sawe  $\mathring{y}$  they were come with a greate hoost.

After this came y scribes together vnto Alcimus g Bachides, trustinge the best vnto them. And first, y Assideans requyred peace of them, sayenge : Alcimus y prest is come of the sede of Aarō, how can he disceaue vs? So they gaue them louīge wordes, g swore vnto them, and sayde : we wil do you no harme, nether youre frendes: and they beleued them. But the very same daye toke they lx. men of them, g slewe thē: acordinge to y wordes y are writtē: They haue cast y flesh of thy sanctes, g shed their bloude roūde aboute Ierusalē, gthere was nomū y wolde bury thē.

■ So there came a greate feare and drede amonge the people, sayenge: there is nether treuth nor righteousnesse in them, for they haue brokē the appoyntment and ooth that they made. And Bachides remoued his hoost from lerusalem, and pitched his tente at Bethzecha: where he sent forth, and toke many of them that had forsaken him: He slewe many of the people also, and cast them in to a greate pytt. Then committed he the londe vnto Alcimus, and left men of warre with him to helpe him, and Bachides himself wente vnto the kynge. And thus Alcimus defended his hie presthode, and all soch as vexed Israel, resorted vnto him: In so moch that they optayned the lode of Iuda, and dyd moch euell vnto the Israelites.

Now when Iudas sawe all the myschefe that Alcimus and his company had done (yee more then the Heithē them selues) vnto the Israelites: He wente forth rounde aboute all the borders of Iewry, and punyshed those vnfaithfull rennagates, so that they came no more out in to the countre. So whe Alcimus sawe, that Iudas and his people had gotten the vpperhande, and that he 'was not able to abyde them: he wente agayne to the kynge, and sayde all the worst of them that he coude. Then the kynge sent Nicanor, one of his chefe prynces (which bare euell wyl vnto Israel) and commaunded him, that he shulde vtterly destroye the people.

So Nicanor came to Ierusalem with a D greate hoost," and sent vnto Iudas and his brethren with frendly wordes (but vnder disceate) sayenge: there shal be no warre betwixte me and you : I wil come with a few men, to se how ye do, with frenshipe. Vpon this he came vnto Iudas, and they saluted one another peaceably: but the enemies were appoynted to take Iudas by violence. Neuertheles it was tolde Iudas, y he came vnto him but vnder disceate : wherfore he gat him awaie from him, and wolde se his face nomore. When Nicanor perceaued y his councell was bewrayed, he wente out to fight agaynst Iudas, besyde Capharsalama: Where there were slayne of Nicanors hoost, v. M. men: the residue fled vnto the castell of Dauid.

After this came Nicanor vp vnto moût Sion: and the prestes with the elders of the people wente forth to salute him peaceably,  $\mathfrak{g}$ to shewe him  $\hat{y}$  burnt sacrifices  $\hat{y}$  were offered for the kynge. But he laughed the to scorne, mocked the, defyled their offeringes, and spake diszdanedly, yee and swore in his wroth, sayenge: "Yf Iudas and his hoost be not delyuered now in to my hondes, as soone as euer I come agayne (and fayre well) I shal burne vp this house. With that, wente he out in a greate anger. Then the prestes came in, and stode before the aulter of the teple, wepinge  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayenge: For so moch as thou (o LORDE) hast chosen this house, that thy name might be called vpon therin, and  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  it

The ir. Chapter.

In $ meane season<sup>a</sup> when Demetrius herde that Nicanor r his hoost was slayne in the felde, he proceeded further to sende Bachides and Alcimus againe in to Iewry, and those that were in the right wynge of his hoost, with them. So they wete forth by the waye that ledeth vnto Galgala, and pitched their tentes before Mesaloth which is in Arbellis, and wanne the cite, and slewe moch people. In $ first moneth of the Clij. yeare, they brought their hoost to Ierusalem, and rose vp and came to Berea, with xx. M. fote men, and ij. M. horsmen.

Now Iudas had pitched his tente at Laisa, with thre thousands chosen men. And when they sawe the multitude of the other army y it was so greate, they were sore afrayed, a many conveyed them selues out of the hoost, In so moch y there abode no mo of them but viij. C. men. When Iudas sawe that his hoost fayled him, and that he must nedes fight: it brake his herte, y he had no tyme to gather them together: wherfore the man was in extreme trouble. Neuerthelesse he sayde vnto them, y remayned with him: Vp, let vs go agaynst oure enemies, peraduanture we shal be able to fight with them. But they wolde haue stopped him, sayenge: we shall not be able, therfore let vs now saue oure lyues, and turne agayne to oure brethren, and then wil we fight agaynst the, for we are here but fewe. And Iudas sayde: God forbyd, B that we shulde fle from them. Wherfore yf oure tyme be come, let vs dye manfully for oure brethren, and let vs not stayne oure honoure. Then the hoost remoued out of the tentos, g stode agaynst them. The horsmen were deuyded in two partes: the slynge casters and the archers wente before the hoost, and all the mightie men were formest in the felde. Bachides himself was in the right wynge of the batell, a the hoost drewe nye in two partes, and blewe the trom-They of ludas syde blewe § trompettes. pettes also, g the earth shoke at the noyse of the hoostes, and they stroke a felde from the morow till night. And when Iudas sawe v Bachides hoost was strongest of the right syde, he toke with him all the hardy me, and brake the right wynge of their ordre, and folowed yoon them vnto the mount Azot.

Now when they which were of the lefte wynge, sawe that the right side was discomfited, they persecuted Iudas and them that were with him. Then was there a sore battayll, for many were slayne and wounded of both the parties, Iudas also himself was kylled, and the remnaunt fled. So Ionathas and Symo toke Iudas their brother, and buried him in his fathers sepulcre in the cite of Mo-And all the people of Israel made greate din. lamentacion for him, and mourned longe, sayenge: Alas, that this worthy shulde be slayne, which delyuered y people of Israel. As for other thinges pertayninge to y battayls of Iudas, the noble actes that he did and of his worthynesse: they are not writte, for they were very many.

 And after the death of Iudas, wicked mē came vp in all the coastes of Israel,<sup>a</sup> and there arose all soch as worke vngodlynesse. In those dayes was there a greate derth in the loude, and all the countre gaue ouer them selues 𝔅 theirs vnto Bachides. So Bachides chose wicked men, and made them lordes in the londe. These sought out and made search for Iudas frendes, and brought them vnto Bachides: which auenged himself vpon thē with greate despite. And there came so greate trouble in Israel, as was not sens the time that no prophet was sene there.

Then came all Iudas frendes together, and sayde vnto Ionathas: For so moch as thy brother Iudas is deed, there is none like him to go forth agaynst oure enemies, agaynst Bachides, and soch as are aduersaries vnto oure people. Wherfore this daye we chose the for him, to be oure prynce and captayne to ordre oure batell. And Ionathas toke the gouernaunce vpon him at the same tyme, and ruled in steade of his brother Iudas. When Bachides gat knowlege therof, he sought for to slaye him: But Ionathas and Symon his brother, perceauynge that, fled in to V wildernesse of Thecua with all their company, and pitched their tetes by the water pole of Asphar.

Which when Bachides vnderstode, he came ouer Iordane with all his hoost vpon  $\mathring{y}$  Sabbath daye. Now had Ionathas sent his brother Ihon (a captayne of the people) to praye his frendes the Nabuthites,  $\frac{1}{2}$  they wolde lende them their ordinaunce, for they had moch. So the children of Iambry came out  $\mathbf{F}$ of Madaba,  $\mathbf{g}$  toke Ihon  $\mathbf{g}$  all  $\frac{1}{2}$  he had,  $\mathbf{g}$ wente their waye withall. Then came worde vnto Ionathas  $\mathbf{g}$  Symon his brother,  $\frac{1}{2}$  the children of Iambri made a greate mariage,  $\mathbf{g}$ brought  $\frac{1}{2}$  bryde from Madaba with greate pompe: for she was doughter to one of the noblest prynces of Canaan. Wherfore they remembred the bloude of Ihon their brother, and wente vp, and hyd them selues vnder the shadowe of the mountayne.

So they lift vp their eyes, and loked: and beholde, there was moch a doo,  $\mathfrak{q}$  greate repayre: for the brydegrome came forth,  $\mathfrak{q}$  his frêdes and his brethren met them with tympanys, instrumentes of musick, and many weapês. Then Ionathas and they that were with him, rose out of their skoukinge places agaynst them, and slewe many of them. As for the remnaunt, they fled in to  $\mathfrak{F}$  mountaynes, and they toke all their substaunce. Thus the mariage was turned to mournynge, and  $\mathfrak{F}$  noyse of their melody in to lamentacion. And so when they had auenged the bloude of their brother, they turned agayne vnto Iordane.

Bachides hearinge this, came vnto y very border of Iordane with a greate power vpon the Sabbath daye. And Ionathas sayde to his company: let vs get vp, g fyght agaynst oure enemies: for it stondeth not with vs to daye, as in tymes past: Beholde, oure ene- E mies are in oure waye, y water of Iordane vpon the one syde of vs, with banckes, fennes and woddes of y other syde, so y there is no place for vs to departe vnto. 'Wherfore crie now vnto heauen, that ye maye be delyuered from the power of youre enemies. So they And Ionathas stretched stroke the batell. out his honde to smyte Bachides, but he fled bacwarde. Then Ionathas and they y were with him leapte in to Iordane, a swymmed ouer Iordane vnto him, g there were slavne of Bachides syde that daye, a thousande men.

Therfore Bachides with his hoost turned againe to Ierusalem, g buylte vp y castels g stronge holdes that were in Iewry, Iericho, Emaus, Bethoron, Bethel, Thānata, Phara g Thopo, with hye walles, with portes g with lockes: g set men to kepe them, y they might vse their malice vpon Israel. He walled vp Bethsura, Gazara  $\mathfrak{g}$  the castell at Ierusalë also,  $\mathfrak{g}$  prouyded them with men  $\mathfrak{g}$  vytales: He toke also the chefest mens sonnes in the countre for pledges, and put them in the castel at Ierusalem to be kepte.

Afterwarde in the C.liij. yeare in the seconde moneth, Alcimus comaunded, that \$ walles of the ynmost Sanctuary shulde be destroyed,  $\alpha$  the buyldinges of  $\psi$  prophetes also. And when he beganne to destroye the, v thinges v he wete aboute, were hyndered:  $\mathcal{F}$  for he was smytten with a palsey,  $\mathfrak{T}$  his mouth shutt, so y he coude nomore speake ner commaunde eny of his house cocerninge his busynesse. Thus dyed Alcimus in greate misery at the same tyme. And whe Bachides sawe y Alcimus was deed, he turned agayne to ¢ kynge, α so the londe was in rest ij. yeares. Then all the vngodly men helde a councell, sayenge: Beholde, Ionathas and his copany are at ease, a dwell without care. Wherfore let vs brynge Bachides hither, a he shall take them all in one night.

So they wete a gaue Bachides this councell, which arose to come with a greate hoost, g sent letters priuely to his adherentes which were in Iewry, to take Ionathas a those v were with him: but they might not, for the other had gotten knowlege of their deuyce. And Ionathas toke L. men of the countre (which were the ryngleders of them)  $\alpha$  slewe them. Then Ionathas and Symon with their copany departed vnto the cite Bethbessen, which lieth in the wyldernesse, and repayred the decaye therof, a made it stronge. When Bachides knewe this, he gathered all his hoost, and sent worde to them that were of lewry. The came he and layed sege to Bethbessen, and fought against it a longe season, and made instrumentes of warre. O Now Ionathas lefte his brother Symon in the cite, and wente forth himself in to the countre, and came with a certayne nombre, and slewe Odares and his brethren and the children of Phaseron in their tentes : so y he beganne to be stronge, a to increase in power.

As for Symon and his company, they wente out of the cite, and brēt vp the instrumētes of warre, and fought agaynst Bachides, and discofited him. And Bachides was sore vexed, because his councell and trauayle was in vayne. Wherfore he was wroth at y wicked men (that gaue him councell to come in to their londe) and slew many of them. Then purposed he with his company to go awaye in to his owne countre : wherof whe Ionathas had knowlege, he sent embassitours vnto him, for to make peace with him, g y he shulde deliuer him his presoners againe. To the which Bachides cosented gladly, and dvd acordinge to his desyre : yee and made an ooth, that he shulde neuer do him harme all the dayes of his life. So he restored vnto him all the presoners that he had taken out of the londe of Iuda, and the turned and wente his waye in to his owne londe, nether proceded he eny further to come vnto y bor-ders of Iuda. Thus Israel had no more warre. And Ionathas dwelt at Machmas, and beganne there to gouerne the people, and destroyed the vngodly men out of Israel.

🛾 N the C.lx. yeare came Alexander ŷ 🕱 sonne of noble "Antiochus, and toke Ptolomais, whose citisens receased him, and there he raigned. When Demetrius herde therof, he gathered an exceadinge greate hoost, and wete forth agaynst him to fight. Wherfore Demetrius sent letters vnto Ionathas with louynge wordes, and praysed him greatly. For he sayde: we wyll first make peace with him, before he bynde him selfe with Alexander agaynst vs: els he shall remembre the euell that we haue done against him, his brother a his people. And so he gaue Ionathas leue to gather an hoost, to make weapens, and to be confederate with him, and commaunded the pledges that were in the castell, to be delyuered vnto him.

Then came Ionathas to Ierusalem, and red the letters in the audience of all the people, and of them that were in § castell. And therfore were they sore afrayed, because they herde, that the kynge had geuē him licence to gather an hoost. Thus were the pledges delyuered vnto Ionathas, which restored them to their elders. Ionathas also dwelt at Ierusalem, and begane to buylde vp and to repayre the cite: commaundinge the worke men, to wall it, and the mount Sion rounde aboute with fre stone, to be a stronge holde, and so

When Ionathas herde the wordes of Appollonius, he was moued in his mynde : wherfore he chose x. thousande men and wente out of Ierusalem, and Symon his brother met him for to helpe him: And they pitched their tentes at Ioppa, but the cite kepte him forth, for Ioppa was an holde of Appollonius. Then Ionathas layed sege to it, and they that were in the cite, for very feare let him in: and so Ionathas wanne Ioppa. Appollonius hearinge of this, toke thre thousande horsmen, with a greate hoost of fote, and wente as though he wolde go to Azotus, a came Immediatly in to the playne felde: because he had so many horsmē, and put his trust in thē. So Ionathas folowed vpon him to Azotus, a there they stroke the battayll. Now had Appollonius left a M. horsmen behynde them pryuely in the tetes. And when Ionathas knewe that soch waite was layed behynde them, they wete rounde aboute the enemies hoost, and shot dartes at the people from the mornynge to the euenynge. As for Ionathas people, they (kepte their ordre as he had commaunded them,  $\alpha$  the enemies horses were ever labouringe.

Then brought Symon forth his hoost, and set them agaynst the fote men. For the horsmē were weery allready. So he discomfited them, and they fled. And they that were scatted in the felde, gat them to Azotus, and came in to the temple of Dagon their Idol, ý they might there saue their lyues. But Ionathas set fyre vpon Azotus and all the cities rounde aboute it, g toke their goodes, "and brēt vp the temple of Dagon with all them that were fled in to it.

Thus were slayne and brēt well nye viij. thousandemen. So Ionathas remoued the hoost from thence, and brought them to Ascalon: where  $\hat{y}$  men of the cite came forth, and met him with greate worshipe. After this wente Ionathas and his hoost agayne to Ierusalem, with greate substaunce of good. | A    | I N the Clxxij. yeare gathered kynge De-metrius his hoost, and departed vnto Me-dia, to gett him helpe for to fight agaynstTriphon. Now when Arsaces the kynge ofPersia and Media herde, that Demetrius wasentred within his borders: he sente one ofhis prynces to take him alyue, and to bryngehim vnto him. So he wente and slewe De-metrius hoost, toke himselfe, brought him toArsaces, which kepte him in warde. And allthe londe of Iuda was in rest, so longe asSymon lyued: for he sought the wealth ofhis people, therfore were they glad to hauehim for their ruler, and to do him worshipeallwaye.Symon wanne the cite of Ioppa also for anhauen towne, and made it an intraunce in tothe Iles of the see. He enlarged the borders |   | of his people, and coquered them more londe: He gathered vp many of their people that were presoners: he had the dominio of Gaza, Bethsura and the castell, which he clensed from fylthines, and there was no mā that resisted him: So that every man tylled his grounde in peace, the londe of Iuda and the B trees gaue their frute and encreace. The elders sat all in judgment, and toke their deuyce for the wealth of the londe: the yonge men put on worshipe and harnesse vpon them. He prouyded vytayles for the cities, and made goodly stronge holdes of them : so that the fame of his worshipe was spoken of vnto the ende of y worlde. <sup>2</sup> For he made peace thorow out the londe, and Israel was full of myrth and iove.

Euery ma sat vnder his vyne a fyge trees and there was no man to fraye them awaye. There was none in y londe to fight agaynst them, for then the kinges were ouer come. He helped those that were in aduersite amonge his people, he was diligent to se $ lawe kepte: as for soch as were vngodly and wicked he toke the awaye. He set vp y Sanctuary, g encreased the holy vessels of the temple.

When & Romaynes and Sparcians had gotten worde, y Ionathas was deed, they were right sory. But when they herde y Symon his brother was made hye prest in his steade, and how he had wonne the londe agayne with the cities in it: they wrote vnto him in tables of laton, to renue the frendshipe  $\alpha$  bonde of loue, which they had made afore with Iudas a Ionathas his brethre. 'Which writinges were red before the congregacion at Ierusalem.

And this is the copy of the lettres, that the  $\mathbb{C}$ Sparcians sent: The Senatours and citesyns of Sparta sende gretinge vnto Simö y greate prest with the elders, prestes, g v other people of the Iewes their brethre: Whe youre embassitours that were sente vnto oure people, certified vs of youre worshipe, honoure and prosperous wealth: we were glad of their cominge, and haue written the earande which they spake before the councell of the people: namely, that Numenius the sonne of Antiochus, and Antipater the sonne of Iason the Iewes embassitours are come vnto vs, for to renue the olde frendshipe with vs. Vpon this the people consented, that the men shulde be honorably intreated, and that the copy of their earande shulde be written in the special bokes of the people, for a perpetual memory vnto the Sparcians: yee and that we shulde sende a copy of the same vnto Symon the greate prest.

After this dyd Symon sende Numenius 🗃 vnto Rome, with a golden shylde of a thousande pounde weight, to confirme the frendshipe with them : which when the Romaynes vnderstode, they saide: what thakes shal we recompence agayne vnto Symon g his children? For he hath stablished his brethre, and ouer come the enemies of Israel. Wherfore they grauted him to be fre. And all this wrote the Iewes in tables of laton, and naled it vnto the pilers vpon the mount Sion. The copy of the writinge is this:

The xviij. daye of y moneth Elul in the Clxxij. yeare in the thirde yeare of Symon the hye prest, in the greate congregacion of y prestes, rulers of the people, and elders of the countre at Asaramel, were these wordes openly declared :

For so moch as there was moch warre in E oure londe, therfore Symon y sonne of Matathias (come of the children of Iareb) and his brethren, put them selues in parell, and resisted the enemies of their people: that their Sanctuary and lawe might be manteyned, and dyd their people greate worshipe. Ionathas in like maner, after that he had gouerned his people and bene their hye prest: dyed, and lyeth buried besyde his elders.

After that wolde their enemies haue trodden their holy thinges vnder fote, destroyed their londe, and vtterly waisted their Sanctuary. Then Symon withstode them, and fought for his people, spent moch of his owne money, weapened the valeaunt men of his people, gaue them wages, made stronge  $\hat{y}$  cities of Iuda, with Bethsura that lieth vpon the borders of Iewry, (where the ordinaunce of their enemies laye somtyme) q set Iewes there for to kepe it.

Æ He made fast Ioppa also, which lieth vpon the see, and Gaza that bordreth vpon Azotus, (where the enemies dwelt afore) and there he set lewes to kepe it: and what so euer was mete for the subduynge of the aduersaries, that layed he therin. Now whe the people sawe the noble actes of Symon, and what worshipe he purposed to do for them, his godly behauoure, and faithfulnesse which he kepte vnto them, g how he sought by all waies v wealth of his people, because he dyd all this, therfore they chose him to be their prynce g hye prest. And in his tyme they prospered wel by him, so y the Heithē were take out of their londe: a they also which were in the cite of Dauid at Ierusalē in the castell (where they wente out and defiled all thinges that were aboute the Sanctuary, and did greate harme vnto clenlynes) and Symon put men of the lewes in it, for the defence of the londe and the cite, and set vp the walles of Icrusalem.

5 And kynge Demetrius confirmed him in his hye presthode, made him his frende, and dyd him greate worshipe. For he herde that the Romayns called  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  lewes their frendes, louers and brethren: how honorably they reccaued Symons embassitours: how  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$  lewes and prestes consented that he shulde be their prynce and hye prest perpetually (till God raysed vp the true prophet) and that he shulde be their captayne, to care for the Sanctuary, and to set officers vpon the workes therof, ouer the londe, ouer the weapens, ouer the houses of defence, to make prouvsion for the holy thynges, and to be obeyed of euery man, and all the writynges of y londe to be made in his name: that he shulde be clothed in purple and golde, and that it shulde be laufull for none of the people nor prestes to breake eny of these thynges, to withstonde his wordes, ner to call eny congregacion in the londe without him: that he shulde be clothed in purple, and weere a colar of golde: And yf there were eny which disobeyed or brake this ordinaunce, that he shulde be punyshed.

So all the people consented to alowe Symon, and to do acordynge to these wordes. Symon also himself toke it vpon him, and was contente to be the hye prest, the captayne and prynce of the Iewes and prestes, and to gouerne them all. And they commaunded to make this writinge in tables of laton, and to fasten it vnto the compasse of the Sanctuary in an open place: and to laye vp a copy of the same in the treasury, that Symon and his posterite might haue it.

The rb. Chapter.

MOROUER, kynge Antiochus the sonne a of Demetrius sente lettres from the Iles of the see, vnto Symon the hye prest and prynce of the Iewes, and to all the people, conteyninge these wordes: Antiochus the kynge sendeth gretinge vnto Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. For so moch as certayne wicked men haue gotten the kyngdome of oure progenitours, I am purposed to chalenge the realme agayne, and to restore it to the olde estate.

Wherfore I haue gathered a greate hoost and made shyppes of warre: that I maye go thorow the countre, and be auenged of them which haue destroyed oure londe, and waysted many cities in my realme. And therfore now I make the fre also from all the tributes, wherof all kynges my progenitours haue discharged the, and from other customes (wher from they have released the) what so ever they be: Yee I geue the leaue to smyte money of thine owne within thy londe. As for Ierusalem, I wil that it be holy and fre : and all the weapens and houses of defence which thou hast buylded and kepest in thine hondes, shal be thine. Where as eny thinge B is or shal be owynge vnto the kynge, I forgeue it the, from this time forth for euermore. And when we have optayned oure kyngdome, we shal do the, thy people and the temple greate worshipe: so that youre honoure shal be knowne thorow out y whole worlde.

In the Clxxiiij. yeare wente Antiochus in to his fathers londe, and all the men of warre came together vnto him, so that fewe were left with Triphon. So the kynge Antiochus folowed vpon him, but he fled vnto Dora, which lieth by the see syde: for he sawe y there was myschefe comminge vnto him, and that his hoost had forsaken him. Then came Antiochus vnto Dora with an hudreth a twentye thousande men of armes vpon fote, and eight thousande horsmen. So he compased the cite rounde aboute, and y shippes came by the see. Thus they vexed the cite by londe and by water, in so moch that they suffred no man to go in nor out.

"In the meane season came Numenius (a they that had bene with him) from the cite of Rome, hauvnge lettres written vnto the kynges and prouyncies, wherin were conteyned C these wordes: Lucius the Mayre of Rome sendeth gretinge vnto Ptolomy the kynge. The embassitours of the Iewes oure fredes beinge sent from Symon the hye prest and from the people of the Iewes, came vnto us, for to renue the olde frendshipe and bonde of loue, and brought a shylde of golde weyenge a thousande pounde, which we were contente to receaue of them. Wherfore we thought it good to wryte vnto the kynges a prouincies, to do them no harme, nor to take parte agaynst the, their cities ner countrees nether to mayntene their enemies agaynst them. Yf there be eny wicked personnes therfore fled from their countre vnto you, delyuer them vnto Symon the hye prest, y he maye punysh them acordinge to their owne lawe.

The same wordes wrote the Romaynes also vnto Demetrius the kynge, to Attalus, Araba, Arsaces and to all regions: as Samsanes, to them of Sparta, Delo, Mido, Sydon, Caria, Samos, Pamphilia, Lycia, Alicarnassum, and to y Rhodes: to Faselis, Coo, Sida, Arado, Gortyna, Gnydum, to Cypres and to Cyren. 13 And of euery lettre they sent a copy to Symon the hye prest and to the people of the Iewes. So Antiochus the kynge brought his host vnto Dora the seconde tyme, to take it: where he made diuerse ordinaūce of warre, and kepte Triphon in, y he shulde not come forth. Then Symon sent Antiochus two thousande chosen me to helpe him with golde. syluer and other plenteous geer: Neuerthelesse he wolde not receaue them, but brake all v couenaunt which he made with Symon afore, a withdrewe himself fro him.

He sent Athenobius also a frende of his vnto Symon, for to reason with him, sayenge: Ye witholde fro me Ioppa and Gaza (with the castell that is at Ierusale) which are cities of my realme, whose borders ye haue destroyed, and done greate euell in the londe, hauynge the dominacio in many other places of my kyngdome. Wherfore delyuer now y cities which ye haue take, with  $\psi$  tributes of  $\psi$ places y ve haue rule vpon without the borders of Iewry: Or els geue me fyue hudreth talentes of syluer, yee and for the harme that ye haue done in the cities and for the tributes of the same, other fyue hundreth taletes. Yf no, we shal come and fight agaynst you.

So Athenobius the kynges frende came to Ierusalē, and when he sawe y greate worshipe and honoure of Symö in golde, syluer and so greate plenty of ornamentes: he marveled, and tolde Symon as the kynge commaunded him. Then answered Symon and saide vnto him : 'As for vs, we haue nether taken other mës londe, ner witholde them, but only oure fathers heretage, which oure enemies had vnrighteously in possession a certayne tyme. This heretage of oure fathers haue we chalenged in processe of tyme. And where as thou cōplaynest concernynge Ioppa and Gaza, they dyd greate harme to oure people and in oure londe, yet wyll we geue an C. talentes for them.

Neuertheles Athenobius answered him not # one worde, but turned agayne wrothfully vnto y kynge, and tolde him all these wordes, and the greate dignite of Symon with all that he had sene, and the kinge was very angrie. In the meane tyme fled Triphon by shippe vnto Orthosaida. Then the kynge made Cendebeus captayne of the see coost, g gaue him an hoost of fote men and horsmen, comaundinge him to remoue v hoost towarde Iewry,  $\pi$  to buylde vp the cite of Cedron, to make vp v portes, g to warre agaynst v people of the lewes. As for the kynge him self, he folowed vpon Triphon. So Cendebeus came vnto Iamnia, g beganne to vexe y people, to treade downe lewry, to " take the people presoners, to slaye the g to buylde vp Cedron: where he set horsmē g other men of warre, that they might come forth and go thorow the stretes of Iewry, like as the kynge had commaunded him.

The rbi. Chapter.

THEN came Ihon vp from Gaza, and a l tolde Symon his father, what Cendebeus had done amonge their people. Vpon this called Symon two of his eldest sonnes, Iudas g Ihon, and sayde vnto them: I and my brethren a my fathers house, haue euer from oure youth vp vnto this daye, foughten agaynst the enemies of Israel, a God gaue vs good fortune to delyuer Israel oft tymes. And now for so moch as I am olde, be ye in steade of me a my brother, to go forth a fight for oure people, a the helpe of God be with you. So he chose xx. M. fightinge mcn of the countre, with horsmen also, which wente forth agaynst Cendebeus and rested at Modin.

In the mornynge they arose,  $\tau$  wete in to  $\psi$ playne felde : and beholde, a mightie greate hoost came agaynst the, both of fote men g horsmen. Now was there a water broke betwixte them, g Ihon remoued the hoost towarde them. And when he sawe that the people was afrayed to go ouer y water broke, he wente ouer first him self: and the men seynge this, folowed him.

Then Ihon set his horsmen a fote men in ordre, the one by the other, for their enemies horsmen were very many. But when they blewe vp the prestes trompettes, Cendebeus fled with his hoost, wherof many were slayne, and the remnaunt gat them to their stronge holde. Iudas also Ihos brother whas wouded at ŷ same tyme. And Ihon folowed still vpon y enemies, till he came to Cedro which he buylded. The enemies fled also vnto the towres y were in y feldes of Azotus, g those dyd Ihon burne vp. Thus there were slayne ij. M. men of them, a Ihon turned agayne peaceably in to lewry.

And in the felde of Iericho was Ptolomy the sonne of Abobus made captayne: which because he had abundaunce of syluer a golde, (for he had maried the doughter of Symon the hye prest) waxed proude in his mynde, g thought to conquere the lode, ymageninge falsed agaynst Symo a his sonnes, to destroye Now as Symon was goynge aboute C thē. thorow the cities, y were in y coutre of lewry, and carynge for them: he came downe to Iericho, with Matathias & Iudas his sonnes, in the Clxxvij. yeare, in y xj. moneth called Then Ptolomy y sonne of Abobus Sabat. receaued them (but with disceate) in to a stronge house of his called Doch, which he had buylded, where he made them a bancket.

So when Symon a his sonnes were mery a had dronken well, Ptolomy stode vp with his men (who he had hyd there) g toke their weapens, entred in to the bancket house, a slewe Symon with his two sonnes, a certayne Soch greate vnfaithfulof his seruautes. nesse dyd Ptolomy in Israel, and recopensed euell for good. Then wrote this Ptolomy § same vnto kynge Antiochus, requyringe him that he shulde sende him an hoost to helpe him: g so shulde he delyuer him the londe, with the cities g tributes of the same. He sent other men also vnto Gaza, for to take Ihon: g wrote vnto the captaynes to come to 2 him, t he shulde geue them syluer, golde and rewardes. And to Ierusalem he sent other, to take it and the Sanctuary.

The ranne there one before, a tolde Ihon in Gaza, that his father a his brethren were slayne, and how that Ptolomy had sent to slaie him also. Whe Ihon herde this, he was sore abaszshed, and layed hodes of them that were come to destroye him, and slewe them : for he knewe, that they wente aboute to kyll him.

As for other thinges concernynge Ihon : of his warres, of his noble actes (wherin he behaued him self manfully) of the buyldinge of walles which he made, and other of his dedes: They are written in the cronicles of his presthode, from the tyme forth v he was made hye prest after his father.

A THE brethrē of ŷ lewes which be at Ierusalem q in the londe of lewry, wish vnto those brethrē of ŷ lewes that are thorow out Egipte: good fortune, health and peace.

God the LORDE be gracious vnto you,  $\mathfrak{g}$ thynke vpon his coucnaunt  $\mathfrak{f}$  he made with Abraham, Isaac  $\mathfrak{g}$  Iacob his faithfull seruauntes: and "geue you all soch an herte, that ye maye loue and serue him, yee and perfourme his wyll with an whole herte and of a wyllinge mynde: He opē youre hertes in his lawe and in his commaundementes, sende you peace: heare youre prayers, be at one with you, and neuer forsake you in tyme of trouble. This is heare oure prayer for you.

What tyme as Demetrius raigned, in the Clxix. yeare, we Iewes wrote vnto you in  $\mathring{y}$  trouble and violence that came vpon vs. In those yeares after that Iason departed out of the holy londe and kyngdome, they brent vp 13 the portes, and shed innocent bloude. Then made we oure prayer vnto § LORDE, and were herde: we offred, and lighted the candels, settinge forth cakes and bred. <sup>6</sup> And now come ye vnto the feast of tabernacles in the moneth Casleu.

In the Claxaviij. yeare v people v was at Ierusalem and in Iewry, the councell and Iudas him self, sent this wholsome salutacio vnto Aristobolus kynge Ptolomys master, which came of the generacion of the anoynted prestes: and to the lewes that were in Egipte: In so moch as God hath delyuered vs from greate parels, we thanke him hylie, In that we resisted so mightie a kynge. And why? he brought men out of Persis by heapes, to fight agaynst vs and the holy cite. For as he was in Persis (namely, § captayne with the greate hoost) he perished in the tomple of Naneas, beynge disceaued thorow the deuyce of Naneas prestes. For as he was purposed to have dwelt there, Antiochus a his frēdes came thither, to receaue moch moneye for a dowry. . So whe Naneas prestes had layed forth § moneye, he entred with a small company in to the compasse of the temple, and so they shut the temple.

I Now when Antiochus entred by openynge the preuy intraunce of the temple, § prestes stoned § captayne to death, hewed the in peces that were with him, smote of their heades, and threwe them out. In all thinges God be praysed, which hath delyuered the wicked in to oure hondes.

Where as we now are purposed to kepe the purificacion of the temple vpon y xxv. daye of the moneth Casleu, we thought necessary to certifie you therof: that ye also might kepe the tabernacles feast daye, a the daye of the fyre, which was geuen vs when Nehemias offred, after that he had set vp y temple a the aulter. For what tyme as oure fathers were led awaye vnto Persis, y prestes (which then sought the honoure of God) toke y fyre priuely from y aulter, g hyd it in a valley, where as was a depe drye pyt: a therin they kepte it, because the place was vnknowne to euery man. Now after many yeares when it pleased God, V Nehemias shulde be sent from the kynge of Persia: he sent the 'childers' children of those prestes (which had hyd the fyre) to seke it. And as they tolde vs, they founde no fyre, but thicke water.

The comaunded he them to drawe it vp, g to brynge it him, g $ offerynges withall. Now when $ sacrifices were layed on g ordred, the prest Nehemias commaunded to sprenkle them g the wod with the water. Whe this was done, g the tyme come $ the Sonne shone, which afore was hyd in the cloude: there was a greate fyre kyndled, In so moch $ euery man marueled. Now all the prestes prayed, whyle the sacrifice was a makynge. Ionathas prayed first, and $ other gaue answere.

And Nehemias prayer was after this maner: O LORDE God maker of all thinges, thou fearfull a stronge, thou righteous a mercifull, thou y art onely a gracious kynge, onely lyberall, onely just, Allmightie and euerlastinge, thou y delyuerest Israel from all trouble, thou y hast chosen the fathers a halowed them : receaue the offeringe for the whole people of Israel, preserve thine owne porcion, g halowe it. Gather those together, y are scatred abrode from vs: delyuer them y are vnder the Heithës bondage, loke vpon them which are despysed a abhorred, y the Heithen maie knowe g se, how y thou art oure God: Punyshe them y oppresse, and proudly put vs to dishonoure. Set thy people agayne in thy holy place, d like as Moses hath spokē.

And the prestes songe Psalmes of thankes-Æ geuynge, so loge as the sacrifice endured. Now when the sacrifice was brent, Nehemias commaunded the greate stones to be sprenkled with the "resydue of the water. Which when it was done, there was kyndled a flamme of the also: but it was consumed thorow the light,  $\dot{\mathbf{y}}$ shyned from the aulter. So whe this matter was knowne, it was tolde the kynge of Persia, that in the place where the prestes (which were led awaye) had hyd fyre, there apeared water in steade of fyre, a that Nehemias g his company had purified the sacrifices Then the kynge considerynge a withall. ponderynge y matter diligently, made him a temple, to proue the thinge y was done. And Nehemias called the same place Nephthar, which is as moch to saye as a clensynge: but many men call it Nephi.

The ij. Chapter.

A T is founde also in the writinges of Ieremy the prophet,  $\dot{y}$  he commaunded them which were caried awaye, to take fyre, as it is sayde afore. 'He comaunded them also,  $\dot{y}$ they shulde not forget the 'lawe  $\mathfrak{q}$  comaundementes of the LORDE,  $\mathfrak{q}$   $\dot{y}$  they shulde not erre in their 'myndes, whe they se ymages of syluer  $\mathfrak{q}$  golde with their ornamentes. These  $\mathfrak{q}$  soch other thinges commaunded he them,  $\mathfrak{q}$ exorted them, that they shulde not lett the lawe of God go out of their hertes.

It is wrytten also, how the prophet (at  $\mathring{y}$ commaundement of God) charged them, to take the tabernacle  $\mathfrak{q}$  the arke with them:  $\mathfrak{q}$  he wente forth vnto the mountaine, where Moses clymmed vp,  $\mathring{\mathfrak{q}}$  sawe  $\mathring{y}$  heretage of God. And when Ieremy came there, he founde an open caue, wherin he layed the tabernacle,  $\mathring{y}$  arke  $\mathfrak{q}$  the aulter of incense,  $\mathfrak{q}$ so stopped the hole. There came certayne men together also folowinge him, to marck the place, but they coude not fynde it. Which when Ieremy perceaued, he reproued the, sayenge: As for that place, it shalbe vn-knowne, vntill ŷ tyme that God gather his people together againe, g receaue the vnto mercy. Then shal God shewe them these

For he beynge a wyse man, handled honorably  $\mathfrak{q}$  wysely: offerynge vnto God in  $\mathfrak{F}$ halowinge of the temple, when it was fynished. <sup>4</sup> And like as when Moses prayed vnto the LORDE, the fyre came downe from heauen,  $\mathfrak{q}$  consumed the burntofferinge: Euen so prayed Salomon also,  $\mathfrak{q}$  the 'fyre came downe from heauen,  $\mathfrak{q}$  cosumed the burntofferinge. And Moses sayde: because the synofferynge was not eaten, therfore it is cosumed. In like maner Salomon kepte the dedicacion (or halowynge) eight dayes.

In 🖞 Annotacions 🛛 wrytynges of \* Ieremy, 🕻 were these thinges put also: a how he made a lybrary, a how he gathered out of all countrees the bokes of the prophetes, of Dauid, the epistles of the kynges, and of the presentes. Euen so Iudas also, loke what he lerned by experiece of warre, a soch thinges as hath happened vnto vs, he gathered the all together,  $\sigma$  so we have them by vs. Yf ye now desyre to haue the same, sende some Where as we body to fetch them vnto you. the are aboute to celebrate the purificacion, we haue written vnto you. Therfore ye shall do well, yf ye kepe the same dayes. 12 Neuerthelesse we oure selues that haue medled with this matter for the shortenynge of it, haue taken no small laboure, but greate diligence, watchynges and trauayle. Like as they that make a feast, wolde fayne do other men pleasure: Euen so we also (for many mens sakes) are very wel content to take the laboure, where as we maye shortly comprehēde, the thynges that other men haue truly wrytten.

For he y buyldeth an house a new, must prouyde for many thynges to y whole buyldinge: but he that paynteth it afterwarde, seketh but only what is comly, mete and conuenient to garnysh it withall. Euen so do we also in like maner. And why? He that begynneth to wryte a story for the first, must with his vnderstondinge gather the matter together, set his wordes in ordre, and diligently seke out euery parte : But he that afterwarde wyll shorten it, vseth few wordes, and toucheth not the matter at the largiest. Let this be sufficient for a prologe, now wyll we begynne to shewe the matter: for it is but a foolish thinge to make a longe prologe, and to be shorte in the story it self.

The iij. Chapter

HAT tyme as the holy cite was inhabited in all peace and wealth, a when the lawes were yet very well kepte. (For so was it ordened by Onias the hye prest and other godly men, that were enemies to wick-ednesse:) It came therto, that euen the kynges and 'prynces the selues dyd the place greate worshipe, and garnyshed & temple with greate giftes: In so moch that Seleucus kynge of Asia of his owne rentes bare all the costes <sup>b</sup>belonginge to the seruyce of the offerynges. Then Symon of the trybe of Ben Iamin, a ruler of the temple, laboured to worke some myschefe in the cite: but the hye prest resisted him.

Neuerthelesse when he might not ouercome Onias, he gat him to 'Appolonius the sonne of Thersa (which thë was chefe lorde in Celosyria and Phenices) and tolde him, y the treasury in Ierusalem was full of innumerable money, and how that the comons goodes (which belonged not vnto the offeringes) were exceadinge greate also: yee and how it were possible, that all these might come vnder the kynges power.

Now when Appollonius had shewed the 13 kynge of the moneye, as it was tolde him: $ kinge called for Heliodorus his stewarde, and sent him with a commaundement, to brynge him the sayde money. Immediatly Heliodorus toke his iourney, but vnder a coloure, as though he wolde go thorow Celosyria and Phenices to vyset the cities, but his purpose was to fulfill the kynges pleasure. So when he came to Ierusalem, and was louyngly receaued of the hye prest in to the cite: he tolde what was determed concernynge the moneye, and shewed the cause of his commynge: he axed also, yf it were so in dede. Then the hye prest tolde him, that there was soch money layed vp for the vpholdinge of weddowes and fatherlesse childre, and how that a certayne of it belonged vnto Hyrcanus Tobias a noble man: and that of all the moneye (which that wicked Symon had bewrayed) there were iiij. hundreth talentes of syluer, and ij. hundreth of golde : yee a that it were vnpossible for those mens meaninge to be disceased, that had layed vp their moneye in the place and temple (which is had in worshipe thorow the whole worlde) for the mayntenaunce and honoure of § same. Whervnto Heliodorus answered, y the kynge had commaunded him in eny wyse, to brynge him the moneye.

So at the daye appoynted, Heliodorus  $\mathbf{C}$  entred in to the temple to ordre this matter. But there was no small feare thorow out the whole cite. The prestes fell downe before the aulter in their vestimentes, and called vnto heauen vpon him, which had made a lawe concernynge stuffe geuen to kepe," that they shulde be safely preserued, for soch as comitte them vnto kepynge. Then who so had loked the hye prest in the face, it wolde haue greued his herte: For his countenaunce and the chaunginge of his coloure, declared the inwarde sorowe of his mynde. The mā was all in heuynesse, and his body in feare: wherby they that loked vpon him, might perceaue the grefe of his herte. The other people also came out of their houses by heapes vnto the comon prayer, because the place was like to come in to confucion. The women came together thorow the stretes, with havrie clothes aboute their brestes.

The virgins also that were kepte in, ranne 玬 to Onias, some to the walles, other some loked out at the wyndowes: yee they all helde vp their hondes towarde heaue, g prayed. A miserable thinge was it, to loke vpon the comon people, a the hye prest beynge in soch trouble. But they besought Almightie God, that the goodes which were committed vnto the, might be kepte whole, for those that had deliuered them vnto their kepynge. Neuertheles the thinge that Heliodorus was determed to do, that perfourmed he in the same place, he him self personally beynge aboute the treasury with his men of warre. But the sprete of Allmightie God shewed him self openly, so that all they which presumed to obeye Heliodorus, fell thorow v power of God in to a greate fearfulnesse a drede. For there apeared vnto them an horse,<sup>6</sup> with a terrible man syttinge vpon him, deckte in goodly araye, and the horse smote at Heliodorus with his fore fete. Now he that sat vpon y horse, had harnesse of golde vpon him.

Morouer there apeared ij. fayre and beutifull yonge men in goodly araye, which stode by him, scourged him of both the sydes, a gaue him many stripes without ceassinge. With that, fell Heliodorus sodenly vnto the grounde. 'So they toke him vp (beynge compased aboute with greate darcknesse) and E|bare him out vpo a beare. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre in to y sayde treasury, was borne out, where as no man might helpe him: and so the power of God was manifest and knowne. He laye still domme also by the power of God, destitute of all hope and life. And they praysed the LORDE, that he had shewed his power vpon his place and temple, which a litle afore was full of feare g trouble: and that thorow the reuelacion of the Allmightie LORDE it was fylled with iove and gladnesse.

The certaine of Heliodorus fredes praied Onias, that in all haist he wolde call vpon God, to graunte him his life, which was geuynge vp the goost. So the hye prest considered the matter, and lest the kynge shulde suspecte that the Iewes had done Heliodorus some euell: he offred an healthofferynge for him. Now whe y hye prest had opteyned his peticion, the same yonge me in the same clothinge apeared, a stode besyde Heliodorus, sayenge: Thanke Onias y hye prest, for for his sake hath LORDE graunted the thy life :<sup>d</sup> therfore seynge y God hath scourged y, geue J him prayse thankes, and shewe every man his might a power. And whe they had spoken these wordes, they apeared nomore.

So Heliodorus offred vnto God, made greate vowes vnto him which had grauted him his life, thaked Onias, toke his hoost, a wete againe to § kinge. The testified he vnto euery mā, of y greate workes of God, y he had sene with his eyes. And who the kynge axed Heliodorus who were mete to be sent yet once agayne to Ierusalem, he sayde: Yf thou hast eny enemy or aduersary vnto thy realme, sende him thither,  $\alpha$  thou shalt have him punished, yf he escape with his life : for in y place (no doute) there is a speciall power g workinge of God. For he y dwelleth in heauē, vysiteth a defendeth y place: a all y come to do it harme, he punysheth a plageth thē. This is now y matter cocerninge Heliodorus, a ý kepinge of ý treasury at Ierusalē.

The iiij. Chapter.

THIS Symon now (of whom we spake A afore) 'beynge a bewrayer of the money and of his owne naturall countre, reported the worst of Onias: as though he had moued Heliodorus vnto this, and as though he had bene a brynger vp of euell. Thus was he not ashamed to call him an enemie of y realme, that was so faithfull an ouerseer g defender of the cite  $\mathfrak{a}$  of his people : yee  $\mathfrak{a}$  so feruent in the lawe of God. But when the malice of Symon increased so farre, y thorow his frendes they were geuen for a present vnto kynge Antiochus concubyne. Then came  $\mathring{y}$  kinge in all  $\mathring{y}$  haist, to still them agayne and to pacifie the matter, leauynge Andronicus there to be his debyte, as one mete therfore. Now Menelaus supposinge that he had gotten a right convenient tyme, stole certayne vessels of golde out of the temple, and gaue the to Andronicus for a present : and some he solde at Tyrus and in the cities therby.

Which when Onias knewe of a suertye, he reproued him: but he kepte him in a santuary besyde Daphnis, that lyeth by Antioche. Wherfore Menelaus gat him to Andronicus, and prayed him that he wolde slaye Onias. So when he came to Onias, he counceled him craftely to come out of the santuary, geuynge him his honde with an ooth (how be it he suspecte him) and the he slewe Onias, without eny regarde of rightuousnesse. For the which cause not only the Iewes, but other nacions also toke indignacion, and were displeased for the vnrightuous death of so godly a man.

Ø And when the kynge was come agayne from Cilicia, the Iewes and certaine of the Grekes wente vnto him, complayninge for the vnrightuous death of Onias. Yee Antiochus himself also was sory in his mynde for Onias, so y it pitied him, and he wepte, remembringe his sobernesse and manerly behauoure. Wherfore he was so kyndled in his mynde, y he comaunded Andronicus to be striped out of his purple clothinge, a so to be led thorow out all the cite, yee and y vngracious man to be slayne in y same place, where he committed his wickednes vpon Onias. Thus § LORDE rewarded him his punyshment, as he had deserued. Now when Lysimachus had done many wycked dedes in § temple thorow the councell of Menelaus, and the voyce came abrode: the multitude gathered the together agaynst Lisimachus, for he had caried out now moch golde.

So when the people arose and were full of displeasure, Lisimachus armed iij. M. vnthriftes to defende him: a certayne tyraunte beynge their captayne, which was growen both in age  $\mathfrak{q}$  woodnesse. But when the people vnderstode the purpose of Lysimachus, some gat stones, some good stronge clubbes,  $\mathfrak{q}$  some cast aszshes vpon Lisimachus. Thus there were many of the wounded, some beynge slayne,  $\mathfrak{g}$  all the other chaced awaye. But as for  $\mathfrak{F}$  wicked churchrobber himself, they kylled him besyde the treasury. Of these matters therfore there was kepte a courte agaynst Menelaus.

Now when v kinge came to Tyrus, they wmade a coplaynte vnto him of Menelaus, concerninge this busynesse, g y embassitours were thre. But Menelaus wente g promised Ptolomy to geue him moch money, yf he wolde persuade the kynge. So Ptolomy wete to the kinge in to a courte (where as he was set to coole him)  $\mathfrak{g}$  brughte him out of  $\mathfrak{F}$ mynde. In so moch y he discharged Menelaus fro y accusacions, y not withstondinge was cause of all myschefe: and those poore men (which yf they had tolde their cause, yee before the Scythians, they shulde haue ben iudged innocēt) the he codened to death. Thus were they soone punyshed, which followed vpō  $\psi$  matter for  $\psi$  cite, for  $\psi$  people,  $\mathfrak{g}$  for  $\psi$ holy vessell. Wherfore they of Tyrus toke indignacion, t buried the honorably. And so thorow y covetousnesse of them that were in power, Menelaus remayned still in authorite, increasinge in malyce, to the hurte of the citesyns.

The b. Chapter.

T y same tyme Antiochus made him g ready to go againe in to Egipte. The were there sene at Ierusalem (xl. dayes loge) horsmē runninge to and fro in the ayre, which had rayment of golde, a speares. There were sene also whole hoostes of mē weapened, g horses runnynge in an ordre, how they came together, how they helde forth their shildes, how y harnessed men drew out their sweardes, g shot their dartes. The shyne of § golde weapes was sene, g of all maner of armure. Wherfore euery mā prayed, y those tokens might turne to good. Now whe there was gone forth a false rumoure, as though Antiochus had bene deed: Iason toke a M. mē, a came sodēly vpō ý cite. The citesyns rāne vnto ý walles, at ý last was ý cite taken, and Menelaus fled in to the castell.

As for Iason, he spared not his owne citesyns B in the slaughter, nether considered he what greate euell it were, to destroye § prosperite of his owne kynsmen: but dyd as one that had gotten the victory of his enemies, and not of his frendes. For all this gatt he not the

| Fynally (for a rewarde of his wickednesse) he   | a  |

| enemy of his owne naturall countre and of       | v  |
| the citesyns,) he was dryuen in to Egipte.      | te |
|   | 1_ |

Thus he y afore put many out of their owne natyue londe, peryshed from home him self. He wente to Lacedemon, thinkinge there to haue gotten succure by reason of kynrede. And he that afore had casten many one out vnburied, was throwen out himself, no man mournynge for him, ner puttinge him in his graue: so that he nether enioyed y buriall of a straunger, nether was he partaker of his fathers sepulcre.

C Now when this was done the kinge suspecte, y the lewes wolde haue fallen from him: wherfore he came in a greate displeasure out of Egipte, a toke the cite by violence. *He contaunded his men of warre also, that they shulde kyll a not spare, but slave downe soch as with stode them, or clymmed vp vpo v houses. Thus was there a greate slaughter of yonge men, olde men, women, children and virgins. In iij. dayes were there slayne lxxx. M, fourty thousande put in preson, a no lesse solde. Yet was he not cotent with this, but durst go in to the most holy temple (Menelaus that traytoure to y lawes g to his owne naturall countre, beynge his gyde) a with his wicked hondes toke y holy vessell, which other kynges a cities had geuen thither for y garnishinge t honoure of y place : the toke he in his hodes vnworthely, a defyled them.

So madd was Antiochus, that he considered not, how that God was a litle wroth for the synnes of them that dwelt in the cite, for the which soch confucion came vpon that place. And why? 'y' it had not happened them to have bene lapped in many synnes, this Antiochus (as soone as he had come) had sodenly bene punished, and shot out for his presumpcio: "like as Heliodorus was, whom Seleucus the kynge sente to robbe $\vec{y}$ treasury. for the places sake, but the place for the peoples sake: and therfore is the place become partaker of the peoples trouble, but afterwarde shall it enioye the wealth of them. And like as it is now forsaken in the wrath of allmighty God, so when the greate God is reconcyled, it shal be set vp in hye worshipe agayne.

So when Antiochus had taken a M. and E iij. C. talentes out of the temple, he gat him o Antioche in all the haist, thinkinge in his pryde, that he might make me sale vpon the drye londe, and to go vpon y see, soch an hye mynde had he. He lefte debites there to vexe the people: At Ierusalem left he Philippe a Phrigian, in maners more cruell the himself y set him there: At Garisim he left Andronicus (Menelaus, which were more greuous to the citisyns then other. Now as he was thus set in malyce against y Iewes, he sent Appollonius an hated prynce," with xxij. M. comaundinge him to slaye all those  $\dot{v}$ were of perfecte age, and to sell the wome, maydes a children. When he came now to Ierusalem, he fained peace, a kepte him still vntill y Sabbath daye. And then he comaunded his men to take them to their weapens (for y Iewes kepte holy daye) and so he slewe all them v were gone forth to the open playe, runninge here and there thorow the cite with his men wapened, and mur-thured a greate nombre. 'But Iudas Machabeus which was the tenth, fled in to the wyldernesse, led his life there with his company amonge the wylde beestes and vpon the mountaynes: dwellinge there and eatinge grasse, lest they shulde be partakers of the fylthynesse.

am wel contente to suffre them, because I Thus this man dyed, leauynge ÿ feare the. memoriall of his death for an example, not only vnto yonge men, but vnto all y people, to be stedfast and manly. The bij. Chapter. paynes. a T happened also that there were vij. <sup>a</sup>brethren (with their mother) taken, a compelled by the kynge agaynst the lawe, to eate swynes flesh: namely with scourges and lethren whippes. And one of them which was y chefe, sayde: What sekest thou, and what requyrest thou of vs? As for vs, we are ready rather to suffre death, then to offende the lawes of God and the fathers. Then was the kynge angrie, and bad heate cauldrons and brasen pottes. Which when they were made hote, immediatly he commaunded y tonge of him that spake first, to he cut out, to pull the skynne ouer his heade, to payre of the edges of his handes and fete: yee and that in the sight of his mother and thy sede. the other of his brethren. Now when he was cleane marred, he commaunded a fyre to be made, g so (whyle there was eny breath in him) to be fryed in the caudron. In the which when he had bene longe payned, the other brethren with their mother exorted him vpon vs. to dye manfully, sayege: The LORDE God shal regarde the treuth, and comforte vs, like as Moses testifieth and declareth in his 'songe, sayenge : and he wyl haue compassion on his seruauntes. 38

So whe the first was deed after this maner, they brought the seconde to haue him in derision, pulled the skynne with the hayre ouer his heade, and axed him, yf he wolde eate swynes flesh, or he were payned in  $\mathfrak{F}$ other membres also thorow out his body. But he answered boldly, and sayde: I will not do it. And so was he tormented like as  $\mathfrak{F}$ first. And whe he was cue at  $\mathfrak{F}$  geuinge vp of  $\mathfrak{F}$  goost, he sayde: Thou most vngracious personne puttest vs now to death, but the kynge of  $\mathfrak{F}$  worlde shall rayse vs vp (which dye for his lawes) in  $\mathfrak{F}$  resurreccion of euerlastinge life.

After him, was the thirde had in derision : and when he was requyred, he putt out his tonge, and that right soone, holdinge forth his hondes manfully, and spake with a stedfast faith: These haue I of heauē, but now for the lawe of God I despyse them: for my trust is, that I shall receaue them of him agayne. In so moch that the kynge and they which were with him, marueled at the yonge mans boldnesse, that he nothinge regarded the paynes.

Now when he was deed also, they vexed the fourth with tormentes in like maner. So when he was now at his death, he sayde: It is better that we beynge put to death of  $m\bar{e}$ , haue oure hope and trust in God, for he shal rayse vs vp agayne. 'As for the, thou shalt haue no resurreccion to life.

And when they had spoken to the fifth, they tormeted him. Then loked he vnto  $\mathring{y}$ kinge,  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayde: Thou hast power amoge me (for thou art a mortall man also thy self) to do what thou wilt, but thinke not,  $\mathring{y}$  God hath forsaken oure generacion. Abyde the, tary styll a whyle,  $\mathfrak{g}$  thou shalt se the greate power of God, how he wil punysh the  $\mathfrak{g}$ thy sede.

After him they brought the sixte, which beynge at the poynte of death, sayde : Be not disceaued (o kynge) for this we suffre for oure owne sakes, because we haue offended oure God, a therfore marvelous thinges are shewed vpon vs. But thinke not thou (which takest in honde to stryue agaynst God) that thou shalt escape vnpunyshed.

This excellent mother (worthy to be well D reported of, and had in remembraunce) sawe hir seuen sonnes dye in one daye, and suffred it pacietly, because of the hope that she had in God: Yee she exorted euery one of them in especiall, and that boldly and stedfastly, with parfite wyszdome, wakynge vp hir wyuysh thought with a manly stomacke, and sayde vnto them: I can not tell how ye came in my wombe, for I nether gaue you breth ner soule, no ner life. It is not I y ioyned y mebres of voure bodies together, but y maker of y worlde, which fashioned y byrth of ma, a begane all thinges. Euen he also of his owne mercy shall geue you breath and life agayne, like as ye now regarde not youre owne selues for his lawes sake.

Now thought Antiochus that she had despysed him, therfore he let her go with hir reproues, and beganne to exorte the yongest sonne (which yet was left) not only with wordes but swore vnto him with an ooth, y he shulde make him a rich g welthy man (yf he wolde forsake v lawes of his fathers) yee and y he shulde geue him, what so euer were necessary E for him. But whe the yonge man wolde not be moued, for all these thinges, he called his mother, a counceled hir to saue hir sonnes life. And when he had exorted her with many wordes, she promised him, that she shulde speake vnto hir sonne. So she turned her vnto him (laughinge y cruell tyraunte to scorne) a spake with a bolde voyce: O my sonne, haue pite vpon me, y bare y ix. monethes in my wombe, that gaue the sucke, norished the and brought the vp vnto this age. I beseke the (my sonne) loke vpon heauen and earth and all that is therin, and considre, that God made them and mans generacion of naught: so shalt thou not feare this hangman, but suffre death stedfastly, like as thy brethren haue done: that I maye receaue the agayne in the same mercy with thy brethren.

Whyle she was yet speakynge these wordes, the yonge man sayde: Whom loke ye for? Wherfore do ye tary? I wil not obeye the kynges commaundement, but the lawe that God gaue vs by "Moses. As for the that ymaginest all myschefe agaynst the Iewes, thou shalt not escape the honde of God: for we suffre these thinges, because of oure synnes.

And though God be angrie with vs a litle whyle (for oure chasteninge g reformacion,) yet shal he be at one agayne with his seruauntes. But thou. (O shame full g most abhominable personne.) Pryde not thy self thorow vayne hope, in beynge so malicious vpon y seruauntes of God: for thou hast not yet escaped the judgmet of the God, which is all mighty, a seyth all thinges. My brethren y haue suffred a litle payne, are now vnder the couenaunt of euerlastinge life: but thorow the judgment of God, thou shalt be punyshed righteously for thy pryde.

As for me (like as my brethre haue done) I offre my soule a my body for y lawes of oure fathers, callinge vpon God, y he will soone be mercifull vnto oure people : yee a with payne g punyshment to make the graunte,' y he only is God. In me now a in my brethrē 🕏 wrath of allmighty God is at an ende, which righteously is falle vpon all oure people. Then v kynge beynge kyndled in anger, was more cruell vpon him then vpon all § other, a toke indignacio, y he was so lightly regarded. So this vonge ma dyed vndefiled, a put his trust stil in § LORDE. Last of all after § sonnes, was y mother put to death also. Let this now be ynough spoken, concernynge 🖞 offringes, a extreme cruelnesse.

The biij. Chapter.

THEN Iudas Machabeus and they y were with him, wete pryuely in to y townes, called their kinsfolkes a frendes together, toke vnto them all soch as contynued yet in the faith and lawe of y Iewes, and brought forth vj. M. men. So they called vpon the LORDE, y he wolde haue an eye vnto his people, which was trodde downe of euery ma: to be gracious vnto y teple, y was defyled of the vngodly: to haue copassion vpon y destruccion of the cite, (which was shortly like to be laied waist) to heare y voyce of y bloude y cried vnto him: to remēbre y most vnrighteous deathes of yonge innocent children, the blasphemies also done vnto his name, g to punysh the. Now whē <sup>c</sup> Machabeus had gathered this multitude together, he was to mightie for the Heithen (for  $\psi$  wrath of  $\psi$  LORDE was turned in to mercy) he fell vpon the townes and cities vnawarres, brent them, toke the most comodious places, g slewe many of the enemies. But specially he made soch chases by night, in so moch that his manlynesse was spoken of euery were.

So when Philippe sawe that the man increased by litle and litle, and that the matter prospered with him for the most parte: he wrote vnto Ptolomy (which was a captayne in Celosiria & Phenices) to helpe him in y kinges busynes. The sent he Nicanor Patrocli (a speciall frende of his) in all $ haist,<sup>d</sup> g gaue him of $ comon sorte of the Heithen no lesse than xx. M. harnessed men, to rote out y whole generacion of the Iewes, hauinge to helpe him one Gorgias a man of warre, which in matters concernynge battayls had greate experience. Nicanor ordened also the tribute (which the Romaynes shulde have had) to be geuen vnto the kynge, out of the captiuyte of the lewes, namely, ij. M. talentes. And immediatly he sent to y cities of y see coost, requyringe the for to bye Iewes to be their seruauntes a bonde men, promisynge to sell them lxxx. and ten for one talente: but he considered not the wrath of allmighty God, y was to come vpon him.

When Iudas knewe of this, he tolde the C Iewes y were with him, of Nicanors comynge. Now were there some of them fearfull, not trustinge vnto the rightuousnes of God and fled their wave. But the other v remayned, came together a besought the LORDE, to delyuer the fro y wicked Nicanor, which had solde the or ever he came nye them: and though he wolde not do it for their sakes, yet for the couenaunt that he made with their fathers, a because they called vpon his holy a glorious name. "And so Machabeus called his men together, namely aboute vi. M. exortinge them not to agree vnto their enemies, nether to be afrayed for  $\hat{y}$  multitude' of their aduersaries comynge agaynst them vnrighteously: but to fight manly, consideringe y reprofe that they had done to the holy place without cause, how they had despysed and oppressed the cite, yee and destroyed  $\psi$  lawes of the fathers. For they (sayde he) 'trust in their weapons and boldnesse, but oure confidence is in the allmighty LORDE, which in the twincklinge of an eye maye both destroye them that come agaynst vs, and all the worlde.

囫 He exorted them also to call to remebrauce the helpe, that God shewed vnto their fathers: as whe there perished an C. g lxxxv. M. of Sennacheribs people: And of v battaill v they had in Babilo agaynst y Galacians: how y all the Macedonias y came to helpe the, stode in feare; a how they beynge but only vj. M. slewe an C. a xx. M. thorow y helpe y was geuen them from heauen, wherby they also had receaued many benefites.

Thorow these wordes y me toke good hertes vnto the, ready to dye for the lawe g the coutre. So he set vpon euery copany a captayne, one of his owne brethren : Simon, loseph and Ionathas: geuynge ech one xv. C. men. He caused Eszdras also to reade the holy boke vnto them, and to geue them a token of the helpe of God.

Then he himself beinge captaine in y fore front of the battayll,' buckled with Nicanor.

Thus they toke the E money from those that came to bye the, and folowed vpon them on euery syde. But whe the tyme came vpon them, they returned, for it was the Sabbath, and therfore they folowed nomore vpon them. So they toke their weapens and spoyles a kepte the Sabbath, geuynge thankes vnto the LORDE, which had delyuered them that daye, and shewed them his mercy. After the Sabbath they distributed the spoyles to the sicke, to  $\hat{v}$ fatherlesse, and to wyddowes, and the residue had they them selues with theirs. Whe this was done, and they all had made a generall prayer: they besought the mercifull LORDE to be at one with his seruauntes.

The ir. Chapter.

T the same tyme came Antiochus agayne A with "dishonoure out of Persis. For when he came to Persepolis, and vndertoke to robbe the temple and to subdue the cite, the people ranne together and defended them selues, in so moch  $\frac{1}{2}$  he and his were fayne to fle with shame. And so after that flight, it happened, that Antiochus came agayne with dishonoure. But when he came to Egbathana, he gat knowlege what was happened vnto Nicanor g Timotheus. Now as he was auauncinge himself in his wrath, he thought he was able to avenge the iniury that was done to them, vpon the lewes: and therfore commaunded to make ready his charet, haistinge on his iourney without ceassinge: the judgmet of God prouokynge him, because he had spoke so proudly, that he wolde come to Ierusalem, and make it a graue of the Iewes. But the LORDE God of Israel,<sup>4</sup> that seith all thinges, smote him with an invisible plage, which no man coude heale.

For as soone as he had spoken these wordes, there came vpon him an horrible payne of his bowels, g a sore grefe of the tharmes. And y was but right: for he had martired other ments bowels with dyuerse and strauge tormentes, how be it he wolde in no wyse ceasse from his malice. Yee he was yet the prouder, and more malicious agaynst the Iewes: But whyle he was commaundinge to make haist in the matter, it happened y he fell downe violently from the charet, so y it brussed his body, g dyd him greate payne.

And so he that thought he might commaunde  $\hat{y}$  floudes of the see (so proude was he beyonde the condiciō of man) and to weye the hye mountaynes in a payre of scoales, was now brought downe to the grounde, gcaried vpon an horszlytter, knowlegynge  $\hat{y}$ manyfest power of God vpon him : so that  $\hat{y}$ wicked body of his 'was full of wormes, which in his payne fell quyck out of his flesh: In so moch  $\hat{y}$  his hoost was greued with the smell and styncke of him. Thus he that a litte afore thought he might reach to the starres of heauen, him might no man now abyde ner beare, for the vehemence of styncke.

Therfore he beynge brought from his greate pryde, begane for to come to y knowlege of him self: for the punyshment of God warned him, g his payne increased euer more g more. And when he him self might not abyde his owne styncke, he sayde these wordes: It is reason to be obedient vnto God, a that a man desyre not to be like vnto him. This wicked personne prayed also vnto the LORDE, of whom he shulde haue optained no mercy. And as for the cite that he came vnto so haistely, to brynge it downe to the grounde, g to make it a graue for deed men: now he desyreth to delyuer it fre. And as touchinge § Iewes, whom he had judged not worthy to be buried, but wolde haue cast the out for to be deuoured of the foules and wylde beastes, sayenge, that he wolde haue destroyed both olde and yonge: Now he promiseth, to make the like y citesyns of Athens. And where as he had spoyled the holy temple afore, now he maketh promyse to garnish it with greate giftes, to increase the holy ornamētes, and of his owne rentes to beare the costes and charges belonginge to the offerynges: yee and that he wolde also become a Iewe him self, to go thorow euery place of the worlde, and to preach the power of God.

But when his paynes wolde not ceasse, (for the righteous iudgmēt of God was come vpon him) out of a very despayre he wrote vnto the Iewes a lettre of intercession, cōteyninge these wordes: The kynge and prynce Antiochus wysheth vnto the vertuous citesyns of the Iewes, moch health and good prosperite.

Yf ye and youre children fare well, and yf all thinges go after youre mynde: we geue greate thankes. In my sicknesse also do I remembre you louyngly: for as I came out of Persia, and was taken with sore disease: I thought it necessary to care for the comon wealth. Nether despare I in my self, but haue a good hope to escape this sicknes.

But considerynge that my father led an hoost some tyme in  $\hat{y}$  hyer places,  $\mathfrak{g}$  shewed who shulde raigne after him, that (yf there happened eny cotrouersy, or eny harde thinge were declared,) they in the londe might knowe their chefe lorde,  $\hat{y}$  there shulde be no insurreccion: Agayne, when I pondre by my self, how that all  $\hat{y}$  mightie men and neghbours rounde aboute, are layege waite, and loke but for oportunyte to do harme: I haue ordened that my sonne Antiochus shall raigne after me, whom I oft commended to many of you, when I was in the hyer kyngdomes, and haue wrytten vnto him as it foloweth herafter. Therfore I praye you and requyre you, to remembre the benefites that I haue done vnto you generally and in especiall. For I hope that he shall be of sober g louynge behauoure, and yf he folowe my deuyce, he shal be indifferent vnto you.

Thus that murthurer and blasphemer of God was sorc smyttē: and like as he had intreated other men, so he dyed a myserable death in a straunge countre vpon a mountayne. And his body dyd Philippe (that wēte with him) cary awaye: which fearynge the sonne of Antiochus, wente in to Egipte to Ptolomy Philometor.

The r. Chapter.

A ACHABEUS now a his company (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) wanne the temple and the cite agayne, destroyed the aulters and chapels that the Heithe had buylded thorow the stretes: clensed the temple, made another aulter of bricke stone, and after ij. yeares they offered sacrifices, set forth the incense, the lightes and shewe bred. When that was done, they fell downe flat vpon the grounde, and besought the LORDE, that they might come nomore in to soch trouble : but yf they synned env more agaynst him, he him self to chasten them with mercy, and not to come in the hondes of those aleauntes and blasphemous men.

Now vpon the same daye that  $\hat{y}$  straungers poluted the temple, it happened that on the very same daye it was clensed agayne: " namely, the xxij. daye of the moneth called Casleu. They kepte viij. dayes in gladnesse, like as in the feast of the tabernacles: remembrynge that not longe afore, they helde the feast of  $\hat{y}$  tabernacles vpon the mountaynes and in dennes like beastes. And to  $\hat{y}$  same token they bare grene bowes, braunches and palmes before him that had geuen them good fortune to clense his place. They agreed also together, and made a statute,  $\hat{y}$  euery yeare those dayes shulde be solemply kepte of all the people of the Iewes.

How Antiochus then (that was called the noble) dyed, it is sufficiently tolde. Now wil we speake of Nicanor the sonne of that wicked Antiochus, how it happened with him: and so with few wordes to comprehende the aduersite that chaunsed in § warres. When he had taken in the kyngdome, he made one Lysias (which had bene captayne of the hoost in Phenices and Syria) ruler ouer the matters of the realme. For Ptolomy that was called Macron, beynge a ruler for the Iewes (and specially, to syt in judgment for soch wronge as was done vnto them) vndertoke to deale peaceably with them. For the which cause he was accused of the C frendes before Eupator: and when he was suspecte to be a traytoure (because he had left Cypers, that Philometor had committed vnto him : and because he departed from noble Antiochus, that he was come vnto) he poysoned himself, and dyed.

Now when Gorgias was gouernoure of the same places, he toke straungers and vndertoke oft tymes to warre with y lewes. Morouer the Idumeans that helde the stronge holdes, receaued those that were dryuen from Ierusalem, and toke in honde to warre also. But they that were with Machabeus, besought and prayed vnto the LORDE,' that he wolde be their helper: and so they fell in to the stronge holdes of the Idumeans, a wanne many places by strength: Soch as came agaynst them they slew, and kylled no lesse (of all together) then twentye thousande. Neuerthelesse some (no lesse then nyne thousande) were fled in to two stronge towres, hauynge all maner of ordinaunce to withstonde them.

Then Machabeus leauynge Symon, Iosephus, Zachaus and those that were with them, (which were very many) wente to besege the, and to fight where most nede was. Now they that were with Symon beynge led with couetousnesse, were intreated for money, thorow certayne of those that laye in the towers: toke lxx. M. drachmas, a let some of them escape. But when it was tolde Machabeus what had happened, he called $ captaynes. of the people together, accusynge those personnes, that they had solde the brethren for money, and let their enemies go. So he slewe those traytours, a immediatly wente in honde with the ij. towers. And when they had ordred them selues manly with their weapons a hondes, they slewe in $ two castels moo the twetie thousande.

there was gone forth a generall proclamacio thorow  $\mathring{y}$  cite because of peace, they consented therto, and suspecte nothinge: but when they were gone forth in to the depe, they drowned no lesse then ij. C. of them.

Whe Iudas knew of this cruelte shewed vnto his people, he commaunded those that were with him to make them ready, exortinge them to call vpon God the righteous iudge: wete forth agaynst those murthurers of his brethre, set fyre in ŷ hauen by night, brent vp y shippes, and those that escaped from the B |fyre, he slewe with the swearde. And when he had done this, he departed as though he wolde come agayne, and rote out all them of Ioppa. But when he had gotte worde that the lamnites were mynded to do in like maner vnto v Iewes which dwelt amonge them, he came vpon the Iamnites by night, and set fyre in the hauen with the shippes: so that the light of the fyre was sene at Ierusalem, vpon a ij. C. α xl. furlonges. Now when they were gone from thence ix. furlonges, in their iourney towarde Timotheus: v. thousande men of fote and v. hundreth horsmen of the Arabians fought with him. So when the batell was earnest, and prospered with Iudas thorow the helpe of God: y residue of the Arabians beynge ouercome, besought Iudas to be at one with them, and promised to geue him certayne pastures, g to do him good in other thinges. Iudas thynkynge that they shulde in dede be profitable concernynge many thynges, promised them peace: whervpon they shoke hondes, and so they departed to their tentes. Iudas wente also vnto a cite, which was very fast kepte with brydges, fensed rounde aboute with walles, g dyuerse kyndes of people dwellinge therin, called Caspin.

 They that were within it, put soch trust in the strength of the walles, 𝔅 in their stoare of vytales: that they were the slacker in their doynges, cursinge and reuylinge Iudas with blasphemies, and speakynge soch wordes as it becommeth not. But Machabeus callynge vpon the greate prynce of ŷ worlde (which without eny battayll rammes or ordinaunce of warre, <sup>a</sup>dyd cast downe the walles of Iericho, in the tyme of Iosue) fell manfully vpon the walles, toke the cite, and (thorow the helpe of the LORDE) made an exceadinge greate slaughter: In so moch that a lake of ij. furloges brode which laye therby, semed to flowe with the bloude of the slayne.

Then departed they from thence vij. C. and L. furlonges, and came to Taraca vnto ŷ Iewes that are called Tubianei. But as for Timotheus, they coude not get him there: for (not one matter dispatched,) he was departed from thence, and had lefte certayne men in a very stronge holde. But Dositheus and Sosipater which were captaynes with Machabeus, slewe those ŷ Timotheus had lefte in the house of defence, euen x. M. men. And Machabeus prepared him with ŷ vj. M. men ŷ were aboute him, set them in ordre by companies, and wente forth agaynst Timotheus, which had with him an C. and xx. M. men of fote, ij. M. and v. C. horsmē.

When Timotheus had knowlege of Iudas commynge, he sent the women, children and the other baggage vnto a castell called Carnion. (For it could not be wonne,  $\alpha$  was harde to come vnto, the wayes of the same places were so narow) and when Iudas copany came first in sight, the enemies were smytten with feare, thorow the presence of God, which seyth all thinges: In so moch y they fleynge one here, another there, were rather discomfited of their owne people," a would with the strokes of their owne sweardes. Iudas also was very earnest in folowinge vpon them and punyshinge those vngodly, and slewe xxx. M. men of Timotheus also himself fell in to the them. hondes of Dositheus a Sosipater, whom he besought with many prayers, to let him go with his life: because he had many of the Iewes fathers and brethren in preson, which (yf they put him to death) might be disapoynted. So when he had promised faithfully to delyuer them agayne acordinge to the condicion made, they let him go without harme, for the health of y brethren. And when Iudas had slayne xxv. M, he wente from Carnion.

Now after  $\mathring{y}$  he had chased awaye and slayne II his enemies, he removed the hoost towarde Ephron a ströge cite, wherin dwelt many dyuerse people of the Heithen, and  $\mathring{y}$  stronge yonge men kepte the walles, defendinge the mightely. In this cite was moch ordinaunce, and prouysion of dartes. "But when Iudas and his company had called vpon Allmighty God, (which with his power breaketh the strength of the enemies) they wanne the cite, and slew xxv. M. of them y were within. From thence wente they to the cite of the Scythians, which lieth vj. C. furlonges from Ierusalem. But when y lewes which were in the cite testified, that the citesyns dealte louyngly with them, yee and intreated them kyndly in v tyme of their aduersite, Iudas and his company gaue them thankes, desyringe them to be frendly still vnto them: "and so they came to Ierusalem the hye feast of the wekes beynge at honde. And after the feast they wete forth agaynst Gorgias the gouernoure of Idumea, with iij. M. men of fote and iiij. C. horsmē. Which when they met together, it chaunsed a few of the lewes to be slavne.

Æ And Dositheus one of the Bachenors a mighty horsma toke holde of Gorgias, and wolde haue takē him quyke. But an horsmā of Thracia fell vpon him, and smote of his arme, so that Gorgias escaped and fled in to Moresa. When they now that were of Gorgias syde, had foughte longe and were weery: Iudas called vpon the LORDE that he wolde be their helper,  $\pi$  captayne of the felde : and with that, he beganne with a manly voyce to take vp a songe of prayse, and a crie: In so moch that he made the enemies afrayed, and Gorgias men of warre to take their flight. So Iudas gathered his hoost, and came in to  $\psi$ cite of Odolla. And when the seventh daye came vpon them, they clensed them selues (as the custome was) a kepte the Sabbath in the same place. And vpon the daye folowinge, Iudas t his company came to take vp the bodies of them that were slayne, and to bury them in y fathers graues. Now vnder v cotes of certayne Iewes which were slayne, they founde lewels that they had taken out of the temple and from the Idols of the Iamniters: which thinge is 'forbydden the Iewes by the lawe. Then euery man sawe y this was the cause, wherfore they were slayne.

And so every man gave thankes vnto the LORDE for his righteous iudgmēt, which had opened the thinge that was hyd. They fell downe also vnto their prayers, and besought God, that the fawte which was made, might be put out of remembraunce. Besydes that, Iudas exorted § people earnestly, to kepe them selues from soch synne: for so moch as they sawe before their eyes,  $\dot{y}$  these men were slayne for the same offence. So he gathered of every one a certayne, in so moch that he brought together \* two thousande drachmas of syluer, which he sent vnto Ierusalem, y there might a sacrifice be offred for the myszdede. In the which place he dyd well a right: for he had some cosideracion a pondringe of § life v is after this tyme. For yf he had not thought y they, which were slayne, dyd yet lyue, it had bene superfluous and vayne, to make eny vowe or sacrifice, for the y were deed. But for so moch as he sawe, that they which dye in the fauoure a beleue of God, are in good rest a joye, he thought it to be good g honorable for a reconcylinge, to do the same for those which were slayne, that the offence might be forgeuen.

the profit of the citesyns. And why? all oure people (thorow the wickednesse of them) are not a litle troubled. Wherfore I beseke the (o kynge) considre all these thinges diligently, and then make some prouysion for the londe and the people, acordinge to the kyndnesse that thou hast offred vnto them. For as longe as Iudas hath the vpper hande, it is not possible that men can lyue in peace.

When he had spoken these wordes, other frendes also hauynge euell will at Iudas, set the kyuge Demetrius on fyre agaynst him. Which immediatly sent Nicanor (ruler of  $\mathbf{y}$ elephantes) a captayne, in to Iewry: commaundinge him, to take Iudas himself alyue, but to slaye them that were with him, and to make Alcimus hye prest of the temple.

Then the Heithen which fled out of lewry C from Iudas, came to Nicanor by flockes, thinkynge the harme and decaye of the lewes to be their welfare. Now whe the lewes herde of Nicanors commynge, g the gathervnge together of § Heithe: they "spreckled them selues with earth, and besought him (which made them his people, and euer defended his owne porcion with euydent tokens) that he wolde preserve them still. So at the commaundement of the captayne, they remoued from thence, and came to a towne called Dessasan. And Symon Iudas brother fell in honde with Nicanor, but thorow the sodane commynge of the enemies, he was afrayed.

Neuertheles Nicanor hearinge the manlynes of them that were with Iudas, and $ bolde stomackes that they had to fight for their naturall countre, durst not proue the matter with bloudsheddinge. Wherfore he sent Possidonius, Theodocius a Mathias before, to geue and to take peace. So when they had taken longe advysement there vpon, and the captayne shewed it vnto the multitude: they were agreed in one mynde, to haue peace. And they appoynted a daye to syt vpon these matters quyetly amonge them selues, y stoles also were brought and set forth. Neuerthelesse Iudas comaunded certaine men of armes to waite in conueniet places, lest there shulde sodenly aryse eny euell thorow the enemies. And so they commoned reasonably together.

D Nicanor, whyle he abode at Ierusalem, ordred himself not vnreasonably, but sent awaye the people that were gathered together. He loued Iudas euer with his hert, and fauoured him. He prayed him also to take a wyfe, and to brynge forth children. So he maried, lyued in rest, and they led a comon life. Chap. rríj.

And when he was come in to the teple, the chefe prestes and the elders of the people came vnto him (as he was teachinge) a sayde: "By what auctorite doest thou these thinges? and who gaue the this auctorite? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: I wil axe a worde of you also: which yf ye tell me, I in like wyse wyl tell you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. The baptime of Ihō, whēce was it? from heaue, or of men? Then thought they amoge them selues, and saide: Yf we save it was from heaue, then shal he saye vnto us: Why dyd ye not then beleue him? But vf we save it was of men, the feare we the people: For 'euery mā helde Ihon for a prophet. And they answered lesus, g sayde: We can not tell. Then sayde he vnto them: Nether tell I you, by what auctorite I do these thinges. But what thinke ye? A certayne man had two sonnes, and came to the first, and sayde: Go thy waye my sonne, a worke to daye in my vynyarde. He answered and sayde: I wil not, but afterwarde he repented, and wente. He came also vnto the secode, and sayde likewyse. And he answered Ð and saide: I wil syr. And wete not. Whether of them twayne dyd the wil of the father? They sayde vnto him: the first. Iesus sayde vnto the: Verely I saye vnto you: The publicans and harlottes shal come in to the kyngdome of God before you. 'For Ihon came vnto you, and taught you y right waye and ye beleued him not: but the publicans g harlottes beleued hi. As for you, though ye sawe it, yet were ye not moued with repētaunce, that ye might afterwarde haue beleued him.

Heare another parable. There was a certayne houszholder which planted a vynyarde,<sup>d</sup> and hedged it roūde aboute, and dygged a wyne presse in it, and built a tower, and let it out vnto huszbandmen, and wente in to a straunge countre. Now whā the tyme of the frute drew neare, he sent his seruaütes to the huszbandmen, to receaue the frutes of it. Then the huszbandmen caught his seruauntes: one they bett, another they kylled, the thirde they stoned. Agayne, he sent other seruauntes, moo then the first, and they dyd vnto them in like maner. At the last he

But whē the huszbandmē sawe the sonne, they sayde amonge thē selues: This is the Heyre, come, let us kyl hym," and take his inheritauce vnto oure selues. And they caught him, and thrust him out of the vynyarde, g slew him. Now whē the lorde of the vynyarde commeth, what wyl he do with those huszbandmen? They sayde vnto him: He wyl cruelly destroye those euell personnes, g let out his vyniarde vnto other huszbādmen, which shal delyuer him the frute at tymes conuenyent.

Iesus sayde vnto thē: Dyd ye neuer rede in the scriptures: The same stone which the buylders refused, is become the heade stone in the corner? This was the LORDES doynge, g it is maruelous i oure eyes. Therfore I saie vnto you: The kingdome of God shalbe takē frō you, 🛛 shalbe geuē vnto the Heithe, which shal brynge forth y frutes of it. And who so falleth vpo this stone, shalbe brokē in peces: « 🛛 loke vpō whom it falleth, it shal grynde him to poulder." And when the hye prestes a Pharises herde his parables, they perceaued, that he spake of them. And they wente aboute to take him, but they feared y people, because they helde hi for a prophet.

ND Iesus answered, and spake vnto the A agayne by parables, a sayde: The kingdome of heauen is like vnto a kynge,' which maried his sonne. And sent forth his seruauntes, to " call the gestes vnto the mariage, g they wolde not come. Agayne, he sent forth other seruauntes, and sayde: Tell the gestes: Beholde, I haue prepared my dynner, myne oxen and my fed catell are kylled, and all thinges are readye, come to the mariage. But they made light of it, and wente their wayes: one to his huszbandrye, another to his marchaundise. As for the remnaut, they toke his seruauntes, and intreated the shamefully, and slew the. When the kynge herde that, he was wroth, and sent forth his warryers, and destroyed those murtherers, and set fyre vpon their cite. Then sayde he vnto his seruauntes: The mariage in dede is

The priiij. Chapter.

ND Iesus wente out and departed from the temple, and his disciples came vnto him, to shew him the buyldinge of the temple. But lesus sayde vnto them: Se ye not all these thinges? Verely I saye vnto you : there shal not be left here one stone vpon another, y shal not be cast downe. And as he sat vpon the mount Oliuete, his disciples came vnto him secretly, a saide: Tell us, whe shal these thinges come to passe? and which shal be the token of thy comynge, and of the ende of the worlde? Iesus answered and sayde vnto them: Take hede, that no man disceaue you. For there shal many come in my name, and saye: I am Christ, and shal disceaue many.

Ye shal heare of warres, and of  $\mathring{y}$  noyse of warres: take hede, and be not ye troubled. All these thinges must first come to passe, but the ende is not yet. For one people shall ryse vp agaynst another, and one realme agaynst another: and there shalbe pestilece, honger, and earthquakes here  $\mathfrak{q}$  there. All these are the begynnynge of sorowes.

<sup>4</sup>Then shal they put you to trouble, g shal kyll you, and ye shalbe hated of all people for ny names sake. The shal many be offended, and shal betraye one another, and shal hate one the other. And many false prophetes shal aryse, and shal disceaue many: and 'because iniquyte shal haue the vpper hande, the loue of many shal abate. But whoso endureth vnto ŷ ende,<sup>4</sup> ŷ same shal be saued. And this gospell of the kyngdome shalbe preached in all the worlde for a wytnes vnto all people,<sup>4</sup> and then shal the ende come.

"Watch therfore, for ye knowe not what houre youre LORDE wil come. But be sure of this, that yf the good man of the house knewe what 'houre the thefe wolde come, he wolde surely watch, and not suffre his house to be broken vp. Therfore be ye ready also, for in the houre that ye thynke not, shal the sonne of man come. Who is now a faithfull and wyse seruaut, whom his lorde hath made ruler ouer his houszholde, that he maye geue them meate in due season? Blessed is v seruaut, whom his lorde (whan he cometh) shal fynde so doynge. Verely. I saye vnto you: he shal set him ouer all his goodes. But and yf the euell seruaut shal saye in his hert: Tush, it wil be longe or my lorde come, and begynne to smyte his felowes, yee and to eate and drynke with the dronken: The same seruautes lorde shal come in a daye, wha he loketh not for him, and in an houre that he is not ware of, and shal hew him in peces and geue him his rewarde with ypocrytes: there shal be waylinge and gnaszhinge of teth.

The rrb. Chapter.

A THEN shal the kyngdome of heauen be like vnto ten virgins, which toke their lāpes, and wente forth to mete the brydegrome. But fyue of them were foolish, and fyue were wyse. The foolish toke their lāpes, neuertheles they toke none oyle with them. But the wyse toke oyle in their vessels with their lampes. Now whyle the brydegrome taried,

The rrbi. Chapter.

ND it came to passe whā Iesus had fynished all these wordes, he sayde vnto his disciples: Ye knowe, that after two dayes shalbe Easter, and the sonne of man shalbe delyuered to be crucified.<sup>4</sup>

Then 'assembled together the hye prestes and the scrybes, and the elders of the people in to the palace of the hye prest which was called Caiphas, and helde a councell, how they might take Iesus by disceate, and kyll him. But they sayde: Not on the holy daye, lest there be an vproure in the people.

Now when Iesus was at Bethany" in the house of Symon the leper, there came vnto hi a woman, which had * a boxe with precious oyntment, and poured it vpon his heade, as he sat at the table. Whan his disciples sawe that, they diszdayned, and sayde: Where to serueth this waist? This oyntmet might haue bene wel solde, and geue to the poore. Whē Iesus perceaued that, he sayde vnto them : Why trouble ye the woman? She hath wrought a good worke vpon me for ye haue allwaye the poore with you," but me shal ye not haue Where as she hath poured this allwayes. ovntmet vpon my body, she dyd it to bury me. Verely I saye vnto you : where so euer this gospell shalbe preached thorow out all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath done, be tolde for a memoriall of her.

The first Chapter.

A THIS is the begynnynge of the gospell of Iesus Christ the sonne of God, as it is wryttē in the prophetes. "Beholde, I sende my messaūger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. "The voyce of a cryer is in the wyldernes: Prepare the waye of the LORDE, make his pathes straight.

<sup>c</sup> Ihon was in the wyldernes, and baptysed, and preached the baptyme of amendment, for the remyssion of synnes. And there wente out vnto him the whole londe of Iewry, and they of Ierusalem, and were all baptysed of him in Iordan, and knowleged their synnes.

<sup>d</sup> Ihon was clothed with Camels heer, and with a lethron gerdell aboute his loynes, and ate locustes and wylde hony, and preached, and sayde: <sup>e</sup> There commeth one after me, which is stronger then I: before whom I am not worthy to stoupe downe, and to lowse vp  $\hat{y}$  lachet of his shue. I baptyse you with water, but he shal baptyse you with the holy goost.

<sup>f</sup>And it happened at the same tyme, that Iesus came out of Galile from Nazareth, and was baptysed of Ihon in Iordan. And as soone as he was come out of the water, he sawe that the heauens opened, and the goost as a doue comynge downe vpon him. And there came a voyce from heauē: Thou art my deare sonne,* in whom I delyte.

33 And immediatly the sprete droue him in to the wyldernes: s and he was in the wyldernes fourtye dayes, and was tempted of Sathan, and was with the wylde beestes. And the angels mynistred vnto him.

*So as he walked by the see of Galile, he sawe Symon and Andrew his brother, castinge their nettes in the see, for they were fyszhers. And Iesus sayde vnto thē: Folowe me, and I wil make you fyszhers of mē.* And immediatly they left their nettes, and folowed him.

And when he was gone a lytle further from thence, he sawe Iames the sonne of Zebede, and Ihon his brother, as they were in the shyppe mendynge their nettes. And anone he called them. And they left their father Zebede in the shyppe with the hyred seruauntes, and folowed him.

<sup>i</sup>And they wente in to Capernaum, and immediatly vpon the Sabbathes, he entred in to the synagoge, and taught. And <sup>m</sup> they were astonnyed at his doctryne: for he taught them as one hauynge power, and not as the Scrybes.

And in their synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule sprete,<sup>n</sup> which cried and sayde: Oh what haue we to do with the, thou Iesus of Nazareth. Art thou come to destroye us? I knowe that thou art euen  $\mathbf{\dot{y}}$ holy one of God. And Iesus reproued him, and sayde: holde thy tonge, and departe out of him. And the foule sprete tare him, and cried with a loude voyce, and departed out of him. lernynge is this? For he comaundeth the foule spretes with power, and they are obedient vnto him. And immediatly the fame of him was noysed rounde aboute in the coastes and borders of Galile.

"And forth with they wente out of the synagoge, and came in to the house of Symō and Andrew, with Iames and Ihon. And Symons mother in lawe laye,  $\mathfrak{g}$  had the feuers, and anone they tolde him of her. And he came to her, and set her vp, and toke her by  $\mathfrak{F}$  hande, and the feuer left her immediatly. And she mynistred vnto them.

<sup>6</sup>At euen whan the Sonne was gone downe, they brought vnto him all that were sick and possessed, and the whole cite was gathered together at the dore, and he healed many that were diseased with dyuerse sicknesses, and cast out many deuels, and suffred not the deuels to speake, because they knew him.

And in the mornynge before daye, he arose, and wente out. And Iesus departed in to a deserte place, and prayed there. Peter also and they that were with him, folowed after him. And whan they had founde him, they sayde vnto him: Euery man seketh the. And he sayde vnto them: Let us go in to the next townes, that I maye preach there also, for therto am I come. And he preached î their synagoges, in all Galile, and droue out the deuyls.

'And there came vnto him a leper, which besought him, and kneled before him, a sayde vnto him : Yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And it pitied Iesus, and he stretched forth his honde, and touched him, and sayde: I wyll, be thou cleane. And wha he had so spoken, immediatly the leprosy departed fro him, and he was clensed." And Iesus forbad him strately, and forth with sent him awaye, and sayde vnto him : Take hede, that thou saye nothinge to eny man, but go thy waye, and shew thy self vnto the prest, and offre for thy clensynge what Moses commaunded, for a wytnesse vnto them. But he whan he was departed, beganne to speake moch of it, and made the dede knowne: in so much that Iesus coude no more go in to the cite openly, but was without in deserte places, g they came vnto him fro all quarters.

The ij. Chapter.

ND after certayne dayes he wente 2 igaa agayne vnto Capernaum,  $^{\prime}$  and it was noysed that he was in § house. And immediatly there was gathered a greate multitude, in so moch that they had no rowme, no not without before the dore. And he spake the worde vnto thē. And there came vnto him certaine, which brought one sicke of the palsye borne of foure. And when they coude not come nye him for y people, they vncouered y rofe of y house where he was. And when they had made a hole, they let downe the bed (by coardes) wherin the sicke of § palsy laye. Neuertheles there were certayne scrybes which sat there, a thought in their hertes: How speaketh this man soch blasphemy? "Who can forgeue synnes, but onely God? And immediatly Iesus knew in his sprete, that they thought so in the selues, and saide vnto them: Why thynke ye soch thinges in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye to the sicke of the palsye: Thy synnes are forgeue the, or to save : arvse, take vp thy bed and walke. But that ye maye knowe, that y sonne of man hath power to forgeue synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto the sicke of \$ palsye: I saye vnto the, aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. 'And immediatly he arose, toke his bed, and wente forth before them all: in so moch that they were all astonnied, and praysed God, and sayde: We neuer sawe soch.

And he wente forth agayne vnto the see, B and all the people came vnto him, and he taught them. And as Iesus passed by, he sawe Leui the sonne of Alpheus syttinge at the receate of custome, and sayde vnto him: Folowe me. And he arose, and folowed him. And it came to passe as he sat at the table in his house, there sat many publicans  $\mathfrak{g}$  synners at the table with Iesus and his disciples: For there were many  $\mathfrak{g}$  folowed him. 'And it chaunsed that vpon y Sabbath he wente thorow the corne feldes, and his disciples begane to make a wave thorow, and to plucke the eares of y corne. And the Pharises sayde vnto him: Beholde, what thy disciples do, which is not laufull vpo the Sabbath. And he sayde vnto the: Haue ye neuer red what Dauid dyd, wha he had nede, and was an hongred, both he and they that were with him: how he wente in to the house of God in the tyme of Abiathar the hye prest,<sup>d</sup> and ate the shewbreds (which was laufull for no man to eate, but for the prestes) and he gaue them vnto him, and to them that were with him? Then were there some,  $\mathring{y}$  disdayned and sayde: Where to serueth this waist? This oyntment might haue bene solde for more then thre hundreth pens,  $\mathfrak{g}$  bene geuē to  $\mathring{y}$ poore. And they grudged agaynst her.

But Iesus sayde: let her be in rest. Why trouble ye her? She hath done a good worke vpō me. Ye haue allwaye the poore with you, and whā so euer ye wil, ye maye do thē good: but me haue ye not allwaie. She hath done what she coulde, she is come before, to anoynte my body for my buriall. Verely I saye vnto you: Where so euer this gospell shal be preached in all the worlde, there shal this also that she hath now done, be tolde for a remembraunce of her.

33 And Iudas Iscarioth" one of the twolue wente vnto the hye prestes, to betraye him vnto them. Whan they herde y, they were glad, g promysed that they wolde geue him money. And he sought, how he might coueniently betraye him.

<sup>b</sup> And vpon § first daye of swete bred, wha the Easter lambe was offered, his disciples sayde vnto him: Where wilt thou y we go and prepare, y thou mayest eate y Easter labe? And he sent two of his disciples, and sayde vnto them: Go youre waye in to the cite, and there shal mete you a mā bearinge a pitcher with water, followe him, g where so euer he goeth in, there save ye to the good man of the house: The Master sendeth the worde: Where is the gest house, wherin I maye eate the Easter labe, with my disciples? And he shal shewe you a greate parlour, which is paued a prepared, there make readye for vs. And y disciples wete forth, a came in to ý cite, g foūde it as he had sayde vnto thē. And they prepared § Easter lambe.

C At even he came with the twolue. And as they sat at the table g ate, Iesus sayde: Verely I saye vnto you: One of you y eateth with me, shal betraye me. And they were sory, g sayde vnto hī one after another: Is it I? g another (sayde:) is it I? He answered g saide vnto thē: One of the twolue, even y same y dyppeth with me in y platter. FOR so moch as many haue taken in hande, to set forth y wordes of the actes that are come to passe amonge vs, like as they delyuered the vnto vs, which from the begynnynge sawe them their selues, and were mynisters of the worde, I thought it good (after that I had diligently searched out all from the begynnynge) to wryte the same orderly vnto the (good Theophilus) that thou mightest knowe the certete of y wordes, wherof thou art infourmed.

The first Chapter.

a YN the tyme of Herode kynge of Iewry, there was a prest named Zachary of the * course of Abia: and his wife of the doughters of Aaron, a hir name Elizabeth. They were both righteous before God, and walked in all the commaundementes and statutes of the LORDE vnreproueably. And they had no childe, for Elizabeth was baren, and they were both well stricken in age.

And it came to passe as he executed the prestes office before God whan his course came (acordinge to the custome of the presthode) it fell to his lott to burne incense. And the wente in to the temple of the LORDE, and the whole multitude of the people was without in prayer, whyle the incense was aburnynge. And the angell of the LORDE appeared vnto him, and stode on the right syde of the altare of incese. And whan Zachary sawe him, he was abaszhed, a there came a feare vpon him.

But the angell sayde vnto him: Feare not Zachary, for thy prayer is herde. And thy Wyne and stronge drynke shal he not drynke. And he shalbe fylled with the holy goost, euen in his mothers wombe. And many of the children of Israel shal he turne vnto the LORDE their God. And he shal go before him in the sprete and power of ‡Elias, to turne the hertes of § fathers vnto the children, and the vnfaithfull vnto the wyszdome of the righteous, to make the people ready for the LORDE.

And Zachary sayde vnto the Angel: 3 "Wherby shal I knowe this? For I am olde, and my wife well stricken in age. The angell answered, and sayde vnto him : I am Gabriell that stonde before God, and am sent to speake vnto the, and to shewe the these glad tydinges. And beholde, thou shalt be domme, and not able to speake, vn tyll the daye that this come to passe, because thou hast § not beleued my wordes, which shalbe fulfylled in their season.

And the people wayted for Zachary, and marueyled, that he taried so longe in the teple. And wha he wete out, he coude not speake vnto them. And they perceaued, that he had sene a vision in the teple. And he beckened vnto them, and remayned speachlesse.

And it fortuned wha the tyme of his office was out, he wente home in to his house. And after those dayes Elizabeth his wife conceaued, and hyd hir self fyue monethes, g sayde: Thus hath & LORDE done vnto me in § dayes, wherin he hath loked vpo me, to take awaye fro me my rebuke amoge men.

Beholde, I brynge you tydiges of greate ioye, which shall happen vnto all people: for vnto you this daye is borne y Sauioure, eue Christ y LORDE, in the cite of Dauid. And take this for a token : Ye shal fynde the babe swadled, and layed in a maunger. And straight waye there was by the angell a multitude of heauenly hoostes, which praysed God, and sayde : Glory be vnto God an hye, a peace vpon earth, and vnto men a good wyll.

And it fortuned what the angels were gone  $|_{\mathbf{f}}$ from the in to heaue, the shepherdes sayde one to another: let vs go now euen vnto Bethleem, and se this thinge that is happened, which y LORDE hath shewed vnto vs. And they came with haist, g founde both Mary and Ioseph, a the babe layed in y maunger. And whan they had sene it, they published abrode the sayenge, y was tolde the of this childe. And all they that herde it, wondred at the wordes, which the shepherdes had tolde them. But Mary kepte all these sayenges, and pondred them in hir hert. And the shepherdes returned, praysinge and laudinge God, for all that they had herde and sene, euen as it was tolde them.

The iiif. Chapter.

A | TESUS full of the holy goost, came agayne from lordane," and was led of \$ sprete in to wyldernes, a fourty dayes loge was he tepted of v deuell. \*And in those dayes ate he nothinge. And whan they were ended, he hongred afterwarde. And the deuell sayde vnto him: Yf thou be y sonne of God, comaunde this stone, y it be bred. And Iesus answered g sayde vnto hi: It is wrytten: +Man shal not lyue by bred onely, but by euery worde of God. And § deuell toke him vp in to an hye moutayne, and shewed him all the kyngdomes of  $\mathring{y}$  whole worlde in  $\mathring{y}$ twinckelinge of an eye, g sayde vnto him: All this power wil I geue vnto the, and the glory therof, for it is geue ouer vnto me, and I geue it, to whom I wil. Yf thou now wilt worshippe me, they shal all be thine. Iesus answered him, and sayde: Auoyde fro me thou Satan. It is wrytten: 'Thou shalt worshippe the LORDE thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue.

36 And he caried him to Ierusalem, and set him vpon a pynnacle of the temple, and sayde vnto him: Yf thou be y sonne of God, cast thy self downe from hence. For it is wrytte : He shal geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the, and with their handes they shal holde the vp, that thou dashe not thy fote agaynst a stone. And Iesus answered, and sayde vnto him: It is sayde: "Thou shalt not tempte the LORDE thy God. And whan y deuell had ended all the temptacions, he departed from him for a season.

And 'Iesus came agayne in the power of the sprete in to Galile. And the fame of him, was noysed thorow out all y region rounde aboute. And he taught in their synagoges, and was commended of euery man.

And he came vnto Nazareth where he was noursed,' and as his custome was, he wete in to the synagoge vpon y Sabbath, and stode vp for to rede. Then was there delyuered him the *t*boke of v prophet Esay. And whan he had turned ouer the boke, he founde the place where it is wrytten: The sprete of the LORDE is with me,<sup>s</sup> because he hath anoynted me: to preach the Gospell vnto § poore hath he sent me: to heale the broken harted: to preach delyueraūce to the captyue, and sight to the blynde: and frely to set at liberty them that are brused: and to preach the acceptable yeare of the LORDE.

And whan he had closed the boke, he gaue @ it agayne to y mynister, a sat him downe. And the eyes of all that were in the synagoge, were fastened on him. And he begane to saye vnto them: This daye is this scripture fulfilled in youre eares. § And they all gaue him wytnesse, and wodred at the gracious wordes, which proceaded out of his mouth, and they saide: Is not this Iosephs sonne?*

And he sayde vnto them: Doutles ye wyl saye vnto me this prouerbe: Phisician, heale thyself. For how greate thinges have we herde done at Capernau? Do the same here also in thine owne countre. But he saide: Verely I save vnto you: There is no prophet accepted in his owne countre. And they rose vp, and thrust him out of the cite, and led him vp to the edge of the hyll whervpō their cite was buylded, that they might cast him downe headlynge. But he wente his waye euen thorow the myddest of them, and came to Capernaum a cite of Galile, and taught thē vpō the Sabbathes. And they wondred at his doctryne, * for his preachinge was with power.

And in the Synagoge there was a man possessed with a foule deuell, a he cryed loude, and sayde: Let me alone, what haue we to do with the thou Iesus of Nazareth?" Art thou come to destroye vs? I knowe v who thou art, euen the Holy of God. And Iesus rebuked him and sayde: holde thy tuge, and departe out of him. And the deuell threw hi in the myddest amonge them, and departed from him, and dyd him no harme. And there came a feare ouer the all, and they spake amonge them selues, and sayde: What maner of thinge is this? He commaundeth the foule spretes with auctorite and power, and they departe out. And y fame of him was noysed thorow out all the places of y countre rounde aboute.

And he rose vp out of the synagoge, <sup>c</sup> and came in to Symons house. And Symos mother in lawe was take with a greate feuer, g they prayde him for her. And he wete vnto her, g comaunded the feuer. And it left her, g imediatly she rose vp, g mynistred vnto the.

The b. Chapter.

I came to passe,  $\frac{1}{2}$  the people 'preassed vpon him to heare the worde of God, and he stode by the lake of Genazereth, and sawe two shippes stode by  $\frac{1}{2}$  lake syde, but  $\frac{3}{2}$ fishers were gone out of the, and had waszhed their nettes. Then wente he in to one of the shippes, which was Symons, and prayed him,  $\frac{1}{2}$  he wolde thrust out a litle fro the londe. And he sat him downe, and taught the people out of  $\frac{1}{2}$  shippe.

And whan he had left of talkynge, he sayde vnto Symon: Launch out in to the depe a let slyppe youre nettes, to make a draught. And Symon answered and sayde vnto him: Master, we haue laboured all y night, and taken nothinge. But vpo thy worde, I wil lowse forth the nett. And what they had so done. they toke a greate multitude of fiszhes, a their net brake. And they made sygnes to their felowes which were in v other shippe, y they shulde come, a helpe the. And they came, a fylled both the shippes full, so y they Whan Symon Peter sawe v, he fell 33 soncke. downe at Iesus knees, g sayde : LORDE, go fro me, for I am a synfull man : For he was astonnyed and all that were with him, at this draught of fishes which they toke, and so were Iames and Ihon also the sonnes of Zebede, which were Symons companyons. And Iesus sayde vnto Symō: Feare not, for frō hence forth thou shalt take men. And they brought the <sup>g</sup>shippes to londe, and left all, and folowed him.

<sup>h</sup>And it fortuned as he was in a cite, beholde, there was a man full of leprosy. Whā he sawe Iesus, he fell vpō his face,  $\mathfrak{g}$  besought him, and sayde : LORDE, yf thou wilt, thou canst make me cleane. And he stretched out his hāde, and touched him, and sayde : I wil, be thou cleane. And immediatly the leprosy departed from him. And he charged him,  $\mathring{y}$ he shulde tell no mā, but go thy waye (sayde he) and shewe thy self vnto  $\mathring{y}$  prest, and offre for thy clensynge, t as Moses cōmaunded, for a witnesse vnto thē. And it fortuned vpo a daye, y he taught, C and there sat y Pharises and scrybes, which were "come out of all the townes of Galile, and Iewry, and fro Ierusale, and the power of the LORDE wete fro him, a healed euery man. And beholde, certayne men brought vpon a bed, a man y had y palsye, and they sought how they might brynge him in, and laye him before him. And whan they coude not fynde by what waye they might bringe him in (for y people) they clymmed vp to y toppe of the house, g let him downe thorow the tylinge with the bed, amoge the before And whan he sawe their faith, he lesus. sayde vnto hi: Man, thy synnes are forgeuē y. And the scrybes and pharyses begane to thynke, g saide: What is he this, y speaketh blasphemy. \*Who ca forgeue synnes, but onely God?

Neuertheles wha Iesus perceaued their thoughtes, he answered, and saide vnto the: What thynke ye in youre hertes? Whether is easier to saye: Thy synnes are forgeuē ŷ, Or to saye: Aryse, and walke? But that ye maye knowe, that the sonne of mā hath power to forgeue synnes vpon earth, he sayde vnto y sicke of the palsie: I saye vnto y: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go home. And immediatly he rose vp before the, a toke vp the bed y he had lyen vpo, and wete home, and praysed God. And they were all astonnyed, and gaue God § prayse, and were fylled with feare, and sayde: We haue sene maruelous thynges to daye.

And afterwarde he wēte out, and sawe a publican named Leui, syttinge at ŷ receate of custome, g he sayde vnto him : 'Folowe me. And he left all, rose vp, g folowed him. And Leui made hī a greate feast ī his house. And many publicans g other sat with hī at ŷ table. But he that heareth and doth not, is like vnto a man that buylded his house vpo the earth without foundacion, and the streames bett vpo it, and it fell immediatly, and greate was the fall of that house.

The bij. Chapter.

a W HAN he had ended his talkynge vnto the people,' he wente in to Capernaum: and a captaynes seruaunt laye deed sicke, whom he loued. Wha he herde of Iesus, he sent the elders of the Iewes vnto him, and prayed him, that he wolde come, and make his seruaunt whole. But wha they came to Iesus, they besought him instantly, g sayde: He is worthy y thou shuldest shewe this for him, for he loueth oure people, a hath buylded vs y synagoge. And lesus wente with them.

Now whan they were not farre from y house, y captaine sent frēdes vnto hī, saicge vnto him: Oh LORDE, trouble not thy self, I am not worthy, y thou shuldest enter vnder my rofe, and therfore I thought not my self worthy to come to y: but speake y worde, g my seruaut shalbe whole. For I my self also am a mā, subjecte to the hygher auctorite, a haue soudyers vnder me. And I saye vnto one: Go, a he goeth. And to another: Come, and he cometh. And to my seruaut: Do this,  $\mathfrak{g}$  he doeth it. Whan Iesus herde  $\frac{1}{2}$ , he marueyled at hi, g turned him aboute, g sayde vnto y people y folowed hi: I saye vnto you: So greate faith haue I not founde, no not in Israel. And what they that were sent, came home agayne, they founde the seruaut that was sicke, whole.

And it fortuned afterwarde, that he wete 13 in to a cite called Naim, and many of his disciples wente with him, and moch people. Whan he came nye to the gate of the cite, beholde, there was caried out one deed, which was the onely sonne of his mother, and she was a wyddowe, and moch people of the cite wente with her. And whan the LORDE sawe her, he had copassion on her, and sayde vnto her: Wepe not. And he came nye, and touched the Coffyn. And they that bare him, stode styll. And he sayde: Yonge man, I saye vnto the: Aryse. And the deed sat vp, and beganne to speake. And he delyuered him vnto his mother. And there came a feare on them all, and they praysed God, and sayde: ‡A greate prophet is rysen amonge vs, and God hath vysited his people. And this fame of him was noysed in all lewry, and in all $ regions that laye rounde aboute.

And the disciples of Iho shewed him of all these thinges. And Ihon called vnto him two of his disciples, and sent the vnto lesus savenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another? Whan the men came to him, they sayde: Ihon y baptist hath sent vs vnto the, sayenge: Art thou he that shal come, or shal we loke for another?

At the same houre healed he many from C sicknesses a plages, and fro euell spretes, and vnto many that were blynde, he gaue sight. And Iesus answered, a sayde vnto the: Go youre waye, shewe Ihon, what ye haue sene g herde. The blynde se, the halt go, the lepers are clensed, the deaf heare, the deed aryse, § the Gospell is preached vnto $ poore, and blessed is he, that is not offended at me.

"Whan the messaungers of Ihō were departed, Iesus begane to speake vnto y people cocernynge Iho: What are ye gone out for to se in 🕴 wyldernesse? Wolde ye se a rede, that is shake with the wynde? Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a mā clothed in soft rayment? Beholde, they that are gorgiously arayed, a lyue delycately, are in kynges courtes. Or what are ye gone out for to se? Wolde ye se a prophet? Yee I save vnto you: one that is more the a prophet.

Chap. bííj.

This is he, of whom it is wrytten: "Beholde, I sende my messaunger before thy face, which shal prepare thy waye before the. For I saye vnto you: Amonge thē ý are borne of wemē, there is no greater prophet thē Ihon the baptist. Notwith stondynge he that is lesse in the kyngdome of God, is greater then he.

And all the people that herde him, and  $\hat{y}$ publicans, iustified God, and were baptysed with the baptyme of Ihon. But the Pharises and scrybes despysed  $\hat{y}$  councell of God against the selues,  $\mathfrak{g}$  were not baptised of hi.

But the LORDE saide: Where vnto shal I licken the men of this generacion?<sup>6</sup> And whom are they like? They are like vnto childrē which syt in the market, and crye one to another, and saye: We haue pyped vnto you, and ye haue not daunsed: we haue mourned vnto you,  $\mathfrak{g}$  ye haue not wepte. For Ihon  $\mathfrak{f}$  baptist came, and \*ate no bred, and drāke no wyne, and ye saye: he hath  $\mathfrak{f}$ deuell. The sonne of man is come, eateth and drynketh,  $\mathfrak{g}$  ye saye: This man is a glutton and a wyne bebber, a frende of publicans and synners. And wyszdome is iustified of all hir children.

And one of the Pharises desyred him,  $\frac{1}{2}$  he wolde eate with him.<sup>c</sup> And he wente in to the Pharises house, and sat him downe at  $\frac{1}{2}$ table. † And beholde, there was in the cite a womā, which was a synner. I am come in to thine house, thou hast geuē me no water vnto my fete, but she hath watred my fete with teares, and dryed thē with the hayres of hir heade: Thou hast geuē me no kysse, but she (sens the tyme she came in) hath not ceassed to kysse my fete: Thou hast not anointed my heade with oyle, but she hath anoynted my heade with oyntment. Therfore I saye vnto the: Many synnes are forgeuen her, for she hath loued moch. But vnto whom lesse is forgeuen, the same loueth the lesse.

And he sayde vnto her: Thy synnes are forgeuen the. Then they that sat at the table with him, beganne to saye within themselues: What is he this, that forgeueth synnes also? But he sayde vnto the woman: Thy faith hath saued the, Go thy waye in peace.

The biij. Chapter.

A ND it fortuned afterwarde, that he wente thorow the cities and townes, and preached, and shewed § Gospell of the kyngdome of God, and the twolue with him. And certayne wemen also, who he had healed fro euell spretes and infirmities: Namely, Mary ‡ which is called Magdalene, out of whom wente seuen deuels, and Ioanna § wife of Chusa Herodes stewarde, and Susanna, and many other, that mynistred vnto them of their substaunce.

<sup>f</sup> Now whā moch people were gathered together, and haisted vnto him out of the cities, He spake by a symilitude: There wente out a sower to sowe his sede,  $\mathfrak{g}$  whyle he was sowynge, some fell by the waye syde, and was troddē vnder fote, and the foules of the ayre ate it vp. And some fell on stone, and whan it was spronge vp, it wythred awaye, because it had no moystnesse. And some fell amonge thornes, and the thornes sprange vp with it, and choked it. And some fell vpō a good grounde, and sprange vp, and bare frute an hundreth folde. Whā he sayde this he cryed: Who so hath eares to heare, let him heare.

Chap. ríj.

But one of the people sayde vnto him: Master, byd my brother deuyde the enheritaunce with me. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Man, who hath set me to be a judge or heretage parter ouer you? And he sayde vnto them : Take hede, and bewarre of couetousnesse, for noman lyueth therof, that he hath abundaunce of goodes. And he tolde them a symilitude, and sayde: There was a riche man, whose felde had brought forth frutes plenteously, and he thought in himself, and sayde : What shal I do? I have nothinge wher in to gather my frutes. And he sayde : This wil I do, I wil breake downe my barnes, g buylde greater, and therin wil I gather all myne increace, a my goodes, a wil saye vnto my soule: "Soule, thou hast moch goodes layed vp in stoare for many yeares, take now thine ease, eate, drinke, and be mery. But God sayde vnto him : 'Thou foole, this night shal they requyre thy soule from the, *and whose shal it be that thou hast prepared? Thus goeth it with him y gathereth treasure for himself, and is not riche in God.

But he sayde vnto his disciples: Therfore I saye vnto you: 'Take ye no thought for youre life, what ye shal eate: nether for youre body, what ye shal put on. The life is more then meate, and the body more then raymet. Consydre the rauens, they nether sowe ner reape, they haue also nether stoarehouse ner barne, and yet God fedeth them. But how moch better are ye then the foules?

<sup>d</sup> Which of you (though he toke thought therfore) coulde put one cubyte vnto his stature? Seinge then ye be not able to do that which is least, why take ye thought for the other? Considre the lilies vpo the felde, how they growe: they laboure not, they spynne not. But I saye vnto you: that euen Salomon in all his royalte was not clothed like one of these. Wherfore yf God so cloth the grasse, y is to daye in y felde, and tomorow shalbe cast in to the fornace, how moch more shal he clothe you, o ye of litle faith? Axe not ye therfore what ye shal eate, or what ye shal drynke, and clymme not vp an hye: The Heithen in the worlde seke after all soch thinges. But seke ye the kyngdome of God, and all these shal be mynistred vnto you.

<sup>s</sup> Let youre loynes be gerded aboute, and youre lightes burnynge, and be ye like vnto men that wayte for their lorde, agaynst he returne from the mariage, that whan he cometh a knocketh, they maye straight waye open vnto him. Blessed are those seruauntes, whom the LORDE (whan he cometh) shal fynde wakynge. Verely I save vnto you: † He shal gyrde vp him self, and make them syt downe at the table, and shal go by them, and mynister vnto them. And yf he come in the seconde watch, and in the thirde watch, and fynde them so, blessed are those seruauntes. <sup>4</sup>But be sure of this, that yf the good man of the house knewe, what houre the thefe wolde come, he wolde surely watch, and not suffre his house to be broken vp. Therfore be ye ready also, for at an houre whan ye thynke not, 'shal the sonne of man come.

But Peter sayde vnto him : LORDE, E tellest thou this symilitude vnto vs, or to all men also? The LORDE sayde: How greate a thinge is a faithfull and wyse stewarde, whom his lorde setteth ouer his houszholde, to geue the their dewtye in due season? Blessed is that seruaunt, whom his lorde (whan he cometh) shal fynde so doynge.* Verely I saye vnto you: 'he shal set him ouer all his goodes. But yf the same seruaūt shal saye in his hert: Tush, it wil be longe or my lorde come, and shal begynne to smyte ŷ seruauntes and maydens, yee g to eate and drynke, a to be dronkē: the same seruauntes lorde shal come in a daye whan he loketh not for him, and in an houre that he is not aware of, a shal hew him in peces, and geue him his rewarde with the vnbeleuers.

And he sayde vnto the people: <sup>6</sup> Whan ye se a cloude ryse out of  $\hat{y}$  west, straight waye ye saye: there cometh a shower, and so it is: and whan ye se the southwynde blowe, ye saye: It wil be hote, and it commeth so to passe. # The rif. Chapter.

2 THERE were present at the same season certayne, that shewed him of v *Galileans, whose bloude Pilate had mcgled with their awne sacrifice. And lesus answered, and sayde vnto them: Suppose ye, that these Galileans were greater synners then all the other Galileans, because they suffred soch punyshment? I tell you naye, but excepte ye amcde youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewyse. Or thinke ye that v eightene (vpon whom the tower in Siloe fell and slewe them) were giltie aboue all men that dwell at Ierusalem? I tell you naye : but excepte ye amende youre selues, ye shal all perishe likewyse.

And he tolde them this symilitude : A certayne mā had a fygge tre, which was planted in his vynyarde,  $\mathfrak{c}$  he came and sought frute theron, and founde none. Then savde he vnto the wynegardener: Beholde, This thre yeare longe haue I come euery yeare, and sought frute vpon this fygge tre, and fynde none: cut it downe, why hyndreth it the grounde? But he answered, and sayde: Syr, let it alone yet this yeare, tyll I dygge roūde aboute it and donge it, yf it wyl brynge forth frute: Yf no, then cut it downe afterwarde.

And he taught in a synagoge vpon the Sabbath: and beholde, there was a woma, which had a sprete of infirmyte eightene yeares, and was croked, and coulde not well loke vp. Whan Iesus sawe her, he called her to him, and sayde vnto her: Woman, be delyuered from thy disease. And he layed his handes vpo her, and immediatly she was made straight, and praysed God. Then answered the ruler of the synagoge, and toke B indignacion (because Iesus healed vpo ŷ Sabbath) and sayde vnto the people: There are sixe dayes, wherin men ought to worke, in them come and be healed, and not on the Sabbath.

Then the LORDE answered him, and sayde: Thou ypocryte, doth not euery one of you lowse his oxe or asse frö the crybbe vpö Sabbath, and leadc him to the water? But shulde not this (which is Abrahams doughter) whom Sathan hath bounde now eightene yeares, be lowsed from this bonde vpö the Sabbath? And whan he thus sayde, all his aduersaries were ashamed. And all the people reioysed ouer all the excellent dedes, that were done by him.

And he sayde: "What is the kyngdome of God like? Or wher vnto shal I copare it? It is like a grayne of mustarde sede, which a man toke, and cast in his garden: and it grewe, and waxed a greate tre, and the foules of the ayre dwelt amonge the braunches of it.

And agayne he sayde: "Where vnto shal I licken the kyngdome of God? It is like vnto leuen, which a woman toke, and myxte it Chap. rbí.

- Then came he to him self, and sayde: How many hyred seruauntes hath my father, which haue bred ynough, and I perish of honger? I wil get vp, and go to my father, and saye vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heauen and before the, and am nomore worthy to be called thy sonne, make me as one of thy hyred seruauntes. And he gat him vp, g came vnto his father. But whan he was yet a greate waye of, his father sawe him, and had copassion," and ranne, and fell aboute his neck, and kyssed him. Then sayde the sonne vnto him: Father, I haue synned agaynst heaue, and before the, I am no more worthy to be called thy sonne. But the father sayde vnto his seruauntes: Brynge forth the best garment, and put it vpon him, and geue him a rynge vpon his hande, and shues on his fete, and brynge hither a fed calfe, and kyll it, lat vs eate and be mery: for this my sonne was deed, and is alyue agayne: he was lost, and is founde. And they beganne to be mery.
- But the elder sonne was in the felde. And 刅 whan he came, and drewe nye to the house, he herde y mynstrelsye and daunsynge, and called one of the seruauntes vnto him, and axed what it was. He sayde vnto him: Thy brother is come, and thy father hath slavne a fed calfe, because he hath receaued him safe and sounde. Then was he angrie, and wolde not go in. Then wente his father out, and prayed him. But he answered, and sayde vnto his father: Lo, thus many yeares haue I done the seruyce, nether haue I yet broken thy commaundement, and thou gauest me neuer one kydd, y I might make mery with my frendes. But now that this thy sonne is come, which deuoured his goodes with harlottes, thou hast slayne a fed calfe. But he sayde vnto him: My sonne, thou art allwaye with me, and all that is myne, is thine: thou shuldest be mery and glad, for this thy brother was deed, and is alvue agayne: he was lost, and is founde agayne.

* HE sayde also vnto his disciples: There was a certayne riche man, which had a stewarde, that was accused vnto him, that he had waisted his goodes. And he called him, and sayde vnto him: How is it, that I heare this of the? geue acomptes of thy stewardshipe, for thou mayest be no longer stewarde. The stewarde sayde within himself: What shal I do? My lorde wil take awaye the stewardshipe fro me. I cā not dygge, and to begg I am ashamed. I wote what I wil do, that whā I am put out of the stewardshipe, they maye receaue me in to their houses.

" Psal. 31.a. Iob 13.b. Mat. 6. c. Mat. 11. b.

And he called vnto hi all his lordes detters. and sayde vnto the first: How moch owest thou vnto my lorde? He sayde: an hundreth tonnes of oyle. And he sayde: Take thy byll, syt downe quyckly, a wryte fiftie. Then sayde he vnto another: How moch owest thou? He sayde: An hundreth quarters of wheate. And he sayde vnto him : Take thy byll, and wryte foure score. And the lorde comended the vnrighteous stewarde, because he had done wysely. For the children of this worlde are in their kynde wyser, the the children of light. And I saye vnto you: Make you frendes with the vnrighteous Mammon, ý whan ye shal haue nede, they maye receaue you in to euerlastinge Tabernacles.

He that is faithfull in the least, is faithfull also in moch: and he that is vnrighteous in the least, is vnrighteous also in moch. Yf ye then haue not bene faithfull in the vnrighteous Mammon, who wyll beleue you in that which is true? And yf ye haue not bene faithfull in another mans busynesse, who wil geue you that which is youre awne?

<sup>b</sup>No seruaunt can serue two masters: for either he shal hate the one, and loue  $\mathring{y}$  other: or els he shal leane to the one, and despyse the other. Ye can not serue God and Mammon.

All these thinges herde the Pharises, which were couetous, and they mocked hī. And he sayde vnto them : Ye are they that iustifie youre selues before men, but God knoweth youre hertes. For  $\dot{y}$  which is hye amonge men, is an abhominacion before God.

The lawe and  $\mathring{y}$  prophetes prophecied vnto Ihon, and from that tyme forth is  $\mathring{y}$  kyngdome of God preached thorow  $\mathring{y}$  Gospell, and euery man preasseth in to it by violence. But easier is it, for heauen and earth to perishe, then one tittle of  $\mathring{y}$  lawe to fall. Who so euer putteth awaye his wife,  $\mathfrak{g}$  marieth another, breaketh matrimonye: and he that marieth her which is deuorced fro hir huszbande, breaketh wedlocke also.

There was a certayne riche man, which clothed him self with purple and costly lynnen, and fared deliciously euery daye. And there was a poore man named Lazarus which laye at his gate full of sores, and desyred to be fylled with the crommes, that fell from the riche mans table. Yet came the dogges, and licked his sores. But it fortuned, that the poore man dyed, and was caried of the angels in to Abrahams bosome. The riche man dyed also, and was buried.

殂 Now whan he was in the hell, he lift vp his eyes in the payne, and sawe Abraham afarre of, and Lazarus in his bosome: and he cried, and sayde: Father Abraham, haue mercy vpon me, and sende Lazarus, that he maye dyppe the typpe of his fynger in water, a coole my tonge, for I am tormeted in this flāme. But Abrahā saide : Remēbre sonne, y thou hast receaued good in thy life,  $\tau$  contrary wyse Lazarus receaued euell. But now is he comforted, and thou art tormented. And beside all this, there is a great space set betwene vs and you: so y they which wolde go downe from hence vnto you, can not: nether maye they passe ouer from thence vnto vs.

Then sayde he: I pray the then father, that thou wilt sende him vnto my fathers house, for I haue yet fyue brethren, that he maye warne them, lest they also come in to this place of torment. Abraham sayde vnto him: They haue Moses and the prophetes, let them heare them. But he sayde: Nay father Abraham, but yf one wente vnto them frō the deed, they wolde do pennaunce. Neuertheles he sayde vnto him: Yf they heare uot Moses  $\mathfrak{g}$  the prophetes, then shal they not beleue also, though one rose agayne frō the deed.

The first Chapter.

I N the begynnynge was the worde, and the worde was with God, and God was ŷ worde. The same was in the begynnynge with God.* All thinges were made by the same, and without the same was made nothinge that was made. In him was the tlife, and the life was the tlight of men: and the light shyneth in the darknesse, and the darknesse comprehended it not.

There was sent from God a man, whose name was Ihon. The same came for a witnesse, to beare wytnesse of $ light, that thorow him they all might beleue. He was not that light, but that he might beare witnesse of § light. That was the true light, which lighteth all men, that come in to this worlde. He was in the worlde, g the worlde was made by him, and y worlde knewe him not. He came in to his awne, and his awne receaued him not. But as many as receaued him, Ito them gaue he power to be the children of God: euen soch as beleue in his name. Which are not borne of bloude, ner of the wyl of the flesh, ner of the wyl of man, but of God.

33 "And the worde became flesh, and dwelt amonge vs: " and we sawe his glory, a glory as of the onely begotte sonne of the father, full of grace and trueth.

Ihon bare wytnesse of him, eryed, and sayde: 'It was this, of whom I spake: After me shal he come, that was before me, For he was or euer I: and **of his fulnesse haue all we receaued grace for grace. For the lawe was geuen by Moses, grace and trueth came

And there was a certayne ruler, whose JF sonne laye sicke at Capernaum. This herde that Iesus came out of Iewry in to Galile, and wente vnto him, and besought him, that he wolde come downe, and helpe his sonne, for he laye deed sicke. And Iesus sayde vnto him: Excepte ye se tokens and wonders, ye beleue not. The ruler sayde vnto him: Come downe Syr, or euer my childe dye. Iesus sayde vnto him: Go thy waye, thy sonne lyucth. The man beleued the worde, that Iesus sayde vnto him, and wente his wave. And as he was goinge downe, his seruauntes mett him, and tolde him, and sayde: Thy childe lyueth. Then enquyred he of them the houre, wherin he beganne to amende. And they sayde vnto him: Yesterdaye aboute the seueth houre the feuer left him. Then the father perceaued, that it was aboute the same houre, wherin Iesus sayde vnto him: Thy sonne lyueth. And he beleued with his whole house. This is now the seconde token that Iesus dyd, whan he came from Iewry in to Galile.

FTERWARDE, there was a feast of a A the lewes, and lesus wente vp to Ierusalem. There is at Ierusalem by the slaughter house a pole, which in Hebrue is called Bethseda, 🛯 hath fyue porches, wherin laye many sicke, blynde, lame, wythred, which wayted, when the water shulde moue. For the angell wente downe at his tyme in to the pole, and stered the water. Who so euer now wente downe first, after that the water was stered, y same was made whole, what soeuer disease he had. And there was a man, which had lyen sicke eight and thirtie yeares. Whan Iesus sawe him lye, g knewe that he had lyen so longe, he saide vnto him : Wilt thou be made whole? The sicke answered him: Syr, I haue no man, whan the water is moued, to put me in to the pole. And whan I come, another steppeth downe in before me.

Iesus sayde vnto him: Aryse, take vp thy bed, and go thy waye. And immediatly the man was made whole, and toke vp his bed

The bi. Chapter.

A FTER this wente Iesus ouer the see who the cite Tiberias in Galilee. "And moch people folowed him, because they sawe the tokens that he dyd vpon the which were diseased. But Iesus wete vp in to a mountayne, and there he sat with his disciples. And Easter § feast of the Iewes was nye. Then Iesus lift vp his eyes, and sawe § there eame moch people vnto him, and he sayde vnto Philippe: Whence shal we bye bred, § these maye eate? But this he sayde to proue him, for he himself knewe, what he wolde do.

Philippe answered him: Two hundreth peny worth of bred is not ynough amonge thē, ý euery one maye take a litle. Thē sayde vnto hī one of his disciples, Andrew ŷ brother of Symē Peter: There is a lad here, ý hath fyne barlye loaues, and two fishes, but what is that amōge so many?<sup>4</sup> Iesus sayde: Make the the people syt downe. There was moch grasse in the place. Then they sat thē downe, aboute a fyue thousande men. Iesus toke the loaues, thanked, and gaue them to the disciples : the disciples (gaue) to them that were set downe. Likewyse also of the fishes as moch as they wolde.

Whan they were fylled, he sayde vnto his disciples: Gather vp the broken meate that remayneth, that nothinge be lost. The they gathered, and fylled twolue baskettes with the broke meate, that remayned of the fyue barlye loaues, vnto them which had eaten. Now whan the men sawe the token y Iesus dyd, they saide: † This is of a trueth the Prophet, y shulde come into the worlde. Whan Iesus now perceaued that they wolde come, and take him vp, to make him kynge, the gat him awaye agayne in to a mountayne himself alone.

At even wente his disciples downe to  $\hat{y}$  see, and entred in to the shippe, and came to the other syde of  $\hat{y}$  sce vnto Capernaū. And it was darcke allready. And Iesus was not come to the. And  $\hat{y}$  see arose thorow a greate wynde. Now whan they had rowed ypo a fyue and twetie or thirtie furlonges, they sawe lesus goinge vpon the see, and came nye to the shippe. And they were afrayed. But he sayde vnto' them: It is I, be not afrayed. Then wolde they haue receaued him in to  $\hat{y}$ shippe. And immediatly  $\hat{y}$  shippe was at the londe whither they wente.

The nexte daye after, the people which to stode on the other syde of the see, sawe that there was none other shippe there saue that one, wherinto his disciples were entred: and that Iesus were not in with his disciples in to the shippe, but  $\mathring{y}$  his disciples were gone awaie alone. Howbeit there came other shippes from Tiberias, nye vnto  $\mathring{y}$  place where they had eate the bred, after  $\mathring{y}$  the LORDE had geuen thankes. Now whan the people sawe that Iesus was not there, nether his disciples, they toke shippe also, and came to Capernaum, and sought Iesus.

And whan they founde him on the other syde of the see, they sayde vnto him: Master, whan camest thou hither? Iesus answered thē,  $\mathfrak{g}$  sayde: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Ye seke me not because ye sawe  $\mathfrak{F}$  tokēs, but because ye ate of the loaues, and were fylled. Laboure not for the meate which perisheth but  $\mathfrak{F}$  endureth vnto euerlastinge life, which the sonne of mā shal geue you: For him hath God the father sealed.

Thē sayde they vnto him : What shal we do, that we maye worke  $\hat{y}$  workes of God? Iesus answered, and sayde vnto thē: This is the worke of God, that ye beleue on him, whom he hath sent. Then sayde they vnto him :  $\hat{y}$  What token doest thou thē, that we maye se and beleue  $\hat{y}$ ? What workest thou? Oure fathers ate Māna in the wyldernesse, as it is wryttē: "He gaue thē bred frō heauen to eate. Then sayde Iesus vnto thē: Verely verely I saye vnto you: Moses gaue you not bred from heaue, but my father geueth you the true bred from heauen: For this is that bred of God, which commeth from heauen, and geueth life vnto the worlde.

Thē sayde they vnto him : || Syr, geue vs allwaye soch bred. But Iesus sayde vnto thē: I am ý bred of life. He that cōmeth vnto me, shal not hūger: g he that beleueth on me, shal neuer thyrst. But I haue sayde vnto you, ý ye haue sene me, and yet ye beleue

all. For he knewe his betrayer, therfore sayde he: ye are not all cleane.

Now whan he had waszhen their fete, and taken his clothes, he sat him downe agayne, and sayde vnto the: Wote ye what I haue done vnto you? Ye call me master and LORDE, and ye saye right therin, for so I am. Yf I then youre LORDE and master haue waszhen youre fete, ye ought also to wash one anothers fete. "I haue geuē you an ensample, that ye shulde do as I haue done vnto you. Verely verely I saye vnto you: \* the seruaunt is not greater then his lorde, nether is the Apostell greater then he that sent him. Yf ye knowe these thinges, 'blessed are ye yf ye do them. I speake not of you all, I knowe whom I have chosen, but that the scripture might be fulfilled :  $^{\dagger}$  He  $\oint$  eateth my bred, hath lift vp his hele against me. I tell it you now, before it come,' that whan it is come to passe, ye may believe, that I am he.

Verely verely I saye vnto you: He that receaucth whom so euer I sende,<sup>d</sup> receaueth me: and he that receaueth me, receaueth him that sent me. Whan Iesus had thus sayde, he was heuy in sprete, and testified, and sayde: 'Verely verely I saye vnto you: One ‡ amonge you shal betraye me. Then the disciples loked one vpon another, a were in doute, of whom he spake. But there was one amoge his disciples, that leaned at the table on Iesus bosome, who Iesus loued : to him beckened Symon Peter, that he shulde axe, who it was, of whom he spake. For the same leaned vpo Iesus brest, and sayde vnto him: LORDE, who is it? Iesus answered: It is he, vnto whom I dyppe the soppe a geue it. And he dypte in the soppe, and gaue it vnto Iudas Iscarioth Symons sonne. And after $ soppe the deuell entred in to him.

Then sayde Iesus vnto him: That thou doest, do quyckly. But  $\hat{y}$  same wyst no man at the table, for what intent he sayde it vnto him. Some thought (for so moch as Iudas had the bagge<sup>s</sup>) that Iesus had sayde vnto him: Bye that is necessary for vs agaynst the feast: Or that he shulde geue some thinge vnto the poore. Whan he had receaued the soppe, he wente out immediatly, and it was night.

Whan he was gone forth, Iesus sayde: 3 Now is the sonne of ma glorified," and God is glorified in him. Yf God be glorified in him, the shal god glorifie him also in hiself, a straight waye shal he glorifye him. Deare childre, I am yet a litle whyle with you. <sup>e</sup> Father, I wil, that they whom thou hast geuen me, be with me where I am, y they maye se my glory, which thou hast geue me: for thou hast loued me, or euer y worlde was made. 'Righteous father, the worlde hath not knowne ŷ, but I haue knowne ŷ: and these haue knowne, that thou hast sent me. And I have declared thy name vnto them, a wyl declare it, y the loue wherwith thou hast loued me, maye be in the, g I in them.

The rbiff. Chapter.

WHAN Iesus had thus spoke, he wete ¶Ω [ forth with his disciples ouer the broke Cedron, where there was a gardc, in to the which Iesus entred and his disciples. But Iudas y betrayed hi, knewe the place also. For Icsus resorted thither oft tymes with his disciples. "Now whan Iudas had take vnto him the copany, g mynisters of the hye prestes and Pharises, he came thither with creshettes, with lanternes, and with weapens. Iesus now knowinge all y shulde come vpon him, wete forth, and sayde vnto the: Whom seke ye? They answered him: Iesus of Nazareth. Iesus sayde vnto them: I am he: Iudas also which betrayed him, stode with the. Now whan Iesus sayde vnto thē: I am he, they wete Then bacwardes, and fell to the grounde. axed he the agayne: Whom seke ye? They sayde: lesus of Nazareth. lesus answered: I haue tolde you, that I am he. Yf ye seke me, then let these go their waye. That the worde might be fulfylled, which he sayde: Of them who thou gauest me," haue I not lost one. Then had Symon Peter a swerde, and drewe it out, and smote the hye prestes seruaut, and cut of his right eare. And y servaūtes name was Malchus.

Then sayde lesus vnto Peter: Put vp thy B swerde in to the sheeth. Shal I not drynke of $ cuppe, which my father hath geuē me? Then the company and the captayne g the officers of the lewes toke lesus, and bounde him, a led him awaye first vnto Annas, that was fatherlawe vnto Caiphas, which was hye prest y same yeare. It was Caiphas, which gaue coucell vnto y Iewes that it were good, that one man shulde dye for the people.

As for Symon Peter, he and another disciple folowed Iesus. The same disciple was knowne vnto the hye prest, and wete in with Iesus in to the hye prestes palace. But Peter stode without at the dore. Then y other disciple which was knowne vnto the hye prest, wente out, and spake to the damsell v kepte the dore, and brought in Peter. Then the damsell that kepte the dore, sayde vnto Peter: Art not thou also one of this mans disciples? He sayde: I am not.

The servauntes  $\sigma$  officers stode, and had  $\sigma$ made a fyre of coles (for it was colde)  $\pi$ warmed the selues. Peter also stode with them, and warmed him self. The hye prest axed Iesus of his disciples, and of his doctryne. Iesus answered him: "I have spoken openly before the worlde, I have ever taught in the synagoge and in the teple, whither all the Iewes resorted, a in secrete haue I spokē nothinge. Why axest thou me? Axe the t haue herde, what I haue spoken vnto the: beholde, they can tell what I have sayde. But whan he had thus spoke," one of the officers that stode by, smote Iesus on the face, and sayde: Answerest thou the hye prest so? Iesus answered him: Yf I haue euell spoke, the beare wytnesse of eucll: but yf I haue well spoken, why smytest thou me? And Annas sent him bounde vnto Caiphas y hye prest.

'Symo Peter stode and warmed him self. The sayde they vnto him : Art not thou one of his disciples? He denyed, and sayde : I am not. A seruaut of the hye prestes, a kynszma of his, whose eare Peter had smytten of, sayde vnto him: Dyd not I se the in the garde with him?

Then Peter denyed agayne. And immediatly the 'cock crew. * Then led they Iesus' from Caiphas in to the comon hall. And it was early in the mornynge. And they them selues wete not in to the como hall, lest they shulde be defyled, but y they might eate y Pascall lambe. Then wente Pilate out vnto the, and sayde: What accusacion brynge ye agaynst this man? They answered, and sayde

The Actes of the Apostles.

The first Chapter.

<sup>23</sup> THE first treatise (deare Theophilus) haue I made of all that Iesus beganne to do and to teache, vntyll § daye that he was taken vp, after that he (thorow the holy goost) had geuen commaundementes to the Apostles, whom he had chosen: to whō also he shewed himself "alyue after his passion, by many tokēs, and appeared vnto them fourtye dayes longe, and spake vnto them of the kyngdome of God.

And whan he had gathered them together, he commaunded them that they shulde not departe from Ierusalem, but to wayte for the promyse of the father, wherof (sayde he) ye haue herde<sup>6</sup> of me: For Ihon baptysed with water, but ye shalbe baptysed with  $\mathring{y}$  holy goost,  $\mathfrak{g}$  that within this few dayes.

Now whan they were come together, they axed him, and sayde: LORDE, shalt thou at this tyme set vp the kyngdome of Israel agayne? But he sayde vnto them: It belongeth not vnto you to knowe the 'tymes or seasons, which the father hath kepte in his awne power, but ye shal receaue the power of $ holy goost," which shal come vpon you, and ye shalbe my witnesses at Ierusalem, and in all Iewrye and Samaria, and vnto the ende of the earth.

33 And whan he had spoken these thinges, whyle they behelde, he was taken vp, and a 'cloude receaued him from their sight. And whyle they loked after him, as he wente in to heauen, beholde, there stode by them two men in whyte garmentes, which also sayde: Ye men of Galile, Why stonde ye gasynge vp

Then turned they agayne from § mount that is called Oliuete, which is nye to Ierusalem, and hath a Sabbath dayes iourney. And whan they came in, they wente vp in to a parler, where abode 'Peter and Iames, Ihon and Andrew, Philippe and Thomas, Bartilmew and Mathew, Iames the sonne of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Iudas the sonne of Iames. These all contynued with one acorde in prayer and supplicacion, with the wemen and Mary the mother of Iesu and with his brethren

And in those dayes Peter stode vp in the c myddes amonge the disciples, and sayde: (The company of the names together, was aboute an hundreth and twentye.) And they appoynted two (Ioseph<sup>a</sup> called Barsabas, whose syrname was Iustus, and Mathias.) makinge their prayer and sayenge: Thou LORDE, <sup>b</sup>which knowest the hertes of all men, shewe whether of these two thou hast chosen, that the one maye take the rowme of this mynistracion and Apostelshippe, from the which Iudas by transgression fell, that he might go awaye in to his awne place. And they gaue forth the lottes ouer them, and the lot fell vpon Mathias. And he was counted with the eleuen Apostles.

The ij. Chapter.

A ND whan the * Whit sondaye was fulfylled, they were all with one acorde together in one place. And sodenly there came a sounde from heauen, as it had bene the comynge of a mightie wynde, and it fylled the whole house where they sat. And there appeared vnto them clouen tunges, like as they had bene of fyre. And he sat vpon ech one of them, and they were all fylled with the holy goost. * And they beganne to preach with other tunges, euen as the sprete gaue them vtteraunce.

There were dwellinge at Ierusalem Iewes, men that feared God, out of euery nacion that is vnder heauen. Now whan this voyce came to passe, the multitude came together, and were astonyed: For euery one herde, that they spake with his awne tunge. They wondred all and marueyled, and sayde amonge them selues: Beholde, are not all these which speake, of Galile? How heare we the euery one his awne tunge, wherin we were borne? Parthians and Medes, and Elamites, and we that dwell in Mesopotamia, and in Iewry and Capadocia, Pontus, and Asia, Phrigia and Pamphilia, Egipte, and in the partes of Lybia by Cyren, and straungers of Rome, Iewes and ‡ Proselytes, Cretes and Arabians: we heare them speake with oure awne tunges the greate workes of God.

Then stode Peter vp with the eleuen, and lift vp his voyce, and sayde vnto them:

Ye men of Iewry, and all ye that dwell at Ierusalē, be this knowne vnto you, and let my wordes entre in at youre eares. For these are not dronken, as ye suppose, for it is yet but the thirde houre of  $\hat{y}$  daye: but this is it, that was spokē before by the prophet Ioel: And it shal come to passe in the last dayes,' sayeth God, I will poure out of my sprete vpon all flesh, and youre sonnes and youre doughters shal prophecye, and youre olde men shall dreame dreames, and on my seruauntes and on my handmaydens wyll I poure out of my sprete in those dayes, g they shal prophecye.

And I wil shewe wonders in heauen aboue, and tokens on the earth beneth, bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. And it shall come to passe, 'Who so euer shal call vpo the name of the LORDE, shalbe saued.

Ye men of Israel, heare these wordes: Iesus  $| \mathfrak{C} |$ of Nazareth, y man approued of God amonge you with miracles, and wonders and tokens, which God dyd by him in the myddes amonge you, as ye youre selues knowe also, #him (after that he was delyuered by the determinate councell and foreknowlege of God) haue ye taken by the handes of vnrighteous personnes, and crucifyed him, a slayne him, who God hath raysed vp,<sup>s</sup> and lowsed the sorowes of death, for so moch as it was vnpossyble that he shulde be holden of it. Seynge now that he by the right hande of God \* is exalted, and hath receaued of y father  $\psi$  promyse of the holy goost, he hath shed forth this, that ye se and heare. For Dauid is not ascended in to heauen, but he sayde: The LORDE sayde vnto my LORDE: Syt thou on my righte hande,<sup>d</sup> vntyll I make thine enemies thy fote stole. So therfore let allthe house of Israel knowe for a suertye, y God hath made this same lesus (whom ye haue crucified) LORDE and Christ.

'Whan they herde this, their hert pricked them, and they sayde vnto Peter and to the other Apostles: Ye men and brethre, 'What shal we do? Peter sayde onto them: Amede youre selues, and let euery one of you be baptysed in the name of Iesus Christ, for the remyssion of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gifte of the holy goost. PETER and Ihon wente vp together in to a the temple aboute the nyenth houre to. praye. And there was a certayne man halt from his mothers wombe, whom they brought and layed daylie at the gate of the tople, which is called, the Bewtyfull, that he might axe almesse of them that wete in to the temple. Now whan he sawe Peter and Ihon, that they wolde in to the temple, he desyred to receaue an almesse. Peter behelde him with Ihon, and sayde : Loke on vs. And he gaue hede vnto them, hopynge to receaue some thinge of them. ## The r. Chapter.

THERE was a man at Cesarea, named 🕱 Cornelius (a captayne of y copany, which is called y Italianysh) a deuoute man, a one that feared God with all his house, a gaue moch almesse to y people, and prayed God allwaye. The same sawe in a vision openly (aboute the nyenth houre of the daye) an angell of God entringe in to him, and sayenge vnto him: Cornelius. He loked vpon him, and was afrayed, and sayde: LORDE, what is it? He sayde vnto him : ‡Thy prayers g thine all messes are come vp in to remebraunce before God. And now sende men vnto Ioppa, g call for Simō, whose syrname is Peter, which is at lodginge with one Symon a tanner, whose house lyeth by \$ see syde : he shal tell  $\hat{v}$ , what thou oughtest to do. And what the angell which spake to Cornelius, was departed, he called two of his housholde seruauntes, g a deuoute soudyer, of the that wayted vpon him: and tolde them all, and sent the to Ioppa.

On the nexte daye after whan these were goinge on their iourney, and came nye vnto the cite, Peter § wente vp in to a chamber to praye aboute the sixte houre. And whan he was högrie, he wolde haue eatē. But whyle they made ready for him, he fell in to a traunce, and sawe heauē open, and a vessell comynge downe vnto him, as it had bene a

The rij. Chapter.

T the same tyme layed kynge Herode A handes vpon certayne of the congregacion, to vexe them. As for * lames the brother of Ihon, him he slewe with the swerde. And whan he sawe that it pleased the lewes, he proceaded farther to take Peter also. But it was Easter. Now whan he had taken him, he put him in preson, and delyuered him vnto foure quaternions of soudyers, to kepe him: and thought after Easter to bringe him forth to the people. And Peter was kepte in the preson. + But prayer was made without ceassinge of the congregacion, vnto God for him. And whan Herode wolde haue broughte him out vnto the people, in the same nighte slepte Peter betwene two soudiers, bounde with two cheynes. And the kepers before the dore kepte the preson.

36 And beholde, the angell of the LORDE was there presente, and a lighte shyned in the habitacion, and he smote Peter on the syde, and waked him vp, and sayde: Aryse vp quyckly. And the cheynes fell of from his hondes. And the angell sayde vnto him: Gyrde the, and put on thy shues. And he dyd so. And he sayde vnto him: Cast thy mantle aboute the, and folowe me. And he wente out, and folowed him, and wyst not, that it was trueth that was done by y angell, but thoughte he had sene a vision. Neuertheles they wente thorow the first and seconde watch, and came to the yron gate, that ledeth vnto the cite, which opened to the by his awne acorde. And they wente out, and passed thorow one strete, and immediatly the angell departed from him.

And whan Peter was come to himself, he sayde: Now I knowe of a trueth, that ÿ LORDE hath sent his angell, and delyuered me out of the honde of Herode, and from all the waytinge for of the people of the lewes. And as he considered the thinge, he came to the house of Mary the mother of one Ihon, (which after his symame was called Marke) where many were gathered together, # and prayed. As Peter knocked at the entry dore, there came forth a damsell to herken, named Rhoda. And whan she knewe Peters voyce, she opened not the entrye for gladnes, but rane in, and tolde, that Peter stode before ÿ entrye. But they sayde vnto her: Thou art mad. Neuertheles she abode by it, that is was so. They sayde: it is his angell. But Peter contynued knockinge. Whan they opened the dore, they sawe him, and were astonnyed. § But he beckened vnto them with the hande, to holde their peace, a tolde them, how the LORDE had broughte him out of the preson. And he sayde: Shewe this vnto James, and to the brethren. And he departed, and wete in to another place.

Whan it was daye, there was not a litle a 🖽 doo amoge the soudyers, what was become of Peter. Whan Herode had called for him, and founde him not, he caused the kepers to be examyned, and commaunded the to be caried awaye, and he wente downe fro lewry vnto Cesarea, and there abode. But he was displeased with them of Tyre and Sido. Neuertheles they came vnto him with one accorde, and made intercession to Blastus the kynges chamberlayne, and desyred peace, because their countre was norished by the kynges londe. But vpon a daye appoynted, Herode put on y kyngly apparell, sat him downe vpon the iudgment seate, and made an oracion vnto them. As for the people, they cried therto: This is a voyce of God, and not of a man. Immediatly the angell of the LORDE smote him, because he gaue not God the honoure : And he was eaten vp of wormes," and gaue vp the goost. But the worde of God grewe, and multiplyed. As for Barnabas and Saul, they came agayne to Ierusalem, and delyuered # the handreachinge, and toke with them Ihon, whose syrname was Marke.

And they were broughte on their waye by  $\hat{y}$ cōgregacion,  $\mathfrak{q}$  wente thorow Phenices and Samaria, and declared the  $\hat{s}$  conversacion of the Heythen, and brought greate ioye vnto all the brethren. Whan they came to Ierusalë, they were receaued of  $\hat{y}$  cōgregacion,  $\mathfrak{q}$  of the Apostles, and of the Elders,  $\mathfrak{q}$  they tolde how greate thinges God had done with thē. Then rose there vp certayne of the secte of  $\hat{y}$  Pharises (which beleued) and sayde: They must be circumcysed and cōmaunded, to kepe the lawe of Moses. But the Apostles and Elders came together, to reason vpon this matter.

Now whan there was moch disputinge Peter B rose vp, and sayde vnto the: Ye men and brethren, ye knowe that a good whyle agoo, God chose amonge vs, y the Heythe by my mouth shulde heare the worde of the Gospell, and beleue. And God the knower of hertes bare wytnesse ouer the, and gaue the the holy goost, like as vn to vs, a put no dyfference betwixte vs them, and purified their hertes thorow fayth. Whan they herde of the resurreccion of the deed, some mocked. But some sayde: We wyl heare the agayne of this matter. So Paul departed from amonge them. Howbeit certayne men claue vnto him, and beleued : amonge whom was Dionisius, one of the councell : and a woman named Damaris, and other with them.

The rbiij. Chapter.

A FTER that departed Paul frō Athens, and came to Corinthum, and founde a lewe named * Aquila, borne in Pōtus, which was lately come out of Italy: and his wife Priscilla (because the Emperoure Claudius had commaunded all lewes to departe from Rome) and he drue vnto thē. And because he was of the same crafte, he abode with thē, and wroughte. Their crafte was to make tentes. And he preached in the synagoge eucry Sabbath daye, and exhorted the Iewes and the Grekes.

Whan Sylas and Timotheus were come fro Macedonia, Paul was constrayned by the sprete to testifye vnto  $\hat{y}$  Iewes, that Iesus was very Christ. But whā they sayde cōtrary and blasphemed, the shoke his rayment, and sayde vnto them: Youre bloude be vpon youre awne heade. From hence forth I go blamelesse vnto the Gentyles. And he departed thence, and came in to the house of a man named Iustus, which feared God, and his house was nexte vnto the synagoge. Howbeit Crispus the chefe ruler of the synagoge, beleued on  $\hat{y}$  LORDE with all his housholde. And many of the Corinthians that gaue audience, beleued, and were baptysed

The LORDE spake vnto Paul by a vision in y nighte: Be not afrayed, but speake, and holde not thy peace, for I am with the: and noman shal inuade the that shal hurte the, for I haue moch people in this cite. He contynued there a yearc and sixe monethes, and taught them the worde of God.

B But whan Gallio was ruler of the countre of Achaia, the Iewes made insurreccion with one acorde agaynst Paul, c broughte him before the iudgment seate, and sayde: This Whan Paul was aboute to open his mouth, Gallio sayde vnto  $\mathring{y}$  Iewes: Yf it were a matter of wronge or an euell dede (O ye Iewes) reason wolde that I shulde heare you: but yf it be a question of wordes, and of names, and of  $\mathring{y}$  lawe amōge you, loke ye to it youre selues, I thinke not to be iudge there ouer. And he droue them from the iudgnēt seate. Then all the Grekes toke Sosthenes the ruler of the Sinagoge, and Smote him before the iudgment seate. And Gallio cared for none of tho thinges.

Paul after  $\frac{1}{2}$  he had taried a good whyle, toke his leue of the brethren, and sayled in to Syria, Priscilla  $\mathfrak{g}$  Aquila bearinge him company. And he shore his heade at Cenchrea (for he had a  $\ddagger$  vowe)  $\mathfrak{g}$  came downe to Ephesus,  $\mathfrak{g}$  lefte them there. But he himselfe wēte in to the synagoge, and reasoned with the Iewes. And they desyred him, that he wolde tary with them a longer season. And he cosented not, but bad them farwele, and sayde: I must nedes in eny wyse kepe this feast that commeth, at Ierusalem : but § yf God wyl, I wil returne agayne vnto you.

And he departed from Ephesus, and came to Cesarea, and wente vp, and saluted § congregacion, and toke his iourney downe to Antioche, and taried there a certayne tyme, and departed, and walked thorow all § countre of Galatia and Phrigia by ordre, and strengthed all the disciples.

There came vnto Ephesus a certayne Iewe, named || Apollo (borne at Alexadria) an eloquent man, and mightie in the scriptures: the same was infourmed in the wave of the LORDE, and spake feruently in the sprete, and taughte diligently the thinges of the LORDE, and knewe but the baptyme off Ihon onely. The same beganne to speake boldly in the synagoge. Whan Aquila and Priscilla herde him, they toke him vnto the, and expounded the waye of God vnto him more perfectly. But whan he wolde go in to Achaia, the brethren wrote, and exorted the disciples to receaue him. And whan he was come thither, he helped them moch which beleued thorow grace. For he ouercame the Iewes mightely, and shewed openly by $ scripture, that lesus was Christ.

The rir. Chapter.

A DUT it fortuned whan Apollo was at Corinthum, that Paul walked thorow the vpper coastes, and came to Ephesus, and founde certayne disciples, vn to whom he sayde : Haue ye receaued y holy goost, sence ye beleued? They sayde vnto hi: We haue not herde, whether there be an holy goost. He sayde vnto them : Where with then were ye baptysed? They sayde: With the baptyme of Ihon. Paul sayde: "Ihon baptysed with the baptyme of repentaunce, and spake vnto y people, that they shulde beleue on him, which shulde come after him, that is, on Iesus, that the same is Christ. Whan they herde that, they were baptysed in the name of the LORDE Iesu. And whan Paul layed the hades on the, the holy goost came vpon them, and they spake with tunges, and prophecied. And all the men were aboute twolue.

He wete in to y synagoge, and preached boldly thre monethes longe, teachinge, and geuynge them exortacions of the kyngdome of God. But whan dyuerse waxed herde herted, and beleued not, and spake euell of the waye of the LORDE before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, and disputed daylye in the scole of one called Tyrannus. And this was done two yeares loge, so that all they which dwelt in Asia, herde the worde of the LORDE Iesu, both Iewes a Grekes. And God wroughte no small miracles by the handes of Paul, so that from his body there were broughte napkyns or partlettes vnto the sicke, and the diseases departed from them, and the euell spretes wente out of them.

But certayne of the vagabounde Iewes which were coniurers, vndertoke to name ŷ name of the LORDE Iesus, ouer those that had euell spretes, and sayde: We charge you by Iesus whom Paul preacheth. They were seuen sonnes of one Sceua a Iewe the hye prest, which dyd so. The euell sprete answered, and sayde: Iesus I knowe, and Paul I knowe, but who are ye? And the mā in whō the euell sprete was, ranne vpon them, and ouercame them, and cast them vnder him, so that they fled out of the same house naked and wounded. This was knowne vnto all the Iewes and Grekes which dwelt at Ephesus, and there fell a feare vpon them all. And  $\mathring{y}$  name of the LORDE Iesus was magnified. \*Many of the also that beleued, came and confessed, and shewed their workes. But many of them that had vsed curious craftes, broughte the bokes together, and burnte them openly: and they counted the pryce of them, and founde it of money fiftye thousande pens. So mightely grewe  $\mathring{y}$  worde of the LORDE, and preuayled.

Whan this was done, Paul purposed in  $\mathbb{C}$ sprete to take his iourney thorow Macedonia and Achaia, and to go to Ierusalē, and sayde: After that I have bene there, I must se Rome And he sent in to Macedonia two that also. mynistred vnto him, Timotheus and Erastus. But he himselfe remayned in Asia for a season. At the same tyme there rose no litle a doo aboute that waye. For a certayne man named Demetrius a goldsmyth, which made syluer shrynes for Diana, and broughte them of the crafte no small vauntage. Them he gathered together, and the feloweworkme of the same occupacion, and sayde: Syrs, ye knowe that by this crafte we haue vauntage, and ye se and heare, that not onely at Ephesus, but almost also thorow out all Asia, this Paul turneth awaye moch people with his persuadynge, and sayeth: 'They be not goddes that are made with hondes. Howbeit it shal not onely brynge oure occupacion to this poynte to be set at naught, but also the temple of greate Diana shal from hence forth, be despysed, and hir maiestye also shalbe destroyed, who neuertheles all Asia and the worlde worshippeth.

Whan they herde this, they were full of B wrath, cried out, and sayde : Greate is Diana of the Ephesians. And all y cite was on a roore, and they ruszhed in with one assent in to the open place, and toke Gaius and Aristarchus of Macedonia, Pauls companyons. Whan Paul wolde haue gone in amonge the people, the disciples suffred him not. Certayne also of § chefe of Asia which were Pauls good frendes, sent vnto him, and desyred him, that he shulde not preasse in to the open place. Some cried one thinge, some another. And the congregacion was out of quyete, and the more parte knewe not wherfore they were come together. Some of the people drue forth Alexander, whan y Iewes thrust him forwarde. Alexader beckened with the hande, and wolde haue geuen the people an answere. But whan they knewe that he was a lewe, there arose a shoute of all, and cried the space of two houres: Greate is Diana of the Ephesians.

Whan the towne clarke had stylled the people, he sayde: Ye men of Ephesus, what man is it which knoweth not, that the cite of § Ephesiās is a worshipper of the greate goddesse Diana, and of the heauenly ymage? Seinge now that this can not be sayde agaynst, ye ought to be contente, and to do nothinge without aduysement. Ye haue broughte hither these men, which are nether churchrobbers ner blasphemers off youre goddesse.

But yff Demetrius and they that are craftesmen with him, haue ought to saye vn to eny man, the lawe is open, and there are rulers, let them accuse one another. But yf ye wil go aboute eny other thinge, it maye be determyned in a laufull congregacion. For we stonde in ioperdy to be accused of this daycs vproure: and yet is there no man giltye, of whom we mighte geue a rekenynge of this vproure. And whan he had sayde this, he let the congregacion departe.

The rr. Chapter.

- A NOW whan the vproure was ceassed, Paul called the disciples vnto him, and Paul called the disciples vnto him, and toke his leue of them, and departed * to go in to Macedonia. And whan he had gone thorow those partes, and exhorted them with many wordes, he came in to Grekelonde, and there abode thre monethes. But whan the Iewes layed wayte for him, as he was aboute to sayle in to Syria, he purposed to turne agayne thorow Macedonia. There accompanied him in to Asia, Sopater of Berrea: and of Thessalonica, Aristarchus and Secundus: and Gaius of Derba, and Timotheus : but of Asia, Tychicus and +Trophimus. These wente before, and taried for vs at Troada: but we sayled after the Easter dayes from Philippos, vnto y fyfth daye, and came to them vnto Troada, and taried there seuen dayes.
- 33 Vpon one of the Sabbathes, whan the disciples came together to breake bred, Paul preached vnto them, wyllinge to departe on the morow, and contynued the preachinge vnto mydnight. And there were many lightes in the chamber, where they were gathered together. There sat a yonge man named Eutychos, in a wyndow, and fell in to a depe slepe (whyle Paul was speakinge) and was ouercome with slepe, and fell downe from the thirde lofte, and was taken vp deed. But Paul wente downe, and fell on him, and enbraced him, and sayde : Make nothinge a doo, for his soule is in hī. Then wente he vp, and brake the bred, and ate, and talked moch with thē, tyll the daye brake, and so departed. As for the yōge man, they broughte him alyue, and were not a litle conforted.

But we wente afore in to the shippe, and sayled towarde Asson, wyllinge there to receaue Paul. For so had he appoynted, and wolde himselfe go on fote. Whan he was come to vs vnto Asson, we toke him in, and came to Mitylenes, and sayled from thence, and came on the nexte daye ouer agaynst Chios, and on the daye folowinge we aryued at Samos, and taried at Tragilion, and on the nexte daye came we to Mileton: for Paul had determed to sayle ouer by Ephesus, that he nede not to spende the tyme in Asia: for he haisted to be at Ierusalem vpō the Whitsondaye, yf it were possible for him.

But from Mileton he sent vnto Ephesus, C and called for the Elders of the congregacion. Whan they were come to him, he sayde vnto them: Ye knowe sence the first daye ‡that I came in to Asia, after what maner I haue bene with you at all tyme, and serued $ LORDE with all humblenesse of mynde, and with many teares and tentacions, which happened vnto me by v layenges of wayte of the lewes, how y I have kepte backe nothinge v was profitable, but that I have shewed you, and taughte you openly, and privately from house to house. And haue testifyed both vnto the lewes a to the Grekes the repentaunce towarde God, and faith towarde oure LORDE Iesus.

And now beholde, I go bounde in  $\frac{1}{9}$  sprete vnto Ierusalē, not knowinge what shal happen there vnto me, but  $\frac{1}{9}$  the holy goost  $\frac{1}{9}$  witnesseth in euery cite, and sayeth, that bondes and troubles abyde me there. receaued of the LORDE Iesu, to testifye the Gospell of the grace of God. And now beholde, I knowe that ye shal se 玬 my face nomore, all ye, thorow whom I haue gone, and preached the kyngdome of God. Wherfore I take you to recorde this daye, that I am pure from the bloude of all men: For I haue kepte nothinge backe, but haue shewed you all the councell off God. Take hede therfore vnto youre selues, and to all the flocke, amonge the which the holy goost hath set you to be Bishoppes, to fede the congregacion of God, which he hath purchaced thorow his owne bloude. For this I knowe, \* that after my departinge there shal enter in amonge you greuous wolues, which shal not spare the flocke. Yee euē † from amonge youre awne selues shal men aryse, speakynge peruerse doctryne, to drawe disciples after them. Therfore awake, and remembre, that by the space of thre yeares I ceassed not to warne euery one off you both nighte and daye with teares. And now brethren I commende you vnto Ŧ God, and to v worde of his grace, which is mightie to edifye you, and to geue you the enheritaunce amoge all them that are sanctified. "I haue not desyred syluer, golde or rayment off eny off you. For ye youre selues knowe, that these handes have mynistred vnto my necessities, and them that were with me. I have shewed you all thinges, how that so labouringe ye oughte to receaue the weake, and to remembre the worde of the LORDE, how that he sayde: It is more blessed to geue, then to receaue. And whan he had sayde this, he kneled downe, and prayed with them all. But there was moch wepynge amonge them all, and they fell aboute Pauls necke, and kyssed him, and were sory, most of all because of the worde which he had sayde, that they shulde se his face nomore. And they accopanied him vnto the shippe.

NOW whan it fortuned that we had launched forth and were departed from them, we came with a straight course vnto Coon, and on the daye followinge vnto the Rhodes, and from thence vnto Patara. And whan we founde a shippe ready to sayle vnto Phenices, we wente aborde and set forth.

But wha we came within the sighte of Cypers, we lefte it on the lefte hande, and sayled vnto Syria, and came vnto Tyre: for there the shippe shulde laye forth the ware. And whan we had founde disciples, we taried there seuen dayes. And they tolde Paul thorow the sprete, that he shulde not go vp to Ierusalem. And it fortuned wha we had fulfilled those dayes, we departed, and wente oure wayes, and they all broughte vs on oure waye with wyues and childre, tyll we were come out of § cite, and we kneled downe vpo the shore, and prayed. And whan we had taken oure leue one off another, we toke shippe, but they turned agayne vnto theirs. Whan we herde this, both we and they that were of the same place, besoughte him, that he wolde not go vp to Ierusalem. Then answered Paul and sayde : What do ye, wepynge, and breakynge my hert? For I am redye not onely to be bounde, but also to dye at Ierusalem for v name of the LORDE Iesu. But whā he wolde not be persuaded, we ceassed, and sayde: # The will of the LORDE be fulfylled. And after those dayes we were ready, wente vp to Ierusalem: There came with vs also certayne of the disciples off Cesarea, and broughte with them one of Cypers, named Mnason, an olde disciple, with whom we shulde lodge. Now wha we came to Ierusalem, the brethren receased vs gladly. But on the nexte daye Paul wente in with vs vnto lames, and all the Elders came together. And whan he had saluted them, he tolde by me from heauen, and I fell to the earth, and herde a voyce which sayde vnto me: Saull Saull, why persecutest thou me? I answered: Who art thou LORDE? And he sayde vnto me: I am Iesus of Nazareth whom thou persecutest. As for them that were with me, they sawe ŷ lighte and were afrayed, but they herde not the voyce of him that spake with me. I sayde: LORDE, what shal I do? The LORDE sayde vnto me: Aryse, and go in to Damascon, there shal it be tolde ŷ of all that is appoynted the to do. But whan I sawe nothinge for the bryghtnesse of the lighte, I was led by the hande of them that were with me, and came to Damascon.

And I loked vp vpon him the same houre. He sayde: The God of oure fathers hath ordeyned the before, that thou shuldest knowe his wyll, and se the thinge y is rightfull, and heare the voyce out of his mouth: for thou shalt be his wytnesse vnto all men, of tho thinges which thou hast sene and herde. And now why tariest thou? Aryse, and be baptysed, and wasze awaye thy synnes, and * call vpon the name of the LORDE.

But it fortuned, that whan I was come agayne to Ierusalē, and prayed in the temple, I was in a traunce, and sawe him. Then sayde he vnto me: Make haist, † and get the soone out of Ierusalem, for they wyl not receaue the witnesse that thou bearest of me. And whan he bounde him with thonges, Paul sayde vnto the vndercaptavne that stode by: Is it laufull for you to scourge a man that is a Romayne, and vncondemned? Whan the vndercaptayne herde that, he wete to the vpper captayne, and tolde him, and sayde? What wilt thou do? This man is a Romayne. Then came y vpper captayne, and sayde vnto him: Tell me, art thou a Romayne? He sayde: Yee. And the vpper captayne answered: With a greate summe optayned I this fredome. But Paul sayde: As for me, I am a Romayne borne. The straight waye departed from him, they that shulde haue examyned him. And y chefe captayne was afrayed, whan he knewe that he was a Romayne, and because he had bounde him. On the nexte daye wolde he knowe the certentye wherfore he was accused of the Iewes, and he lowsed him from the bondes, and commaunded the hye prestes and all their councell to come together, and broughte Paul forth, and set him amonge them.

The rriff. Chapter

PAUL behelde the councell, and sayde: Ye men and brethren, I haue lyued with all good conscience before God vnto this daye: ¶But the hye prest Ananias commaunded them that stode aboute him, to smyte hī on the mouth. Then sayde Paul vnto him: God shal smyte the thou paynted wall. <sup>6</sup>Syttest thou and iudgest me after the lawe, and commaundest me to be smytten cōtrary to ŷ lawe? And they that stode aboute hī, sayde: Reuylest thou Gods hye prest? And Paul sayde: Brethrē, I wyst not that he was the hye prest. For it is wryttē:** The ruler of thy people shalt thou not curse.

But whan Paul knewe that the one parte was Saduces, and the other parte Pharises, he cried out in  $\mathring{y}$  councell: Ye men and brethren, I am a Pharise, and the sonne of a Pharise,  $\rarthinspace$ , and the sonne of the deed am I iudged. Then the vpper captayne let the yonge man departe, and charged him to tell noman, that he had shewed him this. And he called vnto him two vndercaptaynes, and sayde: Make redye two hundreth soudyers, that they maye go to Cesarea, and thre score and ten horsmen, and two hundreth speare men at the thirde houre of the nighte, and delyuer the beastes, that they maye set Paul theron, and brynge him safe vnto Felix the debyte, and he wrote a letter on this maner:

Claudius Lysias, vnto the most mightie  $\mathbb{P}$ Debyte Felix, gretynge.  $\ddagger$  The Iewes had taken this man, and wolde haue slayne him, then came I with soudyers, and rescued him, and perceaued that he is a Romayne. And whan I wolde haue knowne the cause, wherfore they accused hī, I broughte him in to their councell: then perceaued I, that he was accused aboute questions of their lawe. But there was no accusacion worthy of death or of bondes. And whan it was shewed me, that certayne Iewes layed wayte for him, I sent him straight waye vnto the, and commaunded the accusers also, that loke what they had agaynst him, they shulde tell the same before the. Fare well.

The soudyers (as it was commaunded them) toke Paul, and broughte him to Antipatras. But on the nexte daye, they lefte  $\S$  horse men to go with him, and turned agayne to the castell. When these came to Cesarea, they delyuered the letter vnto the Debyte,  $\mathfrak{g}$  presented Paul before him also. Whan the Debyte had red the letter, he axed off what countre he was. And whā he vnderstode that he was of Celicia, he sayde : § I wil heare the, whan thine accusers are come also. And he commaunded him to be kepte in Herodes iudgment house.

The priiij. Chapter.

FTER fyue dayes the hye prest Ananias came downe with the Elders, and with the Oratour Tertullus, which appeared before the Debyte agaynst Paul. Whan Paul was called forth, Tertullus begane to accuse him, and sayde: Seynge that we lyue in greate peace by the meanes of r, and that many good thinges are done for this people thorow thy prouydence (most mightie Felix) that alowe we euer and in all places with all thankes. tedious vnto the, I praye the, that of thy curtesy thou woldest heare vs a few wordes.

We have founde this man a pestilent felowe, and a sterer vp of sedicion amonge all the Iewes thorow out all the worlde, and a manteyner of the secte of the Nazaretes, * and hath taken in hande also to suspende the temple, whom we toke, and wolde have iudged him acordinge to oure lawe. But Lysias the hye captayne came vpō vs, and with greate violence delyuered him out of oure handes, and commaunded his accusers to come vnto the: of whom (yf thou wilt enquyre) thou mayest have knowlege of all these thinges, wherof we accuse him. The Iewes likewyse affirmed and savde, that it was even so.

But Paul (whan the debyte had beckened 15 vnto him, that he shulde speake) answered: Seynge I knowe that thou hast bene iudge now many yeares amonge this people, I wil not be afrayed to answere for my selfe, because that thou mayest knowe, that there are yet nomore but twolue dayes sence I came vp to Ierusalem for to worshippe, and that they nether founde me in the temple disputinge with eny man, or makynge env vproure amonge the people, ner in v synagoges, ner in the cite: nether can they proue the thinges, wherof they accuse me. But this I+ confesse vnto the, that after this waye which they call heresye, so worshippe I the God of my fathers, that I beleue all that is wrytten in the lawe and in the prophetes, and haue hope towardes God, that the same resurreccion of the deed (which they them selues loke for also) shalbe, both of the just and vniust. Therfore studye I to haue allwaye a cleare conscience towarde God and towarde men."

<sup>6</sup>But after many yeares I came and broughte allmesse vnto my people, and offeringes:‡ whervpon they founde me purifyed in the temple without eny maner of rumoure or vnquyetnesse. Howbeit there were certayne Iewes out of Asia, which shulde be here presente before the, and accuse me, yf they had oughte agaynst me: or els lett these same here saye, yf they haue founde eny vnrighteousnes in me, whyle I stonde here before § councell: excepte it be for this one worde, that I cried stondinge amonge them: § Of the resurreccion off the deed am I iudged of you this daye.

Whan Felix herde this, he dyfferred the (for he knewe very well of that waye) and sayde: Whan Lysias the vpper captayne commeth downe, I wyl knowe y vttemost of youre matter. || But he commaunded the vndercaptayne to kepe Paul, and to let him haue rest, and that he shulde forbydde none of his acquauntauce to mynister vnto him, or to come vnto him.

But after certayne dayes came Felix with his wife Drusilla, which was a Iewesse, and called for Paul, and herde him of the faith in Christ. Howbeit whan Paul spake off righteousnesse, and off chastite and off the iudgment to come, Felix trembled, and answered: Go thy waye for this tyme. Whan I haue a conuenyent tyme, I wil sende for the. He hoped also, that money shulde haue bene geuen him of Paul, therfore called he oft for him, and commened with him. But after two yeares came Portius Festus in to felix rowme. Yet Felix wyllinge to shewe the Iewes a pleasure, left Paul bounde.

The rrb. Chapter.

NOW whan Festus was come in to the countre, ouer thre dayes he wente vp from Cesarea to Ierusalem. Then appeared the hye prestes and the chefe of the Iewes before him agaynst Paul, and intreated him, and desyred fauoure agaynst him, that he wolde sende for him to Ierusalem, and layed wayte for him, that they might slaye him by the waye. Then answered Festus, that Paul shulde be kepte at Cesarea, but that he himselfe wolde shortly go thither agayne. Let them therfore (sayde he) which are able amonge you, come downe with vs to accuse the man, yf there be ought in him.

Whan he had taried amonge them more then ten dayes, he wente downe to Cesarea. And on the nexte daye he sat downe on the iudgment seate, and commaunded Paul to be broughte. Whan he was come,  $\hat{y}$  lewes which were come downe from Ierusalem, stode rounde aboute him, and broughte vp many and greuous quarels agaynst Paul, which they coulde not proue, whyle he answered for himselfe: I haue nether offended ought agaynst the lawe of the Iewes, ner agaynst the teple, ner agaynst the Emperoure.

moch as the haue was not comodious to wynter in, the more parte off them toke councell to departe thece, yf by eny meanes they might come to Phenices to wynter there, which is an hauen of Candy, towarde the Southwest and Northwest wynde. Whan the South wynde blewe, they supposinge to have had their purpose, lowsed vnto Asson, and sayled past all Candy.

But not longe after, there rose agaynst their purpose a flawe of wynde, which is called the Northeast. And whan the shippe was caught, and coulde not resist y wynde, we let her go, and draue with the wedder. But we came to an Ile named Claudia, where we coulde scarce get a bote. Which they toke vp, and vsed helpe, and bounde it vnder harde to the shippe, fearinge lest they shulde have fallen in to the * Syrtes, and let downe the vessell, and so were caried. And whan we had bydden a greate tepest, on the nexte daye they made an outcastinge. And on the thirde daye with oure awne handes we cast out the tacklynge of the shippe. But wha nether Some ner starres appeared in many dayes, and no small tempest laye vpon vs, all the hope of oure life was taken awaye.

C And after longe abstinence, Paul stode forth in the myddes of the, and sayde: Syrs, ye shulde haue herkened vnto me, and not to haue lowsed from Candy, and not to haue broughte vs this harme and losse. And now I exhorte you to be of good cheare, for there shal none of our lyues perishe, but the shippe onely.

For this night stode by me the angell off God (whose I am, a who I serue) a saide: Feare not Paul, thou must be broughte before the Emperoure. And lo, God hath geuen vn to the all the that sayle with the. Wherfore syrs be of good cheare: for I beleue God, y it shal come so to passe, as it was tolde me. Howbeit we must be cast in to a certayne ylonde.

But whan the fourtenth night came, as we were caried in Adria aboute mydnight, y shipmen demed that there appeared some countre vnto them, and they cast out the leade, and founde it twetve feddoms: and what they were gone a litle farther, they cast out the leade agayne, and founde fyftene feddoms.

Then fearinge lest they shulde fall on some Ð rocke, they cast foure anckers out of the sterne, and wyszhed for the daye. Whan the shipmen were aboute to flye out of the shippe, and let downe the bote in to the see, (vnder a coloure as though they wolde cast ankers out of the fore shippe) Paul sayde to y vndercaptayne and to the soudyers : Excepte these byde in the shippe, ye can not be saued. Then the soudyers cut of the rope from the bote, and let it fall. And whan it beganne to be daye, Paul exhorted them all to take meate, and sayde: To daye is the fourtene daye that ye haue taried and contynued fastinge, and haue receaued nothinge: Wherfore I praye you to take meate, for youre health: "for there shal not one heer fall from the heade of eny of you. And whan they had take vp the anckers, they commytted them selues to the see, and lowsed the rudder bandes, and hoyssed vp the mayne sayle to the wynde, and drue towarde londe. And whan we chaunced on a place which had the see on both the sydes, the shippe daszhed And the fore parte abode fast vpon it. vnmoued, but the hynder parte brake thorow the violence of the wawes.

The soudyers councell was to kyll v presoners, lest eny of them whan he had swymmed out, shulde flye awaye. But the vndercaptayne wyllinge to saue Paul, keped them from their purpose, and commaunded that they which coulde swymme, shulde cast them selues first in to the see, and escape vnto londe : and the other, some on bordes, some on broken peces of the shippe. And so it came to passe, that all the soules came safe vnto londe.

The rrbiij. Chapter.

ND wha we were escaped, we knewe a that the Ile was called Melite. As for the people, they shewed vs no litle kyndnesse:

for they kyndled a fyre, and receaued vs all because of the rayne that was come vpo vs, and because of the colde. Whan Paul had gathered a bondell of stickes, and layed them on the fyre, there came a vyper out of the heate, and leape on Pauls hande. Whan the people sawe the beest hange on his hande, they sayde amonge them selues: This man must nedes be a murthurer, who vengeaunce suffreth not to lyue, though he haue escaped the see. But he shoke of y beest in to the fyre, *and felt no harme. Howbeit they wayted, whā he shulde haue swollen, or fallen downe deed sodenly. But whan they had loked a greate whyle, and sawe y there happened no harme vnto him, they chaunged their myndes, and sayde that he was a God.

In the same quarters the chefe man of the Ile whose name was Publius had a lordshipe : the same receaued vs, and lodged vs thre dayes curteously. It fortuned whā Publius father laye sicke of the feuers and of a bloudy fluxe, Paul wente in vnto him, and prayed, and layed the handes on him, and healed him.

Whan this was done, other also which had diseases in the Ile, came, and were healed. And they dyd vs greate honoure. And whan we departed, they laded vs with thinges necessary.

After thre monethes we sayled in a shippe of Alexandria, which had wyntred in the Ile, and had a badge of Castor and Pollux. And whan we came to Syracusa, we taried there thre dayes. And whan we had sayled aboute, we came to Rhegium: and after one daye whan the south wynde blewe, we came to Putiolus, where we founde brethre and were desyred of them to tarye there seuē dayes, and so came we to Rome. And from thence whan the brethren herde of vs, they came forth to mete vs to Apiforum and to the Thre tauerns. Whan Paul sawe them, he thaked God, and waxed bolde. But wha we came to Rome, the vnder captayne delyuered the presoners to y chefe captayne. As for Paul, he had leue to byde alone with one soudyer that kepte him.

Chap. I.

Paul declareth his loue towarde the Romaynes, sheweth what the gospell is with the frute therof, and rebuketh the beestlynesse of the flesh.

Chap. II.

He rebuketh the Iewes, which as touchinge synne are like the Heyths, yee worse then they.

Chap. III.

He sheweth what preferment the Iewes haue, and that both the Iewes and Getiles are vnder synne, and are iustified only by the grace of God in Christ.

Chap. IIII.

He declareth by the exaple of Abraha, that faith iustifieth, and not the lawe, ner the workes therof.

Chap. V.

The power of faith, hope, and loue: and how death raigned fro Adā vnto Christ, by who only we haue forgeuenesse of synnes.

Chap. VI.

For so moch as we be delyuered thorow christ from synne, we must fashion oure selues to lyue as the seruauntes of God, and not after oure awne lustes. The vnlike rewarde of righteousnes and synne.

Chap. VII.

Christ hath delyucred vs from the lawe and death. Paul showeth what the flesh and outwarde man is, and calleth it the lawe of the membres.

Chap. VIII.

The lawe of the sprete geueth life. The sprete of God maketh vs Gods children and heyres with Christ. The abundaunt loue of God can not be separated.

Chap. IX.

Paul complayneth vpon the hard hertes of the lewes, that wolde not receaue Christ, and how the Heythē are chosen in their steade.

Chap. X.

The vnfaithfulnes of the lewes. Two maner of righteousnesses.

Chap. XI.

All the Iewes are not cast awaye, therfore Paul warneth the Gentiles that be called, not to be hye mynded, ner to despyse the Iewes, for the iudgmetes of God are depe and secrete.

Chap. XII.

The swete conuersacion, loue, and workes of soch as beleue in Christ.

Chap. XIII.

The obedience of men vnto their rulers. Loue fulfilleth the lawe. It is now no tyme to folowe the workes of darknesse.

Chap. XIIII.

The weake ought not to be despysed. No man shulde offende anothers conscience. Agayne, for outward thinges shulde no man condemne another.

Chap. XV.

The infirmite and fraylnesse of the weake ought to be borne with all louc and kyndnesse, after the ensample of Christ.

To all you that be at Rome, beloued of God, and sayntes by callynge || Grace be with you and peace fro God oure father, and the LORDE Iesus Christ.

First, I thanke my God thorow Iesus Christ for you all, that youre faith is spoken of thorow out all the worlde. For God is my witnesse (¶whom I serue in my sprete in the Gospell of his sonne) that without ceassynge I make mencion of you ** besekinge allwayes in my prayers, that I mighte once haue a prosperous iourney (++ by the will off God) to come vnto you. For I longe to se you, that I mighte bestowe vpon you some spirituall gifte to strēgth you (that is) that I mighte be conforted with you, thorow youre faith g myne, which we haue together.

But I wolde ye shulde knowe (brethren) how that I haue often tymes purposed to come vnto you (but haue bene ## let hither to)

WHAT furtheraunce then have the a l Iewes? Or what avauntageth circucision? Surely very moch. First + Vnto them was commytted what God spake. But where as some of them dyd not beleue theron, what then? shulde their vnbeleue make the promes of God of none effecte? God forbyd. Let it rather be thus, that 'God is true, ' and all me lyers. As it is wrytten: That thou mayest be iustified in thy sayenges, and shuldest ouercome, wha thou art iudged.

But yf it be so, that our vnrighteousnes prayseth y righteousnes of God, what shal we saye? Is God then vnrighteous, that he is angrie therfore? (I speake thus after the maner off men) God forbyd. How mighte God the iudge y worlde? For yf the trueth of God be thorow my lye the more excellent vnto his prayse, why shulde I the be iudged yet as a synner? g not rather to do thus (as we are euell spoken of, and as some reporte, that we shuld saye) Let vs do euell,  $\dot{y}$  good maye come therof. Whose danacio is juste.

What saye we then? Are we better then they? No, in no wyse: for we have proved afore, y both the lewes and Grekes are all vnder synne. 'As it is wrytte: There is none righteous, no not one. There is none v vnderstondeth, there is none that seketh after God. For here is no difference. For they are all  $|\mathcal{C}|$ synners, and wate the prayse that God shulde haue of the, but without deservynge are they made righteous eue by his grace, thorow the redempcion that is done by Christ Iesu, whom God hath set forth for a ‡‡ Mercy seate thorow faith in his bloude, to shewe the righteousnes which avayleth before him, in that he forgeueth the synnes, which were done before vnder the sufferaunce of God, which he suffred, that at this tyme he might shewe vrighteousnes which avayleth before him: y he onely mighte be righteous, g the righteous maker of him which is of the faith on Iesus.

Where is now then thy reioysinge? It is excluded. By what lawe? By the lawe of workes? Nay, but by the lawe of faith. We holde therfore that a man is justified \$\$ by faith, without the workes of the lawe. Or is God the God of the Iewes onely? Is he not also the God of the Heythen? dyd fynde? This we saye: Yf Abraham were made righteous thorow workes, then hath he wherin to reioyse, but not before God. But what sayeth y scripture ?\* Abrahā beleued God,  $\mathfrak{g}$  y was counted vnto him for righteousnes. Vnto  $h\bar{i}$  y goeth aboute with workes, is the rewarde not rekened of fauoure, but of dutye: Howbeit vnto him, y goeth not aboute with workes, but beleueth on him y iustifieth the vngodly, is his faith counted for righteousnes. Euen as Dauid sayeth also, that blessednes is onely that mans, vnto who God counteth righteousnes without addinge to of workes, where he sayeth: "Blessed are they, whose vnrighteousnesses are forgeuen, and whose synnes are couered. Blessed is the man, vnto whom the LORDE imputeth no synne.

Now this blessednes, goeth it ouer the cir-36 cūcision, or ouer the vncircumcision? We must nedes graunte, y Abrahās faith was couted vnto hi for righteousnes. How was it the rekened vnto him? In the circucision, or in the vncircumcision? Doutles † not in the circucision, but in the vncircumcision. As for the toke of circucision the receaued it for a seale off the righteousnes off faith, which he had yet in y vncircūsion, y he shulde be a father of all the y beleue, beinge in y vncircūcisio, y it might be couted vnto the also for righteousnes: a that he might be a father of circumcision, not onely of the that are of y circumcision, but of them also that walke in the fotesteppes of the faith, which was in the vncircumcision of oure father Abraham. that are fleshlye, they can not please God. Howbeit ye are not fleshly, but goostly, yf so be that the sprete of God dwell in you. But who so hath not the sprete of Christ, the same is not his. Neuertheles yf Christ be in you, then is the body deed because of synne. But the sprete is life for righteousnes sake.

36 Wherfore yf the sprete of him, that raysed vp Iesus from the deed, dwell in you, then shal euen he also that raysed vp Christ from the deed, quycke youre mortal bodies, because y his sprete dwelleth in you. Therfore brethrë we are now detters, not to the flesh, to lyue after the flesh : for yf ye lyue after  $\hat{y}$ fleshe, ye must dye: but yf ye mortyfye the dedes of the body thorow the sprete, ye shal lyue. For who so euer are led by the sprete of God, are Gods childre:" for ye haue not receaued the sprete of bondage to feare eny more, but ye haue receaued y sprete of adopcion, wherby we crye: Abba, deare father.\* The same sprete certifieth oure sprete, that we are the childre of God. Yf we be childre, then are we heyres also, namely the heyres of God, and heyres annexed with Christ, yf so be that we suffer together, that we may be also glorified together.

C For I suppose, that the affliccions off this tynie, 'are not worthy of y glorye, which shalbe shewed vpon vs. + For the feruent loginge of  $\psi$  creature loketh for the appearinge of the children of God, because the creature is subdued vnto vanyte agaynst hir will, but for his wyll that hath subdued her vpon hope. For the creature also shal be fre from the bondage of corrupcion, vnto the glorious libertye of the childre of God. For we knowe, that euery creature groneth, and ‡ trauayleth with vs in payne vnto the same tyme.

Not they only, but we oure selues also, which haue the first frutes of the sprete, grone within in oure selues for the childshippe, and loke for y delyueraunce of oure bodye. For we are saued ī dede, howbeit ī hope: but y hope that is sene, is no hope: for how can a man hope for that which he seyeth? But yf we hope for that which we se not, the do we thorow pacience abyde for it.

玬 Likewyse the sprete also helpeth oure weaknesse: for we knowe not what we shulde desyre as we oughte: § neuertheles y sprete

Howbeit he y searcheth the hert, knoweth what the mynde of the sprete is: for he maketh intercession for the sayntes acordinge to the pleasure of God. But sure we are, that all thinges serue for the best vnto them that loue of God. which are called of purpose. For those whom he knewe before, hath he ordeyned also before, y they shulde be like fashioned vnto y shappe of his sonne, y he mighte be the first begotte amoge many brethre. As for those whom he hath ordeyned before, them hath he called also: and whom he hath called, the hath he also made righteous: and whom he hath made righteous, them hath he glorified also.

What shal we saye then vnto these thinges? 'Yff God be on oure syde, who can be agaynst Which spared not his owne sonne, but vs. hath geuen him for vs all: how shal he not with him geue vs all thinges also? Who wyl laye eny thinge to y charge of Gods chosen? Here is God that maketh righteous, who wil then condemne? Here is Christ that is deed, yee rather which is raysed vp agayne, which is also on § righte hande of God, and maketh intercession for vs.

Who will separate vs from the loue of God? Trouble? or anguysh? or persecucio? or honger? or nakednesse? or parell? or swerde? As it is wrytten: <sup>d</sup> For thy sake are we kylled all the daye longe, we are counted as shepe appoynted to be slayne. Neuerthelesse in all these thinges we ouercome farre, for his sake that loued vs. For sure I am, that nether death ner life, nether angell, ner rule, nether power, nether thinges present, nether thinges to come, nether heyth, ner loweth, nether eny other creature shalbe able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesu oure LORDE.

PAUL, called to be an Apostle of Iesus Christ thorow ŷ will of God, and brother * Sosthenes, vnto the congregacion off God which is at Corinthum, to them that are † sanctified in Christ Iesus, sayntes by callinge, with all them that call vpon the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, in euery place both off theirs and oures. ‡ Grace be with you and peace from God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

I thāke my God allwayes on youre behalfe, for the fauoure of God which is geuē you in Iesus Christ, that in all poyntes ye are made ryche by him, in euery worde, and in all maner of knowlege (euē as  $\hat{y}$  preachinge of Christ is confirmed in you) so that ye wante nothinge in eny gifte, and wayte but for the appearinge of oure LORDE Iesus Christ: which shal strength you also vnto  $\hat{y}$  ende, that ye maye be blamelesse in the daye of oure LORDE Iesus Christ. § For God is faithfull, by whō ye are called vnto the fellishippe of his sonne Iesus Christ oure LORDE.

But I beseke you brethre thorow the name of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, that ye all speake one thinge, and let there be no discension amonge you, but that ye be perfecte in one meanynge. For it is shewed me (my brethren) of you, by them which are of rhousholde of Cloes, that there is stryfe amonge you. I speake of that, which euery one of you sayeth: I holde of Paul. Another, I holde of  $\parallel$  Apollo. The thirde, I holde of Cephas. The fourth, I holde off Christ. Is Christ then deuyded in partes? Was Paul

I thanke God that I haue baptised none of you, but Crispus and Gaius: lest eny shulde saye,  $\mathring{y}$  I in myne awne name had baptised. I baptysed also  $\mathring{y}$  housholde of Stephana. Farthermore knowe I not, whether I baptysed eny other. For Christ sent me not to baptyse, but to preach the Gospell, not with wyszdome of wordes, lest  $\mathring{y}$  crosse of Christ shulde haue bene made of none effecte.

For the worde of  $\mathring{y}$  crosse is foolishnesse  $\mathbb{C}$ to the that perishe "but vnto vs which are saued, it is the power of God. For it is wryttē: \*\* I wyl destroye the wyszdome of the wyse, a wil cast away the vnderstondinge of y prudet. Where are the wyse? Where are y scrybes? where are y disputers of this worlde? But vnto them that are called (both Iewes and Grekes) we preach Christ the power of God and ‡‡ the wyszdome off God.

For the foolishnes of God is wyser then men: and the weaknes of God is ströger the men. The bij. Chapter.

S concernynge the thinges wherof ye A wrote vnto me, I answere: It is good for a man not to touche a woman. Neuertheles to avoyde whordome, let euery man haue his awne wife, and let euery woman haue hir awne huszbande. Let the mā geue vnto the wife due beneuolence: likewyse also the wife vnto y man. The wife hath not power ouer hir awne body, but the huszbande: g likewyse the man hath not power ouer his * Withdrawe not awne body, but the wife. youre selues one fro another, excepte it be with the consent of both for a tyme, that ye maye geue youre selues vnto fastinge and prayer, and the come together agayne, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontynecye. But this I saye of fauoure, and not of commaundemēt. Howbeit I wolde rather y all mē were as I am. Neuertheles euery one hath his proper gifte of God: one thus, another so. To them verely y are vnmaried and to wedowes I saye: It is good for the that they abyde also as I do. + But yf they can not absteyne, let them mary. For it is better to mary, then to burne.

But vnto them that are maried, commaunde not I, but the LORDE, ‡ that the wife separate not her selfe from the huszbande: but yf she separate her selfe, ý she remayne vnmaried, or be reconcyled to hir huszbande: and let not the huszbande put awaye his wife from him.

As for the other, vnto the saye I, not ŷ LORDE: Yf eny brother haue an vnbeleuynge wife, and she is content to dwell with him, let him not put hir awaye. And yf a woman haue an vnbeleuynge huszbande, and he is content to dwell with her, let her not put him awaye. For the vnbeleuynge huszbande is sanctified by the wife, and the vnbeleuynge wife is sanctified by the huszbande: or els were youre children vncleane, but now are they holy. But yf the vnbeleuynge departe, let him departe. A brother or a sister is not boude in soch cases, but God hath called vs in peace. §For what knowest thou O womā, whether thou shalt saue y mā? Or what knowest thou O man, whether thou shalt saue the woman? But euen as God

* Tob. 6. d. and 8. a. Ioel 2. c. † 1 Tim. 5. b. ‡ Mat. 5. d. § 1 Pet. 3. a. || Ephe. 4. a. ¶ 1 Tim. hath distributed vnto euery one and as the LORDE hath called euery man, so let him walke : and so orden I in all congregacions.

Yf eny man be called beynge circumcysed  $|\mathbf{a}|$ let him take no Heythenshippe vpon him. Yf eny man be called in the Heythenshippe, let him not be circumcysed. Circumcision is nothinge, and vncircumcision is nothinge, but the kepynge of the commaundementes of God. Let euery one abyde in the callynge wherin he is called. ¶Art thou called a seruaūt, care not for it: neuertheles yf thou mayest be fre, vse it rather. For he that is called in the LORDE beynge a seruaute, is a fre man of the LORDE. Likewyse he that is called beynge fre, is a seruaūt of Christ. \*\* Ye are dearly boughte, be not ye the seruauntes of men. Brethren let euery one wherin he is called, therin abyde with God.

As concernynge virgins, I haue no commaundement of the LORDE, neuertheles I saye my goodmeanynge, as I haue optayned mercy of the LORDE to be faithfull. I suppose it is good for § present necessite: for it is good for a man so to be. Art thou bounde vnto a wife, seke not to be lowsed: Art thou lowsed fro a wife, seke not a wife. But yf thou take a wife, thou synnest not. And yf a virgin mary, she synneth not. Neuertheles soch shal haue trouble in the fleszhe. But I fauoure you.

Howbeit this I saye brethren: t the tyme is shorte. Farthermore this is the meanynge, t they which haue wyues, be as though they had none: and they that wepe, be as though they wepte not: and they that reioyse, be as though they reioysed not: a they that bye, be as though they possessed not: a they that vse this worlde, be as though they vsed it not. For the faszhion off this worlde passeth awaye. "But I wolde that ye shulde be without care. #He that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, how he maye please the LORDE. But he that is maried, careth for the thinges of the worlde, how he maye please his wife, and is deuyded. woman and a virgin that is syngle, careth for the thinges of the LORDE, that she maye be holy both in body calso in sprete. But she that is maried, careth for y thinges of the worlde, how she maye please hir huszbande.

For in that I preach the Gospell, I neade not boost my selfe, for I must nedes do it. And wo vnto me, yff I preach not the Gospell. Yf I do it with a good wyll, I shal haue my rewarde: but yff I do it agaynst my wyll, yet is the office commytted vnto me. Wherfore the shal I be rewarded? (Namely therfore) that I preach the Gospell, and do the same frely for naughte, that I abuse not my libertye in § Gospell. For though I am fre from all men, yet haue I made my selfe euery mans seruaunt, y I mighte wynne y moo. ‡ Vnto the Iewes I am become as a Iewe, to wynne y Iewes. To them that are vnder the lawe, I am become as though I were vnder the lawe, to wynne them which are vnder the lawe.
- D Vnto them that are without lawe, I am become as though I were without lawe (where as yet I am not without the lawe of God, but am in ŷ lawe of Christ) to wynne thē that are without lawe. To the weake, am I become as weake, to wynne the weake. § I am become of all faszhions vnto euery man, to saue some at ŷ leest. But this I do for the Gospels sake, that I mighte be partaker therof.

Knowe ye not, that they which runne in a course, runne all, yet but one receaueth the rewarde? Runne ye so, that ye maye optayne. Euery one that proueth mastrye, absteyneth from all thinges, and they do it, that they maye optayne a corruptible crowne, but we to optayne an "vncorruptible crowne. I therfore so runne, not as at an vncertayne thinge: So fighte I, not as one ý beateth ý ayre: but I tame my body, and brynge it in to subjeccion, lest whan I preach vn to other: I my selfe be a cast awaye.

Wherfore my dearly beloued, fle from worshippinge of Idols. I speake vnto them which have discrecio, judge ye what I saye. The cuppe of thakesgeuynge wherwith we geue thankes, is it not the partakinge of the bloude of Christ? The bred that we breake, is it not y partakinge of § body of Christ? For we many, are one bred g one body, in as moch as we all are partakers of one bred.

Beholde Israel after the fleszhe. They  $\oint \mathbb{C}$ eate the sacrifices, are they not partakers of the altare? What shal I now saye then ? TT Shal I saye that the Idoll is eny thinge? Or that it which is offred vnto the Idoll is eny thinge? Nay. But this I saye, that loke what the Heythen offre, that offre they vnto deuels, and not vnto God. Now wolde I not Yf eny of the  $\frac{1}{2}$  beleue not, byd you to a feast, and yf ye be disposed to go, what soeuer is set before you, that eate, axinge no question for conscience sake.

But yf eny man saye vnto you: This is offred vnto Idols, the eate not of it, for his sake that shewed it, and for hurtinge of conscience. (The earth is the LORDES and all that therin is.) Neuertheles I speake of t conscience, not thine, but of  $\mathfrak{F}$  other. For why shulde my liberty be iudged of another mas coscience? § For yf I take my parte with thankesgeuynge, why am I euell spoken of, for y thinge wherfore I geue thankes?

■ Therfore whether ye eate or drynke, or what so euer ye do, do all to $ prayse of God. Be not ye an occasion of fallinge, nether to the Iewes, ner to the Gentyles, ner to the congregacion of God, ¶euē as I also please all men in all thinges, not sekinge myne awne profit, but the profit of many, that they mighte be saued. ** Folowe ye me, as I do Christ.

A COMMENDE you brethren, that ye remembre me in all poyntes, and kepe the ordinaunces, euē as I delyuered them vnto you. But I certifye you, that Christ is the heade of euery man. <sup>14</sup> As for § man, he is the heade of § woman, but God is Christes heade. Euery man that prayeth or prophecieth, and hath eny thinge on his heade, shameth his heade. But euery woman that prayeth or prophecieth with vncouered heade, dishonesteth hir heade. For it is euen a lyke moch as yf she were shauen. Yf the womā be not couered, let hir heer also be cut of. But yf it be vncomely for a woman to haue hir heer cut of or to be shauen, then let hir couer hir heade. Neuertheles the man oughte not to couer his heade, ‡ for so moch as he is the ymage and glory of God: but the womā is the glory of the man. § For the man is not of the woman, but the woman of the man. Nether was the man created for the womans sake, but the womā for the mans sake.

Therfore ought the woman to haue a power 18 vpon hir heade, for the angels sakes. Neuertheles nether is the man without & woman, nether the woman without the ma in the LORDE. For as the woman is of the man, euen so commeth the man also by the woman, but all of God. Iudge ye by youre selues, whether it be comly, y a womā prave before God bare headed? Or doth not nature teach you, y it is a shame for a man yf he weere loge heer, a a prayse to y womā, yf she weere loge heer? For hir heer is geue heer to couer her withall. But yf there be eny man amoge you that hath lust to stryue, let him knowe, that we have no soch custome, nether the congregacions of God. But this must I warne you of: I commende it not, that ye come together not after a better maner but after a worse. First, whan ye come together in the congregacion, I heare, that there are discensions amonge you, and I partly beleue it. III For there must be sectes amonge you, that they which are perfecte amonge you, mighte be knowne.

Now whan ye come together, the LORDES a supper can not be kepte. For whan it shulde be kepte, euery ma taketh his awne supper afore. And one is högrie, another is dronke. Haue ye not houses to eate and drynke in? Or despyse ye § cogregacion of God, and shame them that have not? What shal I saye vnto you? Shal I prayse you? in this prayse I you not. That which I delyuered vnto you, receaued I of the LORDE. ¶¶ For the LORDE lesus the same nighte in the which he was betrayed, toke the bred, g gaue thankes, and brake it, and sayde : Take ye, a eate ye, this is my body, which is broken for you. This do in the remembraunce of me. After the same maner also he toke \$ cuppe whan supper was done, and sayde: This cuppe is the new Testament in my bloude, this do (as oft as ye drynke it) in the remēbraūce of nie. For as oft as ye shal eate of this bred,  $\alpha$  drynke of this cuppe, ye shal shewe the LORDES death, vntyll he come.

Wherfore who soeuer shal eate off this bred, 玬 and drynke off this cuppe of the LORDE vnworthely, shalbe giltye of the body and bloude of the LORDE. * But let a man examen himselfe, and so let him eate of this bred, and drynke of this cuppe. For he that eateth and drynketh vnworthely, eateth a drynketh his awne damnacion, because he maketh no difference of the LORDES body. Therfore are there so many weake and sicke amoge you, and many slepe. + For yf we iudged oure selues, we shulde not be iudged. But whan we are iudged, we are chastened of § LORDE, that we shuld not be daned with the ‡ worlde. Wherfore my brethren, whan ye come together to eate, tary one for another. But yf eny man honger, let him eate at home, that ye come not together vnto codempnacion. As for other thinges, I wil set them in order whan I come.

The rij. Chapter.

S concernynge spirituall giftes (brethren) I wolde not that ye were ignoraunt. Ye knowe that ye were Heythē and wente youre wayes vnto dōme Idols, euē as ye were led. Wherfore I declare vnto you, $ that no man speakynge thorow the sprete of God, defyeth Iesus. And no man can saye that Iesus is the LORDE, but by the holy goost.

There are dyuerse giftes, yet but one sprete: and there are dyuerse offices, yet but one LORDE: and there are dyuerse operacions || yet is there but one God, which worketh all in all. The giftes of the sprete are geuen vnto euery man to profit the cogregacion. To one is geuen thorow the sprete the vtteraunce of wiszdome: to another is geuen the vtteraunce of knowlege acordinge to the same sprete: to another, faith in the same sprete: to another, the giftes of healinge in the same sprete: to another, power to do miracles: to another, prophecienge: to another, ¶iudgment to discerne spretes: to another, dyuerse tunges: to another, the interpretacion of tunges. These all doth  $\oint$  same onely sprete worke, and distributeth vnto euery man, acordinge as he will.

<sup>b</sup> For as the body is one, and hath yet many B membres, neuertheles all the membres of the body though they be many, are yet but one body: euen so Christ also. For we are all baptysed in one sprete to be one body, whether we be Iewes or Gentyles, whether we be bonde or fre, and haue all \*\*dronke of one sprete. For the body also is not one membre, but many. Yf the fote save: I am not  $\hat{v}$  hande, therfore I am not a membre of the body, is he therfore not a membre of v body? And yf the eare saye: I am not the eye, therfore am I not a membre of the body, is he therfore not a membre of the body? Yf all the body were an eye, where were then the hearinge? Yf all were hearinge, where then the smellinge? But now hath God set the membres, euery one seuerally in the body, as it hath pleased him. Neuertheles yf all the mebres were one membre, where were then the body? But now are the membres many, yet is the body but one.

The eye can not saye vnto the hande: I C haue no nede of the: or agayne the heade vnto the fete, I haue no nede of you: but rather a greate deale the mebres of the body which seme to be most feble, are most necessary: and vpon those membres of the body which we thinke least honest, put we most honestie on : and oure vncomly partes haue most beutye on. For oure honest membres neade it not. But God hath so measured $ body, and geuen most honoure vnto that mebre which had nede, that there shuld be no stryfe in the body, but that the membres shulde indifferently care one for another. And yf one membre suffre, all the membres suffre with him : and yf one membre be had in honoure, all the membres are glad with him also. But ye are the body of Christ, and membres, euery one of another.

And God hath ordeyned in the congregacion, first the *tt*Apostles, secodly prophetes, thirdly *tt*eachers, then doers of miracles, after that the giftes of healinge, helpers, gouerners, dyuerse tunges. Are they all Apostles? Are they all prophetes? Are they all teachers? Are they all doers of miracles? Haue they but to them that beleue not. Contrary wyse, prophecienge, not to them that beleue not, but to them which beleue.

Yf the whole cogregacion now came to-Ð gether in to one place, g spake all with tunges, and there came in they that are vnlearned, or they which beleue not, shulde they not saye, that ye were out of youre wyttes? But yff all prophecied, and there came in one y beleueth not, or one vnlerned, he shulde be rebuked of them all, and judged of all, and so shulde the secrete of his hert be opened, and so shulde he fall downe vpon his face, worshippinge God, and knowleginge, that of a trueth God is in you. How is it then brethren? Whan ye come together, euery one hath a psalme, hath doctryne, hath a tunge, hath a reuelacion, hath an interpretacion. Let all Yf eny ma speake be done to edifyenge. with tunges, let him do it him selfe beynge the seconde, or at the most him selfe beynge y thirde, and one after another, and let one interprete it. But yf there be not an interpreter, then let him kepe sylence in the congregacion, howbeit let him speake to himselfe and to God. As for the prophetes, let two or thre speake * and let the other iudge. But yf eny reuelacion be made vnto another that sytteth, then let the first holde his peace. Æ

Ye maye all prophecye one after another that they all maye lerne, and that all maye haue comforte. And the spretes of the prophetes are subjecte vnto the prophetes. For God is not a God off discension, t but off peace, like as in all congregacions off the sayntes. ‡ Let youre wyues kepe sylence in the cogregation, for it shal not be permytted vnto the to speake, but to be vnder obedience, ∮as ÿ lawe sayeth also. But yf they wyll lerne eny thinge, let them axe their huszbades at home. For it becommeth not wemē to speake in the congregacion. Or spronge the worde of God from amonge you? Or is it come vnto you onely? Yf eny man thynke himselfe to be a prophet, or spirituall, let him knowe what I wryte vnto you, for they are the commaundementes of the LORDE. But yf eny man be ignoraunt, let him be ignoraunt. Wherfore brethren, couet to prophecye, and forbyd not to speake with tunges. Let all thinges be done honestly and in order.

The rb. Chapter. DECLARE vnto you brethren, the Gospell that I haue preached vnto you (which ye have also accepted, and in the which ye stode, by the which also ye are saued) after what maner I preached it vnto you, yf ye haue kepte it, excepte ye haue beleued in vayne. For first of all I delyuered vnto you that which I also receaued, how that Christ dyed for oure synnes acordinge to the scriptures, and that he was buried, and that he rose agayne \$ thirde daye acordinge to the scriptures, and that he was sene of Cephas, then of the twolue: after that was he sene of mo then fyue hundreth brethren at once, wherof there are yet many alyue, but some are fallen aslepe. Afterwarde was he sene of Iames, then of all the Apostles. Last of all was he sene of me also, as of one borne out of due tyme. IFor I am  $\psi$  leest of the Apostles, which am not worthy to be called an Apostle, ¶because I persecuted the congregacion of God. But by the grace of God I am that I am. And his grace in me hath not bene 🖪 vayne, but I haue laboured more then they all: howbeit not I but the grace of God which is with me. Now whether it be I or they, thus haue we preached, and thus haue ye beleued.

But yf Christ be preached, that he is rysen from the deed, how saye then some amoge you, that there is no resurreccion of the deed? Yf there be no resurreccio of the deed, then is Christ not rysen. Yf Christ be not rysen, then is oure preachinge in vayne, and youre faith is also in vayne: yee and we are founde false witnesses of God, because we haue testified agaynst God, that he hath raysed vp Christ, whom he hath not raysed vp, yf the deed ryse not agayne. For yf the deed ryse not agayne, the is Christ also not rysen agayne. But yf Christ be not rysen agayne, then is youre faith in vayne, and ye are yet in youre synnes: they also that are falle a slepe in Christ, are perished. Yf in this life onely we hope on Christ, then are we of all men the most miserable.

But now is Christ rysen from the deed, and  $\mathfrak{C}$  is become \*\* $\overset{}{y}$  first frutes of them that slepe. For by one man commeth death, and by one man the resurrection of the deed. For as they all dye in Adam, so shal they all be made alvue in Christ, but euery one in his order. The first is Christ, then they that beloge vnto Christ, whan he commeth. Then the ende, wha he shal delyuer vp the kyngdome vnto God the father, whan he shal put downe all rule, and all superiorite, a power. \* For he must raygne, tyll he haue put all his cnemies vnder his fete. The last enemye that shal be destroyed, is death, for he hath put all thinges vnder his fete. But wha he sayeth, that all thinges are put vnder him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which put all thinges vnder him. Whan all thinges shalbe subdued vntó him, then shal the sonne himselfe also be subjecte vnto him, which put all thinges vnder him, that God maye be all in all.

Or els what do they which are baptised ouer ŷ deed, yf the deed ryse not at all? Why are they then baptysed ouer the deed? And why stonde we in ioperdy euery houre? By oure reioysinge which 1 haue in Christ Iesu oure LORDE, I dye daylie. That I haue foughte with beestes at Ephesus after ŷ maner of men, what helpeth it me, yf the deed ryse not agayne? * Let vs eate and drynke, for tomorow we shal dye. Be not ye disceaued. Euell speakinges corruppe good maners. Awake righte vp, and synne not: for some haue not ŷ knowlege of God. This I saye to youre shame.

But some man mighte saye: How shal the deed aryse? And with what maner off body shal they come? Thou foole,  $\ddagger \mathring{y}$  which thou sowest is not quyckened, excepte it dye. And what sowest thou? thou sowest not  $\mathring{y}$  body that shalbe, but a bare corne, namely of wheate, or of some other. But God geueth it a body as he wil, and vnto euery one of  $\mathring{y}$  sedes his owne body.

All fleszhe is not one maner of fleszhe, but there is one maner fleszhe of men, another of beastes, another of fiszhes, another of byrdes. And there are heauenly bodies, and there are earthy bodies: but the heauenly haue one glory, and ŷ earthy another. The Sonne hath one clearnes, the Moone hath another clearnesse, and the starres haue another clearnesse, for one starre excelleth another in clearnesse : Euen so the resurreccion of the deed. It is sowne in corrupcion, and shal ryse in vncorrupcion: It is sowne in dishonoure,  $\mathfrak{a}$  shal ryse in glory: It is sowne in weaknesse, and shal ryse in power: It is sowne a naturall body,  $\mathfrak{a}$  shal ryse a spirituall body.

Yf there be a naturall body, there is a spirituall body also. As it is wrytten: § The first man Adam was made in to a naturall life, and the last Adā in to a spiritual life. Howbeit the spirituall body is not the first, but y naturall, and then the spirituall. The first man is of the earth, earthy: y seconde mā is fro heaue, heauely. As the earthy is, soch are they also that are earthy: and as  $\hat{\mathbf{v}}$ heauenly is, soch are they also y are heauenly. And as we have borne the ymage of the earthy, so shal we beare the ymage of the heauenly also. This I saye brethren, that flesh g bloude can not inheret y kyngdome of God: nether shal corrupcion inheret vncorrupcion.

Beholde, I saye vnto you a mystery : || We JF shal not all slepe, but we shal all T be chaunged, and that sodenly and in the twinklynge of an eye, at the tyme of the last trompe. For the trompe shal blowe, and the deed shal ryse vncorruptible, and we shalbe chaunged. For this corruptible must put on vncorrupcion, and this mortall must put on immortalite. But whan this corruptible shal put on vncorrupcion, and this mortall shal put on immortalite, the shal the worde be fulfylled that is wrytte: Death is swalowed vp in victory. ** Death, where is thy stynge? Hell, where is thy victory? The stynge of death is synne: The strength of synne is the lawe. But thankes be vnto God,++ which hath geuē vs the victory thorow oure LORDE Icsus Therfore my deare brethre, be ye Christ. stedfast, vnmoueable, g allwaye riche in the worke of the LORDE, for as moch as ye, knowe, that yourc laboure is not in vayne in the LORDE.

The seconde Epistle

of the Apostle S. Paul, to the Corinthians.

The first Chapter.

AUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ, by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. Vnto the congregacion of God which is at Corinthū, with all the sayntes which are ī all Achaia. * Grace be with you, and peace frō God oure father, and from the LORDE Iesus Christ.

Blessed be God the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, the father of mercy and y God of all comforte, which comforteth vs in all oure trouble: in so moch y we are able to comforte them that are in eny maner of trouble, with the same comforte wherwith we oure selues are comforted of God. For as the affliccios of Christ are plenteous in vs, euen so is oure cosolacion plenteous by Christ. But whether we have trouble or comforte, it is done for youre welth. Yf it be trouble, it is done for youre coforte and health, which health sheweth hir power, in that ye suffre the same affliccions which we suffre. Yf it be comforte, it is done also for youre comforte and health. Therfore is oure hope fast for you, in as moch as we knowe, that, like as ye are partakers of the affliccios, so shal ye be partakers also of the consolacion.

Brethren we wolde not haue you ignoraunt of oure trouble, † which happened vnto vs in Asia, for we were greued out off measure passynge strength, so that we euen dispared of life, and had concluded in oure selues †y we must nedes dye. But this was done, because we shulde not put oure trust in oure selues, but in God, which rayseth vp the deed to life agayne: which delyuered vs from so

For oure reioysinge is this, euen the testimony of oure conscience, that in synglenes  $\mathfrak{g}$ godly purenesse, not in fleshlye wyszdome, but in the grace of God, we haue had oure conuersacion in the worlde, but most of all with you. For we wryte nothinge els vnto you, then that ye rede and also knowe. Yee  $\mathfrak{g}$  I trust that ye shal fynde vs vnto the ende, euen as ye haue founde vs partly.

For we are youre reioysinge, euē as ye also are oure § reioysinge in § daye of the LORDE Iesus. And in this confidence was I mynded the other tyme to come vnto you (that ye mighte haue yet another pleasure more) g to passe by you in to Macedonia, g to come againe out of Macedonia vnto you g to be led forth to Iewrye warde of you.

Whan I thus wyse was mynded, dyd I vse lightnesse? Or are my thoughtes fleshly? Not so || but with me yee is yee, and nay is naye. O faitfull God, that oure worde vnto you hath not bene yee and naye. For Gods sonne Iesus Christ, which was preached amonge you by vs (namely, by me and Siluanus and Timotheus) was not yee and naye, but in him it was yee. For all the promyses of God are yee in him, g are Amē in him, to the prayse of God by vs. But it is God which stablysheth vs with you in Christ, and hath anoynted us, 'and sealed us, and geuen the ernest of the sprete in oure hertes.

The ij. Chapter.

DUT I call God to recorde vnto my soule, A D that to fauoure you" withall I came not agayne vnto Corinthum. Not that we are * lordes ouer youre faith, but we are helpers of youre ioye, for ye stonde in faith. But I determyned this with my selfe, that I wolde not come agayne to you in heuynes. For yf I make you sory, who is it that shal make me glad, but the same which is made sory by me? And the same haue I wrytten vnto you, lest wha I come, I shulde take heuvnes of them, of whom I oughte to reioyse : for somoch as I have this confidence in you all, that my ioye is the ioye of you all. For in greate trouble and anguysh of hert wrote I vnto you with many teares: not v ve shulde be sory, but that ye mighte perceaue the loue, which I haue most specially vnto you.

But yf eny man haue caused sorowe, the B same hath not made me sory, but partely, lest I shulde groue you all. It is sufficient, that the same man is so rebuked of many, so that from hence forth ye oughte the more to forgeue him and to comforte him, lest he be swalowed vp in ouer moch heuvnesse. Wherfore I exhorte you, that ye shewe loue vpo him. For therfore dyd I wryte vnto you also, that I mighte knowe the profe of you, whether ye were obediet in all thinges. But loke vnto who ye forgeue eny thinge, I forgeue hi also. For I also, yf I forgeue ought vnto eny ma, that forgeue I for youre sakes in the rowme of Christ, lest we shulde be preuented of Sathan.

For his thoughtes are not vnknowne vnto vs. But whā I came to  $\ddagger$  Troada to preach  $\mathring{y}$ Gospell of Christ (and a dore was opened vnto me in  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE) I had no rest in my sprete, because I founde not Titus my brother: but I toke my leue of them, and wente awaye in to Macedonia. Yet thankes be vnto God, which allwaye geueth vs the victory in Christ, and openeth  $\mathring{y}$  sauoure of his knowlege by vs in euery place. For we are vnto God the good sauoure of Christ, both amonge the  $\mathring{y}$  are saued,  $\mathfrak{q}$  amonge them  $\mathring{y}$  perishe. To these,  $\mathring{y}$  sauoure of death vnto death : but vnto  $\mathring{y}$ other, the sauoure of life vnto life. And who is mete therto? For we are not as many are, DEGYNNE we then agayne to prayse oure Selues? Or nede we (as some other) of pistles of commedacion vnto you or letters of commedacion from you? Ye are oure epistle wrytten in oure hertes: which is vnderstonde and red of all mē, in that ye are knowne, how that ye are y epistle of Christ, mynistred by vs, and wrytte, not with ynke, but with the sprete of the lyuynge God:¶ not in tables of stone,\*\* but in fleshy tables of the hert. Soch trust haue we thorow Christ to God warde, not that we are sufficient of oure selues to thynke eny thinge, as of oure selues, # but oure ablenesse commeth of God, which hath made vs able, to be ## mynisters of the new Testament: not of the letter, but of the sprete. For the letter kylleth, but the sprete geueth life.

But yf the mynistracion  $\mathring{y}$  kylleth thorow 13the letter, and was figured in stones, was glorious, \$ so that the childrë of Israel mighte not beholde the face of Moses, for  $\mathring{y}$  clearnesse of his countenauce, (which glory neuertheles is done awaye) how shal not  $\mathring{y}$  mynistracion of  $\mathring{y}$  sprete be moch more glorious? For yf the office that preacheth damnacion be glorious, moch more doth the office that preacheth righteousnes exceade in glory. For  $\mathring{y}$  other parte that was glorified is nothinge glorified in respecte of this exceadinge glory. For yf that which is done awaye, be glorious, moch more shal  $\mathring{y}$  which remayneth, be glorious.

Seynge then that we haue soch trust, we vse greate boldnesse, and do not as Moses,  $\|\|\|$ which put a vayle before his face, so that  $\hat{y}$ children of Israel mighte not se the  $\P\P$  ende of it, that is done awaye. But now I reioyce, not that ye were sory, but that ye were sory to repentaunce. For ye sorowed godly, so that in nothinge ye were hurte by vs. For godly sorowe causeth repentaunce vnto saluacion, not to be repented of: \* but worldly sorowe causeth death. # The Epistle # of the Apostle S. Paul to the Galathians.

The first Chapter.

AUL an Apostle (not of men, nor by mā, but by Iesus Christ g by God the father, which raysed him vp frö § deed) g all the brethrē which are with me. Vnto the cögregacios in Galacia. * Grace be with you, and peace frö God the father, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ, which gaue him selfe for oure synnes, that he mighte delyuer vs from this present euel worlde, acordinge to the wyll of God oure father, to whom be prayse for euer and euer. Amen.

I maruell y ye are so soone turned (from him that called you in the grace of Christ) vnto another Gospell: which is nothinge els, but that there be some, which *t*rouble you, and intende to peruerte the Gospell of Christ.

Neuertheles though we oure selues, or an angell from heauē preach vnto you eny other Gospel, thē ý which we haue preached vnto you, the same be acursed. As we haue sayde afore, so saye we now agayne: Yf eny mā preach vnto you eny other thinge, thē ý ye haue receaued,  $\hat{y}$  same be acursed. Preach I men now or God? Or go I aboute to please men? Yf I shulde yet please men, I were not the seruaunt of Christ.

But I certifye you brethren,  $\frac{1}{2}$  the Gospell which is preached of me, is not of men. For I nether receaued it ner lerned it of mã, but by the reuelacion of Iesus Christ. For ye haue herde of my conuersacion afore tyme in the Ieweshippe, thow that beyode measure I persecuted the corregacion of God, and spoyled it, and preuayled in the Ieweshippe aboue many of my companyons in my nacion.

2 Cor. 1. a. Ephe. 1. a. 1 Pet. 1. a. † Act. 15. a. † Act. 8. a. 9. a. § 2 Cor. 11. d. a was a moch more feruent manteyner of the tradicions of the fathers.

But whan it pleased God which separated me fro my mothers wombe, and called me by his grace, for to declare his sonne in me, that I shulde preach him thorow the Gospell amonge the Heythen, immediatly I commened not of the matter with flesh and bloude: nether came I to Ierusalem vnto them which were Apostles before me: but wente my wayes in to Arabia, and came agayne to Damascon. Then after thre yeare I came to Ierusalē to se Peter, and abode with him fyftene dayes. As for the other Apostles, I sawe none of them, saue Iames the LORDES brother.

The thinges that I wryte vnto you, beholde, § God knoweth, I lye not. After that wente I in to the coastes of Syria and Celicia : but of face I was vnknowne to  $\hat{y}$  Christen congregacions in Iewrye. Neuertheles they had herde onely, that : He that persecuted vs in tyme passed, preacheth now  $\hat{y}$  faith which some tyme he destroyed : and they praysed God in me.

The ij. Chapter.

THEN after fourtene yeares, II wente vp agayne to Ierusalē with Barnabas, and toke Titus with me also. But I wente vp by reuelacion, and commened with thē of ÿ Gospell, which I preach amonge the Heythē: but specially with thē which were in reputacion, lest I shulde runne or had runne in vayne. ¶ But Titus which was also with me, was not compelled to be circūcysed, though he was a Greke: and that because of certayne incommers beynge false brethrē, which came in amōge other, to spye out oure libertye, which we haue in Christ Iesus, that they might brynge vs in to bondage: To whom we gaue no rowme, no not for the space of an houre, as concernynge to be broughte in to subjeccion: ý the trueth of the Gospell mighte contynue with you.

As for the that semed to be greate, what they were in tyme passed, it maketh no matter to me. *For God loketh not on the outwarde appearaunce of men. Neuertheles they which semed greate, taught me nothinge: but contrary wyse, whan they sawe that the Gospell ouer the vncircumcision was comytted vnto me, as § Gospell ouer § circucision was commytted vnto Peter. (For he § was mightie with Peter to the Apostleshippe ouer the circumcision, the same was mightie with me also amoge the Heythen) they perceaued the grace that was geuen vnto me.

Iames and Cephas and Ihon, which semed to be pilers, gaue me and Barnabas  $\hat{y}$  righte handes, and agreed with vs, that we shulde preach amonge the Heythē, and they amonge the Iewes: onely that we shulde remēbre the poore, twhich thinge also I was diligent to do.

But wha Peter was come to Antioche, I withstode him in y face: for he was worthy to be blamed. For afore there came certayne from Iames, he ate with the Heythē. But whā they were come, he withdrue and separated himselfe, fearinge the which were of the circumcision. And the other lewes dyssembled with him likewyse, in so moch y Barnabas was brought in to their symulation also. But whan I sawe that they walked not right after y trueth of the Gospell, I sayde vnto Peter openly before all: Yf thou beynge a lewe, lyuest after the maner of the Gentyles, and not as do the lewes, why causest thou the Gentyles then to lyue as do the Iewes?

‡Though we be Iewes by nature, and not synners of the Gentyles, yet (in so moch as we knowe, that a man is not made righteous by the dedes off the lawe, but by the faith on Iesus Christ) we haue beleued also on Iesus Christ, †y we might be made righteous by the faith of Christ, and not by the dedes of the Yf we then which seke to be made righteous by christ, shulde be yet founde synners oure selues, is not Christ then the mynister of synne? God forbyd. For yf I buylde agayne  $\dot{y}$  which I haue destroyed, then make I my selfe a trespacer. But I thorow the lawe am deed vnto the lawe, that I might lyue vnto God. I am crucified with Christ, yet do I lyue: neuerthelesse now not I, but Christ lyueth in me. For  $\dot{y}$  life which I now lyue in  $\dot{y}$  fleszhe, I lyue in the faith of  $\dot{y}$  sonne of God  $\dot{y}$  which loued me, and gaue himselfe for me. I cast not awaye the grace of God. For yf righteousnes come by the lawe, then dyed Christ in vayne.

The iij. Chapter.

YE folishe Galathias, who hath be- A () witched you, that ye shulde not beleue the trueth? To who lesus Christ was descrybed before the eyes and amonge you crucified. This onely wolde I lerne of you: Receaued ye the sprete by the dedes of the lawe, or by the preachinge of the faith? Are ye so vnwyse? Ye beganne in the sprete, wolde ye ende now the in the flesh? Haue ye suffred so moch in vayne? Yf it be els in vayne. He that geueth you the sprete, and doth soch greate actes amöge you, doth he it thorow the dedes of the lawe, or by y preachinge of the faith? || Euen as Abraha beleued God, and it was counted vnto him for right-Thus ye knowe, that they which eousnes. are of faith, are Abrahams children.

The scripture sawe afore hade, that God B iustifieth the Heythen thorow faith. Therfore shewed it glad tydinges afore vnto Abraham, and sayde: ¶ In the shal all the Heythen be blessed. So then they which be of faith, are blessed with faithfull Abraham. For as many as go aboute with the workes of the lawe, are vnder y curse : For it is wrytte : \*\* Cursed be euery man, which cotynueth not in all thinges that are wrytte in the boke of the lawe, to do them. That no man is iustified by the lawe in the sighte of God, it is euydet: '' For y iust shal lyue by his faith. The lawe is not of faith, #but the ma that doth  $\hat{y}$  same, shal lyue therin. But Christ hath delyuered vs from  $\hat{y}$  curse of the lawe, whan he became a curse for vs. (For it is wryttē: \*Cursed is euery man that hangeth on tre)  $\hat{y}$  the blessynge of Abraham mighte come on the Gentyles in Christ Iesu, and  $\hat{y}$ we might so receaue  $\hat{y}$  promysed sprete, thorow faith.

Brethren, I wil speake after the maner of C Though it be but a mas Testamet, men. yet no man despyseth it, or addeth eny thinge therto, twhan it is confirmed. To Abraham and his sede were the promyses made. He sayeth not: In the sedes, as in many, but in thy sede, as in one, which is Christ. This Testament (I saye) which afore was confirmed to Christ warde, is not disanulled (that the promes shulde be made of none affecte) by the lawe‡ which was geuen beyonde foure hundreth a thirtie yeares therafter. SFor yf the enheritaunce be gotten by the lawe, then is it not geuen by promes. But God gaue it frely vnto Abraham by promes.

Wherfore the serueth the lawe? || It was added because of transgression, tyll the sede came, to the which the promes was made. ¶And it was geuen of angels, by the hande of the **mediatoure. A mediatour is not a mediatour of one onely, but God is one. Is the lawe then agaynst the promyses of God? God forbyd. Howbeit yf there had bene geuen a lawe which coulde haue geuē life, the no doute righteousnes shulde come of the lawe. #But y scripture hath shut vp all vnder synne, that y promes shulde come by the faith on Iesus Christ, geue vnto the that beleue. Before faith came, we were kepte and shut vp vnder the lawe, vnto the faith which shulde afterwarde be declared. Thus 🖞 lawe was oure scolemaster vnto Christ, that we might be made righteous by faith. But now that faith is come, we are nomore vnder the scolemaster. #For ye all are the children of God by the faith in Christ Iesu. $9 For as many of you as are baptysed, haue put on Christ. Here is nether Iewe ner Greke: here is nether bode ner fre: here is nether man ner woman, for ye are all III one in Christ Lesu. Yf ye be Christes, the are ye Abrahas sede and heyres acordynge to the promes.

The iiif. Chapter. DUT I saye: As longe as the heyre is a a Childe, there is no difference betwene him and a seruaunt, though he be lorde of all & goodes: but he is vnder tuters and gouerners, vntyll the tyme appoynted of the father. Euen so we also, wha we were children, were in bondage vnder the outwarde tradicions. But whan the tyme was fulfylled, God sent his sonne, borne of a woma, ¶¶ and put vnder the lawe, to redeme them which were vnder the lawe, that we mighte receaue v childshippe. *** For so moch the as ye are children, God hath sent the sprete of his sonne in to oure hertes, which cryeth: Abba, deare father. Wherfore now, thou art not a seruaunt, but a sonne. Yf thou be a sonne, then art thou the heyre of God thorow Christ. Notwithstondinge whan ye knewe not God, ye dyd seruyce vnto them, which by nature are no Goddes. But now seynge ye knowe God (yee rather are knowne off God) how is it <sup>111</sup> that ye turne you backe agayne vnto the weake and beggerly tradicions, wher vnto ye desyre agayne a fresh to be in bondage?

Ye observe dayes and monethes, and tymes B and yeares. I am in feare of you, lest I haue bestowed laboure on you in vayne. Brethre I beseke you, be ye as I am, for I am as ye are. Ye haue not hurte me at all. For ye knowe how that in weaknes after § flesh I preached & Gospell vnto you at the first: and my tentacion which I suffred after the flesh, ye despysed not, nether abhorred, but receaued me as an angell of God, yee euen as Christ Iesus. How happy were ye then? For I beare you recorde, that yf it had bene possible, ye had plucked out youre awne eyes, and geue them vnto me. Am I therfore become youre enemy, because I tell you 🕏 trueth?

They are gelous ouer you amysse. Yee they wolde make you to fall backe, that ye might be feruët to thë warde. It is good to be feruent, so ý it be allwaye in a good thinge, and not onely whan I am present with you. My litle children (of whom I trauayle in byrth agayne, vntyll Christ be fashioned in you) I wolde I were with you now, and

• Deut. 21. d. † Heb. 9. c. † Iudith. 5. b. § Act. 7. a. || Rom. 4. c. 7. b. 8. a. ¶ Act. 7. e. •• Deut. 5. a. †† Rom. 3. b. ‡† Ioh. 1. a. coulde chauge my voyce, for I stode ī doute of you.

Tell me ye that wylbe vnder the lawe, haue ye not herde the lawe? For it is wrytten, that Abraham had two sonnes * the one by a bonde mayde, † the other by a fre woman. As for him that was of the bode mayde, he was borne after § flesh: but he which was of the fre woman, was borne by promes. These wordes betoken somwhat. For these wemen are the two Testamentes: The one from the mount Sina, that gendreth vnto bondage, which is Agar. For Agar is called in Arabia § mount Sina, and reacheth vnto Ierusalem which now is, and is in bondage with hir children.

* But Ierusalem that is aboue, is the fre woman, which is the mother of vs all. For it is wryttē: § Reioyse thou baren, that bearest no childrē: breake forth and crye thou ý trauaylest not, for the desolate hath many mo childrē, then she which hath an huszbande. As for vs (brethren) we are the children of Isaac acordinge to the promes.

But like as at that tyme, he that was borne after the flesh, persecuted him  $\mathring{y}$  was borne after the sprete, euen so is it now also. But what sayeth the scripture? "Put awaye the bonde mayden and hir sonne: for the sonne of  $\mathring{y}$  bondmayde shal not be heyre with  $\mathring{y}$  sonne of the fre woman. So now brethren, we are not children of the bonde mayde, but of the fre woman.

The b. Chapter.

STONDE fast therfore in the libertye wherwith Christ hath made vs fre, and be not wrapped agayne in the yocke off bondage. Beholde, I Paul saye vnto you: Yf ye be circumcysed, Christ profiteth you nothinge at all. I testifye agayne vnto euery man which is circumcysed, that he is bounde to kepe the whole lawe. Ye are gone quyte from Christ, as many off you as wylbe made righteous by the lawe, and are fallen from grace. But we wayte in the sprete off hope, to be made righteous by faith. For in Christ Iesu nether is circumcision eny thinge worth ner vncircumcision, but faith which ** by loue is mightie in operacion. Ye ranne Brethren yf I yet preach circumcision, why do I suffre persecucion? then had the slaunder off the crosse ceassed. Wolde God they were roted out fro amoge you, which trouble you. But brethre, ye are called vnto liberty, onely let not youre libertie be an occasion vnto the flesh, but by loue serue one another. For all the lawe is fulfylled in one worde, namely in this:‡‡ loue thy neghboure as thy selfe. But yf ye byte and deuoure one another, take hede, that ye be not consumed one of another.

I saye: Walke in the sprete, and so shal ye  $\mathbb{C}$ not fulfill the 55 lustes off the fleszhe. For the flesh lusteth agaynst the sprete, and the sprete agaynst the flesh. These are contrary one to the other, so that ye can not do that which ye wolde: But and yf ye be led of the sprete, then are ye not vnder the lawe. III The dedes of y flesh are manifest, which are these: Aduoutrye, whordome, vnclenes, wantanes, Idolatrye, witchcraft, hatred, variaunce, zele, wrath, stryfe, sedicion, sectes, envyenge, murthur, dronkennes, glotony, and soch like : of the which I tell you before, as I haue tolde you in tyme past, ¶¶ that they which commytte soch, shal not inheret the kyngdome of God.\*\*\* But the frute of the sprete, is loue, ioye, peace, longe sufferinge, getlenes, goodnesse, faithfulnes, mekenesse, teperaunce, +++ Agaynst soch is not v lawe : +++ But they that are Christes, haue crucified their flesh, with the lustes and desyres.

Act. 15. b. to the course off this worlde, and after the prynce that ruleth in the ayre namely, after  $\hat{y}$ sprete, which now worketh in the children of vnbeleue,\*\* amonge whom we also had oure conuersacion in tyme past in the lustes of oure flesh, and dyd the wyll of the flesh and of the mynde, and were naturally the children of wrath, euen as well as other.

But God which is riche in mercy thorow his greate loue wherwith he loued vs euē whā we were deed in synnes, hath quyckened vs in Christ ("for by grace are ye saued) and hath raysed vs vp with him, and set vs with him in heauēly thinges thorow Christ Iesus,  $\mathring{y}$  in tymes to come he mighte shewe the exceadinge riches of his grace, in kyndnesse to vs warde in Christ Iesu. For by grace are ye saued thorow faith, and that not of youre selues, For it is  $\mathring{y}$  gifte of God, not of workes, lest eny mā shulde boast him selfe. For we are 13 his workmanshippe, created in Christ Iesu <sup>14</sup> vnto good workes, to  $\mathring{y}$  which God ordeyned vs before, that we shulde walke in them.

Wherfore remēbre, that ye (which afore tyme were Gentyles after the flesh, and were called vncircumcision, of thē that are called $$ circumcision after the flesh, which circumcision is made with the hande) that ye at the same tyme were without Christ, and reputed aleauntes from the comen welth of Israel, and were straungers from the Testamentes of promes, therfore had ye no hope, and were without God in this worlde. But now ye that be in Christ Iesu, and afore tyme were farre of, are now made nye by the bloude of Christ.

For he is oure III peace, which of both hath made one, and hath broken downe the wall, that was a stoppe betwene vs, and hath also thorow his flesh put awaye the cause off hatred (namely the lawe of the commaundemētes contayned in the lawe wrytten) that of twayne he mighte create one new man in him selfe, and make peace, and to reconcyle both vnto God in one body thorow the crosse, and so he slewe  $\mathring{V}$  hatred thorow his owne selfe, and came  $\mathring{V}$  and preached peace in the Gospell, vnto you which were afarre of, and to the that were nye. For thorow him we both haue intraunce in one sprete vnto the father.

of the Apostle S. Paul to the Philippians.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

He exhorteth them to increace in loue, in knowlege and experience of godly thinges: maketh mencion of his presonment at Rome, is glad to heare Christ preached, is content ether to dye or lyue, and prayeth them to lede a godly conuersacion, to be of one mynde, and to feare no persecucion.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth them to vnite and brotherly loue, and to bewarre of strife and vayne glory: And for a sure ensample he layeth Christ before them.

Chap. III.

He warneth the to bewarre of false teachers, whom he calleth dogges and enemies of Christ, and reproueth mas owne righteousnesse.

Chap. IIII.

He saluteth certayne of them, exhorteth them to be of honest conuersacion, and thanketh them because of the prouysion, that they made for him beynge in preson.

A PAUL an Apostle of Iesu Christ by the will of God, and brother Timotheus. To ŷ sayntes which are at Colossa and brethren that beleue in Christ.

Grace be with you and peace from God oure father g fro the LORDE lesus Christ.

*We geue thankes vnto God and the father of oure LORDE Iesus Christ, prayenge allwayes for you (sence we herde of youre faith in Christ Iesu, and of youre loue to all sayntes) for y hopes sake which is layed vp in stoare for you in heauen: of the which ye haue herde before by the worde of trueth in the Gospell, which is come vnto you, euē as it is in to all the worlde: and is frutefull, as it is in you, sence y daye y ye herde and knewe the grace of God in y trueth, as ye learned of 'Epaphras oure deare felowe seruaunt, which is a faithfull mynister of Christ for you, which also declared vnto vs youre loue in the sprete.

† For this cause we also, sence the daye  $\dot{\mathbf{y}}$ we herde of it, ceasse not to praye for you,  $\mathfrak{g}$ desyre that ye mighte be fulfylled with the knowlege of his will, in all wyszdome and spirituall vnderstondinge, that ye mighte walke worthy off the LORDE, to please him in all thinges, §and to be frutefull in all good workes, and growe in the knowlege of God:  $\mathfrak{g}$  to be strengthed with all power acordinge to the mighte of his glory, to all pacience and longsufferynge with ioyfulnes, and gene thankes vnto the father, which hath made vs mete for the enheritaunce of sayntes in lighte.

Which hath delyuered vs fro the power of darknesse, a translated vs in to the kyngdome of his deare sonne (#in whom we haue redempcion thorow his bloude, namely, the forgeuenes of synnes.) ¶ Which is the ymage of the inuisyble God, first begotte before all creatures. ¶ For by him were all thinges created, that are in heauen and earth, thinges vysible and thinges inuysible, whether they be maiesties or lordshippes, ether rules or powers: All thinges are created by him and in him, and he is before all thinges, and in him all thinges haue their beynge.

Che iiij. Chapter.

FURTHERMORE we beseke you bre-thren and exhorte you in the LORDE A | Iesus, that ye increace more and more, euen as ye haue receaued of vs how ye oughte For ye knowe to walke and to please God. what commaundementes we gaue you by oure LORDE Iesus Christ. For this is the * will of God, euen youre sanctifienge, that ye shulde absteyne from whordome, ty euery one of you shulde knowe how to kepe his vessell in holynes and honoure, g not in the lust of concupiscence, ‡as the Heythen which knowe not God. And that no man go to farre, ner defraude his brother in bargayninge. For the LORDE is the auenger of all soch thinges, as we have sayde a testified vnto you afore tyme. For God hath not called vs to vnclennesse, but vnto holynes. $He therfore that despyseth, despyseth not man, but God, which hath geuen his holy sprete in to you.

But as touchinge brotherly loue, ye nede not that I wryte vnto you, ¶ for ye youre selues are taught of God to loue one another: yee and that thinge ye do vnto all the brethrē, which are thorow out all Macedonia. But we beseke you brethren that ye increace yet more and more, and that ye study to be quyete, and to medle with youre awne busynesse, ** and to worke with youre awne hādes, as we commaunded you, that ye maye walke honestly towarde thē that are without, and that nothinge be lackynge vnto you.

We wolde not brethren that ye shulde be ignoraunt concernynge them which are fallen a slepe, that ye sorowe not as other do which haue no hope. For yf we beleue that Iesus dyed and rose agayne, euen so the also which slepe by Iesus, shal God brynge with him. For this we saye vnto you in the worde of the LORDE, "t that we which lyue and are remaynynge in the comynge of the LORDE, shal not come yer they which slepe. # For the LORDE himselfe shal come downe fro heauen with a shoute and voyce of § Archangell and with the trompe of God, and the deed in Christ shal aryse first: then shal we

BUT of ŷ tymes and seasons (brethrē) it ℜ is no nede to wryte vnto you. For ye youre selues knowe perfectly, that §§ the daye of the LORDE shal come euen as a thefe in the nighte. For whan they shal saye: Tush, It is peace, there is no daunger, III then shall soden destruccion come vpō thē, euen as the payne of a woman trauaylinge with childe, and they shal not escape. But ye brethren are not in darknes, that that daye shulde come on you as a thefe. Ye are alltogether children of lighte, and children of the daye. We are not of the night, nether of darknesse.

If Therfore let vs not slepe as do other, but let vs watch, and be sober. For they that slepe, slepe in the nighte: and they that be dronken, are dronken in the nighte. But let vs which are of the daye, be sober, armed with the brestplate of faith and loue, and with ŷ helmet of hope to saluacion.

For God hath not appoynted vs vnto wrath, but to optayne saluacion by § meanes of oure LORDE Iesu Christ, which dyed for vs: that whether we wake or slepe, we shulde lyue together with him. Wherfore comforte youre selues together, and edifye one another, euen as ye do.

We beseke you brethren, *** that ye knowe them which laboure amonge you, and haue the ouersighte of you in the LORDE, and geue you exhortacion, that ye haue the the more in loue for their workes sake, and be at peace with them. We desyre you brethre, warne them that are vnruly, coforte the feble mynded, forbeare the weake, be pacient towarde all men. +++ Se that none recompence euell for euell vnto eny man: but euer folowe that which is good, both amoge youre selues and to all men.

discrete, manerly, harberous, \* apte to teach: Not geuen to moch wyne, no fighter, not geuen to filthy lucre: but gentle, abhorrynge stryfe, abhorrynge couetousnes:  $\mathfrak{g}$  one that ruleth his awne house honestly, hauynge obedient children with all honestye. (But yf a man can not rule his owne house, how shal he care for the congregacion of God?) He maye not be a yōge scolar, lest he be puft vp, and fall in to the iudgment of  $\mathfrak{g}$  euell speaker. He must also haue a good reporte of them which are without, lest he fall in to the rebuke and snare of the euell speaker.

Likewyse must the  $\dagger$  mynisters be honest, not double tonged, not geuen to moch wyne, nether vnto fylthie lucre, but hauynge the mystery of faith in pure conscience. And let them first be proued, and then let them mynister, yf they be blamelesse.

Euen so must their wyues be honest, not euell speakers, but sober and faithfull in all thinges. Let the mynisters be, euery one the huszbāde of one wyfe, and soch as rule their children well, and their owne housholdes. <sup>1</sup> For they that mynister well, get them selues a good degree and greate libertye in the faith which is in Christ Iesu.

These thinges wryte I vnto the, trustinge shortly to come vnto the: but yf I tary loge, that then thou mayest yet haue knowlege, how thou oughtest to behaue thy selfe in Gods house, which is the congregacion of the lyuynge God, the piler and grounde of trueth: and without naye, greate is that mystery of godlynes. § God was shewed in the flesh: was iustified in the sprete: I was sene of angels: was preached vnto the Heythen: was receaued vp in glory.

Yf thou shalt put the brethren in remembraunce of these thinges, thou shalt be a good mynister of Iesu Christ, $ which hast bene norished vp in the wordes of faith and of good doctryne, which thou hast folowed hither to.

MAs for vngoostly and olde wyuesh fables, 38 cast them awaye, but exercise thy selfe vnto For bodely exercyse profyteth godlynes. litle, but godlynes is profytable vnto all thinges, as a thinge which hath promyses of the life that is now, and of the life for to come. This is a sure sayenge, g of all partes worthy to be receased. For therfore we laboure and suffre rebuke, because we hope in the lyuynge God, which is the Sauioure of all men, but specially of those that beleue. Soch thinges commaunde thou and teach. ¶¶ Let no man despyse thy youth, *** but be thou vnto them that beleue, an ensample, in worde, in couersacion, in loue, in 🖞 sprete, in faith, in purenesse.

Let no wedowe be chosen vnder thre score B yeare olde, and soch one as was y wife of one man, and well reported of in good workes, yf she haue brought vp children well, yf she haue bene tharberous, yf she haue wasshed the sayntes fete, yf she haue mynistred vnto the which were in aduersite, yf she were continually geuen to all maner of good workes. But y yonger wedowes refuse. For whan they have begonne to waxe wanton agaynst Christ, then wil they mary, hauynge their damnacion, because they haue broke y first faith. Besydes this they are ydell, and lerne to runne aboute fro house to house. SNot onely are they ydell, but also tryflinge a busybodies, speakynge thinges which are not comly.

Yf eny man or woman that beleueth haue wedowes, let them make prouysion for thē, and let not the congregacion be charged: that they which are righte wedowes, maye haue ynough.

The Elders that rule well, are worthy of double honoure, most specially they which laboure in the worde  $\mathfrak{g}$  in teachinge. ## The summe of this Epistle.

Chap. I.

He sheweth that thorow the abundaunt mercy of God we are begotten agayne to a lyuely hope: and how faith must be tried: how the saluacion in Christ is no newes, but a thinge prophecied of olde. He exhorteth them to a godly conuersacion, for so moch as they are now borne a new by the worde of God.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth men to laye asyde all vyce, sheweth that Christ is the foundacion wher vpon they be buylt, prayeth them to absteyne frō fleshly lustes, and to obeye worldly rulers. How seruauntes shulde behaue them selues towarde their masters. He exhorteth to suffre after the ensample of Christ.

Chap. III.

How wyues ought to ordre them selues towarde their huszbandes and in their apparell. The dutye of me towarde their wyues. He exorteth all men to vnite and loue, and paciently to suffre trouble. Of true baptyme.

Chap. IIII.

He exhorteth men to ceasse from synne, to spende no more tyme in vyce, to be sober and apte to prayer, to loue ech other, to be pacient in trouble, and to bewarre that no man suffre as an euell doer, but as a Cristen man, and not to be ashamed.

Chap. V.

A speciall exhortacion for all bisshoppes or prestes to fede the flocke of Christ, and what their dutie is, and what rewarde they shal haue yf they be diligët. He exhorteth yonge personnes to submytt the selues to the elder, euery one to loue another, to be sober, G to watch, that they maye resist the enemye.

PETER an Apostle of Iesu Christ, to the that dwell here and there as straungers thorow out Pontus, Galacia, Capadocia, Asia and Bithinia, electe acordinge to the foreknowlege of God the father thorow sanctifienge of the sprete, vnto obedience and * sprenklynge of the bloude of Iesus Christ.

Grace and peace be multiplied with you. + Blessed be God and the father of oure LORDE Issus Christ, which acording to his greate mercy hath begotten vs agayne vnto a lyuely hope ‡ by the resurreccion of Iesus Christ from the deed, to an vncorruptible and vndefyled inheritaunce, which neuer shal fade awaye, but is reserved in heaven for you that are kepte by the power of God thorow faith to saluacion, which is prepared all ready to be shewed in the last tyme: in the which ye shal reioyse, though now for a litle season (vff nede requyre) ye are in heuynes thorow manyfolde B temptacions: that youre faith once tryed (beynge moch more precious then the corruptible golde that is tryed thorow the fyre) might be founde vnto laude, glory and honoure at the appearynge of Iesus Christ: whom ye haue not sene, and yet loue him: § in whom now ye beleue, though ye se him not. Euen so shal ye reioyce also with vnoutspeakable and glorious ioye, receauynge the ende of youre faith, euen the saluacion of youre soules.

Of which saluacion the prophetes haue enquyred and searched, which prophecied off the grace that shulde come vpon you: searchinge whan or at what tyme the sprete off Christ that was in them, shulde signifye, which (sprete) testified before the passions that shulde come vnto Christ, and the glory that shulde folowe after. Iesus, Amen.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. 1.

For so moch as the power of God hath geuen them all thinges pertayninge vnto life, he exhorteth the to flye the corrupcion of worldly lust, to make their callynge sure with good workes and frutes of faith. He maketh mencion of his owne death, declaringe the LORDE lesus to be the true sonne of God, as he himself hath sene vpon the mount.

Chap. II.

He prophecieth of false teachers, and sheweth their punyshment.

Chap. III.

He exhorteth men to bewarre of soch as wolde make thē beleue, that the daye of the LORDE were slacke in commynge: prayeth them to lede a godly life, and to loke verely for the commynge of the LORDE, whose loge tarienge is saluacion, and because he wolde haue no man lost, but wolde receaue all mē to repentaunce.

The ij. Chapter.

M Y litle children, these thinges wryte I vnto vol. that we shall Ø I and yf eny man synne, we haue an saduocate with the father, euen lesus Christ which is righteous: || and he it is that optayneth grace for oure synnes: not for oure synnes onely, but also for the synnes of all the worlde. And hereby are we sure that we knowe him, yf we kepe his comaundemetes. ¶ He that sayeth: I knowe him, and kepeth not his comaundemetes, is a lyar, and the trueth is not in him, But who so kepeth his worde, in him is the loue of God perfecte in dede. ** Hereby knowe we, that we are in him. He y sayeth he abydeth in him, oughte to walke euen as he walked.

Brethren, I wryte no new commaundement vnto you, but that olde commaundement, which ye have herde from the begynnynge. The olde comaundement is the worde, which ye have herde from the begynnynge. Agayne, ++a new comaundemet wryte I vnto you, a thinge that is true in him a also in you: for the darknesse is past, and the true lighte now shyneth.

He that sayeth he is in lighte, and hateth his brother, is yet in darknesse. He y loueth his brother, abydeth in the lighte, and there is none occasion of euell in him. But he y hateth his brother, is in darknes, and walketh in darknes, and can not tell whither he goeth, for  $\psi$  darknes hath blynded his eyes.

Yf eny man loue the worlde, the loue of the father is not in him: for all that is in the worlde (namely the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pryde of life) is not of the father, but of the worlde. And the sworlde passeth awaye and the lust therof. But he that fulfylleth the wyll of God, abydeth for euer.

appeare, we maye be bolde,  $\mathfrak{q}$  not be made ashamed of him at his commynge. Yf ye knowe  $\dot{\mathfrak{y}}$  he is righteous, knowe also that he which doth righteousnes, is borne of him.

The iij. Chapter.

DEHOLDE what loue the father hath A D shewed on vs, y we shulde be called the childre of God. Therfore y worlde knoweth you not, because it knoweth not him. Dearly beloued, we are now v * childrē of God, and yet hath it not appeared what we shalbe. + But we knowe y when he shal appeare, we shal be like him : for we shal se him as he is. And every man y hath this hope in him, pourgeth him selfe, euen as he is pure. Who so euer comytteth synne, comytteth vnrighteousnes also, and synne is vnrighteousnes. # And ye knowe that he appeared to take awaye oure synnes: and in him is no synne. Who so euer abydeth in him, synneth not: who soeuer synneth, hath not sene him nether knowne him.

Babes, let noman disceaue you. He that doeth righteousnes, is righteous, euen as he is righteous. He that commytteth synne, is of the deuell: § for the deuell synneth sence ŷ begynnynge. For this purpose appeared the sonne of God, to lowse the workes of the deuell. If Who so euer is borne of God, synneth not: for his ¶ sede remayneth in him, q he cā not synne, because he is borne of God. ** By this are the children of God knowne q the children of the deuell. Who so euer doeth not righteousnes, is not of God, nether he that loueth not his brother.

For this is the tydinges which ye haue herde from the begynnynge, that ye shulde loue one another, ++ not as Cain, which was of the wicked, and slewe his brother. And wherfore slewe he him? euen because his awne workes were euell, and his brothers righteous. ++ Maruayle not (my brethren) though the worlde hate you. We knowe ŷ we are trāslated from death vnto life, because we loue the brethren. He that loueth not his brother, abydeth in death. $§ Who soeuer hateth his brother, is a mansleyer. And ye knowe that a mansleyer hath not eternall life abydinge in him.

Hereby haue we perceaued loue, that he

But he t hath this worldes good, a seyth his brother haue nede, and shutteth vp his hert fro him, how dwelleth the loue of God in him? My litle children, III let vs not loue with worde nether with tonge, but with y dede, and with the trueth. Hereby knowe we, that we are of the verite, and can quyete oure hertes before him. But yf oure hert condemne vs, God is greater the oure hert, and knoweth all thinges. Dearly beloued, yf oure hert condemne vs not, then have we a fre boldnes to God warde. ¶¶ And what so euer we axe, we shal receaue it: because we kepe his comaundemetes, and do those thinges, which are pleasaunt in his sighte.

And this is his comaundement, that we beleue on  $\S$  name of his sonne Iesus Christ, and loue one another, \*\*\*\* as he gaue commaundement. And he that kepeth his commaundementes, dwelleth in him, and he in him. And hereby knowe we that he abydeth in vs, euen by the sprete which he hath geuen vs.

The iiij. Chapter.

EARLY beloued, beleue not ye euery a sprete, ttt but proue the spretes, whether they be of God. For many false prophetes are gone out in to the worlde. Hereby shal ye knowe the sprete of God: Euery sprete which confesseth, that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God: And euery sprete which confesseth not that Iesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not off God. And this is that sprete of Antechrist, off whom ye haue herde, how that he shal come, and euen now allready is he in the worlde. Litle children, ye are off God, and haue ouercome them: for greater is he that is in you, then he that is in the worlde. They are off the worlde, therfore speake they off the worlde, and the worlde herkeneth vnto them. We are of God, ### and he that knoweth God, herkeneth vnto vs: he that is not of God, heareth vs not. Hereby knowe we the sprete of trueth, and v sprete of erroure.

Dearly beloued, let vs loue one another, B for loue commeth of God. And euery one  $\frac{1}{5}$ loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth God. He that loueth not, knoweth not God: for Herein is loue, not that we loued God, but that he loued vs. tand sent his sonne to make agremet for oure synnes.

Dearly beloued, yf God so loued vs, we oughte also to loue one another. $ No man hath sence God at eny tyme. Yf we loue one another, God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfecte in vs. Hereby knowe we that we dwell in him, and he in vs, because he hath geuen vs of his sprete. And we haue sene, a testifye that the father sent the sonne to be the Saujoure of the worlde. $ Whosoeuer now confesseth v Iesus is the sonne of God in him dwelleth God, and he in God: and we have knowne and beleued the loue that God hath to vs.

God is loue, and he that dwelleth in loue C dwelleth in God, and God in him. Here in is the loue perfecte with vs, that we shulde haue a fre boldnesse in the daye of iudgment : for as he is, euc so are we in this worlde. Feare is not in loue, but perfecte loue casteth out feare: for feare hath paynefulnes. He that feareth, is not perfecte in loue.

Let vs loue him, for he loued vs first. Yf eny man saye: I loue God, g yet hateth his brother, he is a lyar. For he that loueth not his brother whom he seyth, how can he loue God, whom he seyth not? And this comaundement haue we of him, I that he which loueth God, shulde loue his brother also.

The b. Chapter.

W HO so euer beleueth that Iesus is Christ,** is borne of God. And who A soeuer loueth him that begat, loueth him also which was begotten of him. By this we knowe that we loue Gods children, whan we loue God, and kepe his commaundementes. For this is the loue of God, that we kepe his commaundementes, tt and his commaundemētes are not greuous. For all that is borne of God, ouer commeth the worlde : and this is the victory that ouercommeth the worlde, euē oure faith. Who is it y ouercommeth the worlde, but he which beleueth that Iesus is the sonne of God?

And there are thre which beare recorde in earth: the sprete, water and bloude, and these thre are one.

Yf we receaue the witnesse of men, the B witnesse of God is greater: for this is the wytnesse of God, which he testifyed of his sonne. % He that beleueth on y sonne of God, hath the wytnes in him selfe. ## The Gyistle of the Apostle S. Paul to the Mebrues.

The summe of this epistle.

Chap. I.

How God dealt louyngly with the of the olde tyme in sendynge them his prophetes, but much more mercy hath he shewed vs in that he sent vs his owne sonne. Of the most excellent glory of Iesus Christ, which in all thinges is like to his father.

Chap. II.

He exhorteth vs to be obedient vnto the new lawe which Christ hath geuen vs and not to be offended at the infirmite and lowe degre of Christ:  $\mathfrak{g}$  why? it was necessary that for oure sakes he shulde take soch an humble state vpon him, that he might be like vnto his brethren.

Chap. III.

He requyreth vs to be obedient vnto the worde of Christ, which is more worthy then Moses. The punyshment of soch as wyll nedes harden their hertes.

Chap. IIII.

The Sabbath or rest of the Christen. Punyshment of vnbeleuers. The nature of the worde of God.

Chap. V.

Christ is ource hype prest, the seate of grace, and more excellent then the hype prestes of the olde lawe.

Chap. VI.

He goeth forth with the thige that he beganne in the latter ende of the fyfft chapter, and exhorteth them not to faynt, but to be stedfast and pacient: for so moch as God is sure in his promesse.

Chap. VII.

He copareth the presthode of Christ vnto Melchisedech, but to be farre more excellent.

Chap. VIII.

The office of Christ is more worthy then the prestes office of the olde lawe, which was vnperfecte, and therfore abrogate.

Chap. IX.

The profit and worthynesse of the olde Testament, and how farre the new excelleth it.

Chap. X.

The olde lawe had no power to clese awaye synne, but Christ dyd it with offerynge vp his body once for all. An exhortacion to receaue this goodnesse of God thakfully with pacience and stedfast faith.

Chap. XI.

What faith is, and a commedacion of the same. The stedfast beleue of the fathers in olde tyme.

Chap. XII.

An exhortacion to be pacient and stedfast in trouble and aduersite, vpon hope of euerlastinge rewarde. A commedacion of the new Testament aboue the olde.

Chap. XIII.

He exhorteth vs vnto loue, to hospitalite, to thinke vpon soch as be in aduersite, to manteyne wedlocke, to avoyde cuvetousnesse, to make moch of the that preach Gods worde, to bewarre of straunge lernynge, to be content to suffre rebuke with Christ, to be thankfull vnto God, and obedient vnto oure heades.

G OD in tyme past dyuersly a many wayes, spake vnto ∮ fathers by prophetes, but in these last dayes he hath spoken vnto vs by his sonne, * whom he hath made heyre of all thinges, by whom also he made the worlde. tWhich (sonne) beynge the brightnes of his glory, a the very ymage of his substaunce, bearinge vp all thinges with the worde of his power, ‡ hath in his owne personne pourged oure synnes, and is set on the righte hande of the maiestie on hye: beynge euē as moch more excellēt thē ŷ angels, as he hath optayned a more excellēt § name then they.

B For vnto which of the angels sayde he at eny time: I Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the? And agayne: ¶ I will be his father, a he shalbe my sonne: And agayne, wha he bryngeth in the fyrst begotte sonne in to the worlde, he sayeth : ** And all the angels of God shal worshippe him. "And of the angels he sayeth: He maketh his angels spretes, a his mynisters flames of fyre. But vnto y sonne he sayeth: #God, thy seate endureth for euer a euer: the cepter of thy kyngdome is a right cepter. Thou hast loued righteousnes, a hated iniquyte : wherfore God (which is thy God) hath anoynted the with the oyle of gladnesse aboue thy felowes. ‡‡And thou LORDE in § begynnynge hast laved the foundacion of the earth, and y heaues are the workes of thy handes, 55 they shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shal waxe olde as doth a garmet, and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaunged. But thou art y same, and thy yeares shal not fayle. Vnto which of the angels sayde he at eny tyme: III Syt thou on my righte hade, tyll I make thyne enemies thy fote stole? Are they not all mynistrynge spretes, sent to mynister for their sakes, which shalbe heyres of saluacion?

- SEYNGE then that we have a greate hye prest, euē Iesus $ sonne of God, which is entred in to heaven, let vs holde oure profession. For we have not an hye prest which cā not have cōpassion on oure infirmities, but was in all poyntes tēpted, like as we are, but * without synne. Let vs therfore go boldely vnto the + seate of grace that we maye receaue inercy, and fynde grace to helpe in the tyme of nede.
- For euery hye prest that is taken frö amöge men, is ordeyned for men in thinges pertayninge to God, ‡ to offer giftes and sacrifices for synne: which can haue copassion on the ignoraunt, and on them that are out of the waye, for so moch as he himselfe also is compased aboute with infirmyte. Therfore is he bounde to offer for synnes, as well for him selfe as for ŷ people. And nomā taketh ŷ honoure vnto himselfe, but he that is called of God, § as was Aaron.
- Euen so Christ glorified not himselfe to C be made hye prest, but he y sayde vnto him: |Thou art my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the. As he sayeth also in another place: ¶ Thou art a prest for euer after v order of Melchisedech. ** And in y dayes of his fleshe, he offred vp prayers a supplications, with ströge cryenge teares vnto him y was able to saue him fro death : a was herde also, because he had God in honoure. †† And though he was Gods sonne, yet lerned he obedience, by those thinges which he suffred. And he beynge made perfecte, became the cause of euerlastinge saluacio, vnto all the y obeye him, and is called of God an hye prest after the order of Melchisedech. Wherof we have many thinges to saye, which are harde to be vttered, because ye are dull of hearynge. ‡‡ For where as concernynge the tyme ye ought to be teachers, yet have ye nede agayne, y we teach you the first preceptes of the worde of God: and are become soch as haue nede of mylke, and not stronge meate. For euery one that is fed yet with mylke, is vnexperte in the worde of righteousnes, for he is but a babe. But stronge meate belongeth vnto them y are perfecte, which

The bi. Chapter

THERFORE let vs leaue the doctryne A pertaynynge to the begynnynge of a Christen life, and let vs go vnto perfeccion: and now nomore laye y foundacion of repetaunce from deed workes, and of faith towarde God, of baptyme, of doctryne, of layenge on of hades, of resurreccion of the deed, g of eternall iudgment. And so wil we do §§ yf God permytte. III For it is not possible, that they which were once lighted, and haue taisted of the heauely gyfte, and are become partakers of the holy goost,  $\mathfrak{g}$   $\P$  haue taisted of  $\mathfrak{F}$ good worde of God, and of the power of the worlde to come, yf they fall awaye (and concernynge them selues crucifye the sonne of God afreszhe, and make a mocke off him) that they shulde be renued agayne vnto repentaunce.

For the earth, that drynketh in the rayne, 33 which commeth oft vpon it, and bringeth forth herbes mete for them that dresse it, receaueth blessynge of God: But y grounde which beareth thornes and thistles, is nothinge worth, and nye vnto cursynge: whose ende is to be brent. Neuertheles (ye dearly beloued) we trust to se better of you, and y saluacio is nyer, though we thus speake. *** For God is not vnrighteous, that he shulde forget youre worke and laboure of loue, which ye shewed in his name, whan ye mynistred vnto the sayntes, and yet mynister. # The bij. Chapter.

A THIS Melchisedech * kynge of Salem (which beynge prest of the most hye God, met Abraham as he returned agayne from the slaughter of the kynges, g blessed him, vnto whom Abraham also gaue tithes of all the goodes) first is by interpretacion kynge of righteousnes: after that is he kynge of Salem also (that is to saye, kynge of peace) without father, without mother, without kynne, and hath nether begynnynge of dayes, ner ende of life: but is likened vnto the sonne of God, and contynueth a prest for euer.

But cosider how greate a man this was, to whom the Patriarke Abraham gaue tithes of the spoyles. + And verely the children of Leui, whan they receaue the presthode, haue a commaundement acordynge to the lawe, to take the tithes of the people, that is to saye, of their brethrē, though they also came out of the loynes of Abraham.

But he whose kynred is not counted amöge them, receaued tithes of Abraham and blessed him that had the promes. Now is it so without all naysayenge, that the lesse receaueth blessynge of § better. And here men that dyc, receaue tithes. But there he receaueth tithes, of whom it is witnessed that he lyueth. And to saye the trueth, Leui himselfe also which receaueth tithes, payed tithes in Abraham: for he was yet in the loynes of his father Abraham, whan Melchisedech met him.

Yf now therfore perfeccion came by the presthode of the Leuites (for vnder the same (presthode) the people receaued the lawe) what neded it then furthurmore, that another prest shulde ryse after the order of Melchisedech, and not after the order of Aaron?

• Gen. 14. a. + Num. 18. d. ‡ Mala. 2. b. § Mat. 1. a. • Psal. 109. a. ∥ 1 Ioh. 2. a. 1 Tim. 2. a. ‡For yf the presthode be traslated, the of necessite must the lawe be translated also. For he of whom these thinges are spoken is of another trybe, of the which neuer man serued at the altare.

For it is euidet, S that oure LORDE spronge of the trybe of Iuda, to the which trybe Moses spake nothinge cocernynge presthode, And it is yet a more euident thinge, yf after the symilitude of Melchisedech there arvse another prest, which is not made after y lawe of the carnall commaundement, but after the power of the endlesse life ("For he testifieth : Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech) then the commaundement that wente before, is disanulled, because of his weaknesse, and vnprofitablenes. For the lawe made nothinge perfecte, but was an introduccion of a better hope, by & which hope we drawe nye vnto God. And for this cause is it a better hope, y it was not pro-mysed without an ooth. Those prestes were made without an ooth, but this prest with an ooth, by him that sayde vnto him: The LORDE sware, and wyl not repente: Thou art a prest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. Thus is Iesus become a stabliszher of so moch a better Testamēte.

And amonge them many were made prestes, because they were not suffred to endure by the reason of death. But this man, because that he endureth euer, hath an euerlastinge presthode. Wherfore he is able also euer to saue them, that come vnto God by him: g lyueth euer, || to make intercession for vs.

For it became vs to haue soch an hye prest as is holy, innocent, vndefyled, separate from synners, aud made hyer then heauen: which nedeth not daylie (Tas yonder hye prestes) to offre vp sacrifice first for his awne synnes, and then for the peoples synnes. For that dyd he once for all, whan he offered vp him selfe. ** For the lawe maketh men prestes which haue infirmitie: but the worde of the ooth, that came sence the lawe, maketh the sonne prest, which is perfecte for euermore.

were vnder the first Testament) they which were called mighte receaue the promes of eternall inheritaunce. For where soeuer is a Testament, there must also be the death of him that maketh the testament.

\* For a Testamet taketh auctorite whan men are deed : for it is of no value, as longe as he that made it is alyue. For the which cause that first Testamet also was not ordeyned without bloude. For whan all the commaundementes (acordinge to the lawe) were red of Moses vnto all the people, he toke v bloude of calues and of goates, with water and purple woll and ysope, and sprenkled the boke and all the people, sayinge: This is the bloude of the Testament, which God hath appoynted vnto you. And the Tabernakle and all the vessels of the Gods seruyce sprenkled he with B bloude likewyse. And allmost all thinges are pourged with bloude after the lawe : and without sheddynge of bloude is no remyssion. It is necessary then, that the symilitude of heauenly thinges be purified with soche : but  $\hat{\mathbf{y}}$ heavenly thinges them selues are purified with better sacrifices, then are those.

For Christ is not entred in to the holy places y are made with handes (which are but symilitudes of true thinges) but in to the very heauen, for to apeare now before the face of God for vs: Not to offer himselfe offt tas the hye prest entreth in to the holy place euery yeare with straunge bloude: for the must he often haue suffred sence the worlde beganne. But now in the ende of the worlde hath he appeared once, to put synne to flight, by the offerynge vp of himselfe. And as it is appoynted vnto me v they shal once dye, and then cometh the judgmet: # Eue so Christ was once offred, to take awaye the synnes of many. And voto them that loke for him, shal he appeare agayne without synne vnto saluacion.

science of synnes. Neuertheles in those sacrifices there is made but a remembraunce of synnes euery yeare. || For it is vnpossible v the bloude of oxen and of goates shulde take awaye synnes. Wherfore whan he commeth in to the worlde, he sayeth: ¶ Sacrifice g offerynge thou woldest not haue, but a body hast thou ordeyned me. Burntofferynges and synneofferynges hast thou not alowed. Then savde I: Lo, I come. In the begynnynge of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shulde do thy wyll O God. Aboue whā he had sayde: Sacrifice and offerynge, and burntsacrifices a synofferynges thou woldest not haue, nether hast alowed (which yet are offered after  $\hat{\mathbf{v}}$ lawe). The sayde he: Lo, I come to do thy wil O God: there taketh he awaye the first, to stablyszhe the latter: In the which wyll we are sanctified by the offerynge vp of the body of Iesus Christ once for all.

And every prest is ready daylie mynistringe, and oftymes offereth one maner of offerynges, which can neuer take awaye synnes. But this man whan he had offred for synnes, one sacrifice which is of value for euer, sat him downe on the righte hande of God, and from hence forth tarieth, ** tyll his foes be made his fote stole. For with one offerynge hath he made perfecte for euer, the that are sanctified. # The first Chapter.

A AMES the servaunt of God and of the LORDE Iesus Christ, sendeth gretinge to the xij. trybes which are *scatered here a there. My brethren, counte it exceadynge ioye whē ye fall in to diuers temptacions, for as moche as ye knowe, how y the + tryinge of youre faith bringeth pacience : and let pacience haue her parfect worke, y ye maye be parfecte and sounde, lakinge nothinge.

\* Yf eny of you lacke wyszdome, let him axe of God, which geueth to all men indifferentlie, and casteth no man in the teth: and it shal be geuē him. But let him axe in faith and wauer not. For he that douteth, is lyke the wawes of  $\mathring{y}$  See, tost of the wynde, and caried with violence. Nether let  $\mathring{y}$  man thinke that he shal receaue eny thīge of  $\mathring{y}$  LORDE. A wauerynge mynded mā ys vnstable in all his waies.

B Let the brother of lowe degre reioyce, in  $\dot{y}$  he is exalted: and the rich, in  $\dot{y}$  he is made lowe. For euē as the floure of  $\dot{y}$  grasse shal he vanyshe awaye. The Sonne ryseth with heat and the grasse wydereth,  $\alpha$  his floure falleth awaye, and the beautie of the fassion of it periszheth: euen so shal the ryche man perisshe with his abundaunce.

"Happy is the man that endureth in teptacion, for when he is tryed, he shal receaue the crowne of life, which the LORDE hath promised to them that loue him.

Let no man saye when he is tempted,  $\frac{1}{2}$  he is tempted of God. For God tepteth not vnto euell, nether tepteth he eny man. But euery mā is tepted, drawne awaye,  $\alpha$  entysed of his awne cocupiscece. The whe lust hath conceaued, she bringeth forth synne,  $\alpha$  synne when it is fynished, bringeth forth deeth.

Erre not my deare brethrē. § Euery good gifte, a euery parfait gift, is from aboue, and cometh downe from § father of light, with whom is no variablenes, nether is he chaunged vnto darcknes.  $\parallel$  Of his awne will begat he vs with the worde of life, that we shulde be the fyrst frutes of his creatures.

¶ Wherfore deare brethren, let euery man be swifte to heare, slowe to speake, and slowe to wrath. For the wrath of mā worketh not that which is righteous before God.

The summe of this epistle.

He rebuketh soch as beynge blynded with their owne lustes, resist the trueth, a that we maye knowe them the better, he sayeth they be soch as synne beastly agaynst nature, and despise rulers gc. He exhorteth vs to edifie one another, to praye in the holy goost, to continue in loue, to loke for the comynge of the LORDE, and one to helpe another out of the fyre.

TUDAS the seruaunt of Iesus Christ, the A brother off Iames. To the which are called, and sanctified in God the father, and preserved in Iesu Christ. Mercy vnto you, and peace and loue be multiplied.

Beloued, when I gaue all diligence to wryte vnto you of the commen saluacion: it was nedefull for me to wryte vnto you, to exhorte you, that ye shulde continually laboure in the faith which was once geue vnto the sayntes. * For there are certayne craftely crept in, of which it was wrytten afore tyme vnto soche iudgement. They are vngodly, and turne the grace of oure God vnto wantanes, and denye God the onely LORDE, and oure LORDE Iesus Christ.

My minde is therfore to put you in remēbrauce, for as moche as ye once knowe this, how that $ LORDE (after that he had delivered the people out of Egipt) destroyed them which afterwarde beleued not." +'The angels also which kept not their first estate: but lefte their awne habitacion, he hath reserued in euerlastinge chaynes vnder darcknes vnto the iudgement of the greate daye: euen as *i*Sodom and Gomor, and the cities aboute them (which in lyke maner defiled them selues with fornicacion and folowed straunge fleszhe) are set forth for an ensample, and suffre the vengeaunce of eternall fyre.
